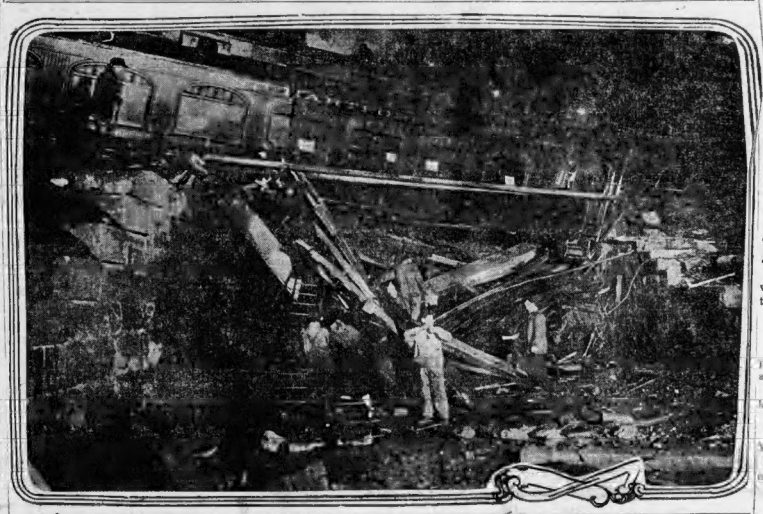
MERCHANTS' LIMITED IS WRECKED

HOW A NEW HAVEN "SHORE LINE" WRECK LOOKS

This picture shows the havoc wrought by the ditching of the "De Luxe" train on the Boston-New York route. It is a photograph of the Westport wreck on October 3 of this year. Seven were killed and twenty injured. On July 11, 1911, the Federal Express of the New Haven line was wrecked at Fairfield Viaduct, Bridgeport, and fourteen were killed and forty-four hurt. Yesterday morning the Portland Express was wrecked only a few miles from Milford, Ct. It was near Green's Farms that the Merchants Limited was wrecked last night.



U. S. TO ACT IN GRAND TRUNK'S MELLEN DEAL

Taft and Wickersham Will Look Into New England Conditions.

MORGAN-SMITHERS TALK

Several important developments came yesterday in the Grand Trunk and New Haven Railroad situation. The most important was the news from Washington that President Taft will personally direct an inquiry into the deal between Mellen and Chamberlin, beginning Tuesday. The President has agreed to meet representatives of the Massachusetts Railroad Commission and the Public Utilities Board of Rhode Island.

Attorney-General Wickersham announced that he would direct the investigation into the alleged violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust law by the Grand Trunk and New Haven roads. At Providence Governor Pothier of Rhode Island conferred with Attorney-General Rice of that State and Chairman Bliss of the Public Utilities Commission relative to appealing to the Pujo Money Trust Committee of Congress.

Tomorrow in Boston the Interstate Commerce Commission resumes its hearing into the service given New England by the New Haven road. The essential facts in the Grand Trunk case will be brought out at the hearing, it was announced.

A dispatch from Springfield last night said business men of western Massachusetts expected an announcement by President Mellen which would "startle the State," as soon as the present public feeling over the Grand Trunk deal had blown over. It was intimated the New Haven might take the Palmer to Providence right of way and build a new line from Springfield to Providence.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Here is the inside story of the Grand Trunk-New Haven "deal" as it is told among the Wall Street crowd and set down for readers of the Sunday AMERICAN.

The gentleman who personally brought the Grand Trunk to terms, was none other than J. Pierpont Morgan.

The gentleman who decided that the Grand Trunk was ready to "come down" was none other than Alfred Waldron Smithers, of Knockholt, Sevenoaks, in Kent, chairman of the Grand Trunk's Board of Directors.

Charles S. Mellen had a big hand in the deal.

President Chamberlin of the Grand Trunk had little to do with the collapse of the Grand Trunk enterprise in New England. It is well known, however, that Chamberlin had been in sympathy with the New England plans of Hays and Pitchugh.

Morgan told Smithers to get out of New England, and Smithers finally agreed to "get," at an interview held in Mr. Morgan's offices. Mellen was at Morgan's elbow. The manner in which they "put the bee on" Smithers, it is said, if the interview could be reported stenographically, would be one of the financial sensations of the century. Strong language was used. Smithers had come prepared to make a contest. Instead, he perspired blood. He went away from the interview more like a lamb than a lion.

Just what was said to Smithers by Morgan is not available in detail at this time; but Wall Street believes that it was largely "financial," and somewhat historical, and that if had to do with things the Britisher would rather not have known, especially in London.

Then Wall Street that Morgan and Mellen together brought forward several "reasons" why Smithers must go no further in his opposition to the rule of Morgan in New England.

Gossip in Wall Street goes on to say that Morgan and Mellen talked intimately with Smithers concerning some of the Smithers ventures in the world of finance. It is even hinted that the New Haven people gave the London gentleman to understand that these financial activities of his—or certain phases of them—might be brought to the closer attention of members of his board of directors in London.

And at about this stage of the interview

BOSTON POSTCARDS CONFESS KILLINGS

In One Man Tells Where Boy's Body Is, and Police Find It.

The Boston police last night, at the request of the police of Buffalo, N. Y., began a search of the city in an attempt to find a man who has confessed by postal card to committing at least three murders, and who claims he is guilty of several more homicides.

The unknown slayer has described his crimes on postcards mailed from Boston and directed to the police of Buffalo. The writer has signed his name as "S. Dennison."

The postcards have cleared up the mystery of the death of Joseph Josephs, six years old, who had been missing for a year from his home in Lackawanna, N. Y.

The unknown sent his last card to the Buffalo police from Boston, last Wednesday. In this he said he would leave his home in this city today for Buffalo. His victims according to the writer, have always been children, usually boys.

On a postal written two weeks ago, the unknown said:

"I wish to pay the price, but shall not give up to the Boston police for the sake of my family."

The first postcard was mailed from Boston September 11, 1912, and read:

"I am sick of trying to fool myself. I am a homicidal maniac. I killed Joey Josephs of Lackawanna, N. Y. I strangled him as I did others. Please advertise fact. The body will be found back of saloons, near Doyle's, on Ridge road."

Another card mailed from Boston read:

"I am a prominent fraternity man of high degree, honest and respected. My son is married and happy. Can I under the circumstances give myself up? I can, of course, but there are still more murders of which I have not told you.

WANT $900 TO BUY ORGAN.

Church Guild Out to Equal Gift from Carnegie.

Plans to raise $900 to cover the same amount offered by Andrew Carnegie to buy a pipe organ for the Park and Downs Congregational Church, Quincy, were discussed by the Woman's Guild of the church yesterday afternoon. The members expect to request contributions from friends of the church in Boston and elsewhere. The guild's officers are: Mrs. Charles Bryant, president; Miss Catherine Robinson, vice president; Mrs. Frederick Atkinson, treasurer; and Mrs. Ruth E. Dunn, corresponding secretary.

"ALWAYS CURES MY COLDS"

Says New Yorker in Praise of Father John's Medicine.

"I always use Father John's Medicine as a blood builder, a cure and wholesome lung remedy and for grippe and colds, because it always cures me." E. Weber, 150 B. 103d St., Astoria, N. Y. C.

"Joe," the Boy Giant, Tells His Full Name

Then Quickly Lapses Back Into Mental Fog—Illness Only Temporary, Says Doctors at Hospital.

"Joe," the boy giant, who walked into the Hanover Street Police Station and told Lieutenant Crowley that he was suffering from such an acute lapse of memory he couldn't recall his last name, address or anything else about himself, or his past, regained his mental poise at the Psychopathic Hospital on Fenway road, Roxbury, late yesterday afternoon.

He was himself just long enough to tell his correct name and address and then his mind became a blank again. Further than to admit that the patient belongs in New York, the hospital authorities declined to give out "Joe's" full name and address. Dr. Meyerson said it was a house rule to keep all such facts secret to protect patients.

He said the boy is suffering from Amnesia aphasia, due to an acute attack of nervousness, which is temporary. He will be himself again soon. "Joe" was well dressed. He is six feet tall, weighs 170 pounds, and is only eighteen. It is thought that he belongs to the navy. On his arm is tattooed the letters "U. S. N."

In his pocket was found a diary telling of voyages to different foreign ports.

"I am lost," said the boy pathetically as he confronted Lieutenant Crowley at the desk in the Hanover street police station Friday night. "All I can remember is that my name is 'Joe.' Please find out who I am and notify my folks."

He was hurried to the Roxbury hospital.

Want All Melrose on Knees Friday Nights

Pastors Would Forbid All Worldly Pursuits and Herd Everybody to Prayer Meeting.

Protestant pastors in Melrose have started a campaign to have Friday evening set apart for religious duties in that city and to have them kept as sacred as the Sabbath. In an open letter to the citizens, city government committee, high school societies and clubs are attacked for devoting Friday nights to worldly pleasures and pursuits. The letter calls attention to a resolution adopted at an early town meeting reserving Friday evening as a time for prayer meeting in and out of churches. The letter is signed by the Rev. Thomas Sims, of the First Congregational Church and the Rev. Augustus E. Scoville of the First Baptist Church, acting as officers of the Melrose Ministers' Association.

Special Cable to the Sunday AMERICAN.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 16.—Late tonight it is reported that the Bulgarians have made a night attack on the Turkish position at Biyuk Chekmedye, on the Sea of Marmora. That the report is well founded is indicated by firing, which can be heard in the direction of the Heights of Tchatalja. Nothing has been learned to indicate the progress of the fighting.

Turkish warships in the Sea of Marmora have been shelling the Bulgarian positions on the coast for several hours.

BERLIN, Nov. 16.—Austria is moving troops to the border as fast as they can be entrained. Twenty thousand troops have left Trieste for Dalmatia, which is within striking distance of the disputed stretch of the Adriatic coast. The departures were marked by riotous demonstrations by Czechs and Slavs.

"They're off to fight our brothers," "Shame," were the cries of thousands of the foreigners.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Reluctant to consent to an unconditional surrender, even though every hour's delay means hundreds more dead and wounded and only postpones the final result, the Sultan of Turkey today objected to the police proposal of the Balkan allies and submitted a counter proposal to Sofia.

Despatches tonight from Constantinople say the European residents of the capital and many Turks themselves are astonished that the Sultan should dicker with the Bulgarian conquerors when they are only twelve miles from the capital and may strike at the city itself before an answer can be received from Bulgaria.

No favorable answer will be forthcoming, since the Sultan insists that he retain a nominal sovereignty over Macedonia, although he is willing to grant that country autonomy.

He also balked at being driven out of the rest of Europe, also at the internationalization of Constantinople and the entrance of the allies into the capital.

The bulk of the Sultan's army, its Tchatalja defence line, rolled backward against itself, is tonight within twelve miles of the Turkish capital, according to dispatches from the front. The Turks are still resisting the Bulgarian advance, but feebly, and with no heart to fight.

The premiers of the Balkan States, and possibly Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria, will meet at Belgrade Thursday to discuss the partition connection of European Turkey.

The Bulgarian Cabinet today notified Turkey that Bulgaria would consent to an armistice only if peace negotiations were entered into immediately. The armistice must be of brief duration, however, and the peace terms must be accepted within twenty-four hours after they are presented, or hostilities will be resumed immedi-

FAST BOSTON TRAIN DERAILED ON NEW HAVEN; NINETEEN HURT

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., Nov. 16.—The Merchants' Limited of the New Haven line, which left Boston for New York at 5 o'clock, and one of the finest passenger trains out of the city, was wrecked at Greens Farms at 8:52 tonight shortly after it left the city. All five cars on the train were derailed.

PARTIAL LIST OF THE INJURED.

Nineteen persons were injured. The most seriously hurt are:

W. H. HARBER of No. 23 Maiden Lane, New York; hole punched in head, face cut and bruised, also dislocated ankle; in ambulance to Bridgeport hospital.

J. H. RUFFEN, Elm street, New Rochelle, face badly cut and lacerated, arm broken; taken to Bridgeport hospital.

Among others injured are:

J. WILLIAM BARTHRAM, Jr., No. 1 Maiden Lane, New York, face cut.

H. GAILADDE, West End avenue, New York, bruised and contused.

L. A. ALLISON, Longacre Hotel, New York, shaken up and bruised.

C. H. SOMMERS, No. 259 West 93d street, New York, bruised about head and body.

H. T. MADIGAN, No. 66 Madison avenue, New York, bruised and suffered shock.

H. GARIBALDI, Maiden Lane, New York, wrist dislocated, arm and elbow hurt.

E. A. JOHNSON, Brooklyn, slightly hurt and suffering from shock.

M. D. WILSON, No. 19 West 36th street, New York, scalp wound, sprained hand and ankle.

C. C. LINGOFF, New York, head cut, not serious.

The train out of New Haven, running late, had attained high speed through here, carrying five coaches, three parlor cars, a diner and a smoker. The train parted, the locomotive, one parlor car and the diner going ahead, leaving two parlor cars and the smoker 1,000 feet behind. The derailed cars leaving the track, plowed along beside it and were about to overturn when they fetched up against one of the stanchions being erected for the electrical equipment of the line and stopped. All the passengers were badly shaken. None of the cars overturned. The wreck was due either to a defect in a rail or to jumping a crossover.

In the face of the facts, New Haven officials sent out reports that but one or two persons were injured.

The official report of the wreck, received at 10:30 by the New Haven officials, was as follows:

Merchants Limited express Number 23 was derailed at Green's Farms tonight at 8:52. Four rear cars were derailed. The engine and one car were not derailed. Two persons were injured, not seriously. There were no fatalities. The cause is unknown. At the time of the accident the train was within three or four minutes of being on time.

"Two passengers injured; none killed. Injuries slight."

This was the second wreck today on the New Haven Railroad in this section of the State. The earlier wreck was near Milford, Ct.

The first wreck today resulted from a broken switch, which caused the derailment of the through express from Portland and Boston on the New Haven road at 5:55 a. m. The switch, which led off to a siding west of the station, had evidently been broken for some time and was held only by a few bolts.

The train, which was scheduled to leave New Haven at 3:40, was running late, and when it struck the switch it separated, letting the rear four cars of the train on to the ties. The cars bumped along over the ties for 150 yards before the train was stopped, but none of the cars was overturned. The passengers were transferred to other cars from New Haven and the express proceeded. No one

OCTOBER 3, 1912—Springfield Express wrecked at Westport. Cause—Unsafe crossover taken at high speed. Result—Seven killed; twenty seriously injured.

NOVEMBER 16, 1912—Portland Express wrecked at Milford, Ct. Cause—Broken switch. Result—Coaches derailed and passengers severely shaken up.

NOVEMBER 16, 1912—Merchants Limited wrecked at Green's Farms. Cause—Not yet decided. Result—Four coaches derailed and nineteen injured.

IN THE FOUR WRECKS, TWENTY-ONE WERE KILLED AND MORE THAN EIGHTY INJURED.

Of the four disasters, a report was made on but one—that of October 3. This report was made by Coroner John J. Phelan of Bridgeport, but twenty-four hours before the two wrecks of Saturday. Coroner Phelan found "concurring responsibility" on the part of the New Haven road.

was injured, although the passengers in the derailed coaches were severely shaken up.

The train is ordinarily well patronized. It is especially well filled with passengers on Saturday evenings. Those on board are usually Bostonians and residents of New England going to New York to remain over Sunday.

Greens Farms Station is the third one after this city is passed and is also miles from here. The next station beyond is Westport, where there was a wreck on October 3, in which seven persons were killed.

The chief of police first heard of the accident from trainmen who reached Greens Farms and reported it. Too chief was also informed by telephone.

given to understand that it was a bad wreck. But he had no details. He was told to send all the help he could as quickly as possible.

The chief of police jumped into his automobile and began to scurry the city in search of assistance. He sent a squad of fifteen policemen in charge of a sergeant to the scene.

Twenty-five doctors were gathered in a short time and three ambulances were procured and hurried to Greens Farms.

Other doctors, nurses and supplies that would be needed in the treatment of injured persons were secured as fast as possible and sent to the scene.

The train was due here at 8:39. It was on time. The train was in charge of Conductor Rose and the locomotive was handled by Engineer Hackett.

It was understood here that the cars that left the track fell over into a ditch. Attempts to secure information by telephone proved unsuccessful.

In the presence of Coroner Phelan, newspapermen, and railroad officials, Everett pulled spikes out of the ties with his hands.

While the spectators watched in amusement Everett emphasized his assertions that the rotten condition of the ties had permitted the rails to spread by tearing away handfuls of the decayed wood.

With an axe he attacked a tie and laid it open to the centre, to show the life was gone completely.

OTHER WRECKS ON THE FATAL STRETCH

Last night's wreck at Greens Farms added one more to the rapidly lengthening list of New Haven line disasters in the vicinity of Bridgeport.

It was at the Fairfield viaduct in Bridgeport that the New Haven's Federal express was wrecked on July 11, 1911. The engine took a cross-over at high speed and leaped far out from the roadbed, landing on the embankment below, with coaches piled up behind in confusion.

Fourteen passengers were killed in that wreck and forty-four injured.

On October 3 the Springfield express on the New Haven was wrecked at Westport, next station west of Greens Farms. Seven persons were killed, twenty were seriously hurt and several more suffered slight injuries.

The official finding of Coroner John J. Phelan of Bridgeport on that wreck of October 3 at Westport was made public only Friday night, twenty-four hours before a new wreck near the scene of the last one.

He also criticised the fire extinguishers on the train as being insufficient to quench such a fire as was caused by the engine coals, even though the extinguishers were in working order.

He further found that the train crew was insufficient; that the track equipment was worse than on any railroad he examined, but was not responsible for the wreck; that steel cars would have prevented the fire and subsequent deaths, but that the company was doing as well in such equipment as other companies; that longer cross-overs would have minimized or prevented possibility of such a wreck; that the company had knowledge of stop devices and modern patrolling should recognize such devices. He quoted the recommendations of Coroner Wilson on the Federal wreck and of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

MERCHANTS' LIMITED ONE OF FASTEST TRAINS IN NEW HAVEN SERVICE

The Merchants Limited, one of the finest of the New Haven's passenger trains, left the South Station yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, with five Pullman coaches. A special ticket is required on this train, so there were no day coaches. The train is one of the best of the so-called "five hour" trains. It has become famous among travelling men and is patronized by business men particularly.

The train reached Providence at 6 o'clock, New London at 7:17 and New Haven at 8:15. It passed through Bridgeport without stopping at 8:50 o'clock. It was ten miles west of Bridgeport, at Green Farms, that the wreck occurred.

Word was received at the South Station the train had left the rails and had been ditched, but details were lacking. It was said that after leaving Bridgeport, the train, as was the rule with most of the express trains, speeded up, and at times was making more than sixty miles an hour. This was believed to have been the case at the time of the wreck.

Greens Farms is the third local stop beyond Bridgeport, and is the next stop to Westport, the scene of the New Haven's wreck on October 3, in which seven lost their lives.

When the first news of the wreck was received in Boston, inquiries began to pour into the New Haven's offices at the South Station. Persons with friends or relatives on the train anxiously asked for information. It was several hours before it was forthcoming.

SULTAN DEFIANT AS DEFEAT NEARS

ately, the Bulgarian officials declare.

Cholera today added to the toll of thousands of lives it has claimed in the past few days in the Turkish ranks, and in Constantinople. From Bucharest comes the news that the disease is also spreading rapidly among the Bulgarian troops. Constantinople admits that the pestilence has worked dreadful havoc.

Fierce fighting is in progress in the vicinity of Monastir, where the allied Greeks and Servians are trying to drive the Turks from their last position in the centre of the empire.

Now that there is talk of peace and a possible armistice in the Balkan war, the gigantic tragedy that has stalked that country a dazing crimson has begun to receive the consideration of civilization that it demands.

The casualty list of this war, so far as the facts have leaked out, is stupendous.

Death in battle, death from cholera, suffering from wounds with no proper medical help at hand, starvation—that is the terrible story that comes from the mountain passes and the plains of Turkey. And no save only hand in adding of the amazing and shocking facts.

To tell the European story in mere figures is impossible, large as the figures are. One must illuminate the figures with imagination, supplanted with such information as has come from the scenes of carnage.

It is estimated that 50,000 Turks and Bulgarians have been killed in the fight along the Tchataija lines in the attack on the defences outside the gates of Constantinople.

An earlier report received by way of Bucharest gave the surprising information that between 50,000 and 80,000 Bulgarians had been killed or wounded in the fierce fighting that has raged in Macedonia and Thrace since the war began.

If the Bulgarians have suffered such a tremendous loss—practically a quarter of the force they had in the field—what must have been the punishment their opponents received!

The fighting has been marked by a ferocity characteristic of absolute savagery. No quarter was ever expected or ever accorded. Unlike the feelings between the rank and file of the opposing forces in most wars, the Bulgarians and the Turks hated each other.

On several occasions, the meagre dispatches tell us, the Bulgarians ran out of ammunition in an attack. But they did not hesitate. This was the cue for the rush with charged bayonets and drawn swords. And even these were discarded and the infuriated, frenzied men flew at each other's throats and fell fighting to the death.

Only a few lines came through in connection with the suicide of the Bulgarian general, Tcosheff. Yet if all of the facts were recorded it would make a book of bloodchilling interest.

The Turks retired from Kirk-Killisch to fortified positions at Rakilisa. General Tcosheff ordered a regiment to pursue the flying legion. The general thought to fool the Turks as to the numbers following them and divided the regiment into ten companies. This regiment was composed of the flower of the youth of the country.

Ambushed by Turks.

The Turks ambushed the Bulgarians and cut them to pieces. A second regiment of the same character was also sent to its death in the same mistaken way.

Thetwo regiments were from Sofia. They consisted of 5,000 men. Of that number only 1200 were left alive and most of them were wounded.

King Ferdinand was overwhelmed at the frightful disaster. He was incensed at the costly blunder of General Tcosheff. The King summoned the general. He tore from his coat the insignia of his rank. Humiliated, insulted, the general went home nothing for him but self-destruction. He killed himself.

The world knows Tennyson's "Charge of the Light Brigade." These lines will be recalled:

Into the valley of death,
Into the mouth of hell
Rode the Six Hundred!

And yet Rakilisa was more of a valley of death than Balaklava!

Best Treatment for All Complexion Ills

(From Woman's Tribune.)

I'll tell you my panacea for all complexion troubles. If the skin be colorless, sallow, muddy, over-red, if it be rough, blotchy, or pimply, there's nothing that will so surely overcome the conditions as ordinary mercolized wax. The wax literally takes off a bad complexion—takes the dead and scar-dead particles of surface skin, so gently, gradually, you experience no inconvenience at all. A new complexion is then in evidence, one so clear, spotless, delicately soft and beautiful, you look many years younger. On account of this wax, procurable at any drug store, will rejuvenate even the worst complexion. It is smeared on like cold cream before retiring and removed mornings with warm water. The mercolized wax habit is a healthier and more successful habit than the cosmetic habit.

If the skin be wrinkled or flabby, bathe it daily in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. This acts immediately, effacing even the deepest wrinkles.—Elsie Desmond. —Advertisement.

WILSON HAPPY AS HE SAILS FOR BERMUDA

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—With a smile illuminating his face, President-elect Woodrow Wilson, together with his wife and two of his daughters, stood on the promenade deck of the steamer Bermudian this afternoon, waving cheery adieus to the crowds lining the piers, as the vessel backed out into the river, prior to leaving for Bermuda, where the President-elect is to spend a month's vacation.

For fully half an hour before the steamer left her pier Governor Wilson stood outside his stateroom shaking hands with his fellow passengers and answering their congratulations. With the Governor's family were Charles Lee Shem, his private secretary, and his bride, who were married in Trenton three days ago. A large number of friends of the bride and groom were on hand to see them off, and showered them liberally with rice, a quantity of which fell on Governor Wilson's shoulders.

A number of ladies passing along the deck a few minutes later, not recognizing the distinguished passenger, glanced curiously at his rice besprinkled coat and hat, and then smiled in a comprehending manner, thinking he was a bridegroom.

The pier was thronged with hundreds of people who had come down to get a glimpse of the next President, while many stood on the street in front of the open waterway looking at the ship which was gaily decorated in bunting in honor of the famous passenger. Captain John J. Langley of the traffic squad, with twenty-five mounted policemen, patrolled the street outside the pier and kept the good humored crowd in orderly lines.

Standing close to the Governor on the promenade deck was Cleveland H. Dodge, his classmate of '79 at Princeton. A number of reporters surged around Mr. Wilson and asked him whether he had any statement to make before leaving.

With a smile of relief passing across his face he replied: "No. I ceased to be a politician from the moment I left the pier and stepped aboard this ship. Vacation is now the order of the day, and I propose to take full advantage of it. This is the first time I have been to Bermuda, and I feel sure that I shall be able to get all the rest I require there."

At this moment Mrs. Maris Robinson, of New York, with her four month old daughter in her arms, pressed up to the Governor, and begged to shake hands with him. As he shook hands with her he replied to her congratulations, and then, as if upon a sudden impulse, the President-elect stooped down and gently kissed the little baby as it lay in its mother's arms.

Someone asked him who would win the football game between Princeton and Yale. Without a moment's hesitation Governor Wilson showed his loyalty to his old colleges by snapping out, "Princeton, of course."

Just behind the Governor were Mrs. Wilson and her two daughters, Eleanor Randolph and Jessie W., who said they were going to take full advantage of the holiday by playing as much golf and tennis as they possibly could. Governor Wilson laughingly referred to his two daughters as very strenuous young persons, and said that their occupation of the White House would not in any way interfere with their strenuous life.

Mrs. Wilson said that her daughter Margaret was not accompanying the family on the trip in order that her musical education may not be interfered with. She will remain in New York while the rest of the family is in Bermuda, and will follow up her lessons. Her mother says she has a very fine voice and sings beautifully.

Dr. Park Found Near Home.

Living Quietly in Dorchester

Dr. Osmond F. Park, the rich young West Roxbury physician and son of the late "Billy" Park of restaurant fame, who was reported in a morning newspaper the first of the week to have "disappeared," isn't lost, stolen, kidnaped or anything else.

He is living cheerfully at No. 106 Talbot avenue, Dorchester, and says he hasn't disappeared at all.

To sum up, an AMERICAN reporter who found Dr. Park there, noted that the card on the doctor's doorplate read:

MR. PARK F. OSMOND.

But Dr. Park, who came to the door when the reporter asked to see "Mr. Osmond," said the matter of the reversed name on the card "must be a mistake" and he would have it attended to.

Dr. Park even thanked the reporter with marked emphasis for calling his attention to the circumstances of the card.

Dr. Osmond F. Park is reputed to be worth about $100,000. He inherited one-half of his father's real estate holdings. He is married, but he and Mrs. Park do not live together. His wife, Mrs. Marcia L. Park, lives at No. 90 Pembroke street, South End. She says she has not seen the doctor "for some time."

Was Reported Missing.

Last Monday reports were printed that the doctor had disappeared and that his friends were worried.

"I am boarding here with Mrs. Fannie M. Howard," said Dr. Park, "and I am living under the name of Dr. Osmond F. Park, which is my own name. I have not disappeared. I have been living here for some time, that is, several weeks, and perhaps I have not seen any of my friends. But that is easily explained, as I have been living very quietly.

"I have been working hard at my practice and feel that I need a rest. I cannot say just where I will take it, perhaps here. Perhaps I shall go away for a trip. I really do not see why any one should be interested in me or my movements."

"But you have been reported as missing for several weeks and your friends feared that something had happened to you," answered the reporter.

"Well, if my friends have missed me, I am glad," said the doctor. "But I am also sorry to have caused them to worry about me, and I trust that they will be relieved now that I am 'found.'"

Mrs. Park's Statement.

Mrs. Marcia L. Park, wife of Dr. Park, said:

"I have not seen or heard from the doctor in some time. I have heard that he has gone away, but I really do not know, in fact, I have not worried about it, for I have not seen the doctor many times in all. I understand that he sold the Park home at No. 420 Lagrange street, West Roxbury. Of course, the reason why I do not know all about these matters is that I did not live at the West Roxbury house. I have not seen the doctor many times in the last five years.

"I really do not know whether I shall bring suit for divorce or not. I have not considered that side of the question. In fact I am pretty well satisfied with matters as they stand now."

Mrs. Florence V. Hayward, sister of Dr. Park, said: "I do not know where my brother is."

MRS. FANNIE M. HOWARD

WAKEFIELD STIRRED BY CHARGES OF GIRL

Wherever two or more women gathered in Wakefield yesterday—especially if members of the Kosmos Club—the chances are that they were discussing possible developments in the case of Mildred Whitcomb, who had Mrs. Katherine P. Ricker, a member of the Kosmos Club, in Malden District Court the day before on a charge of assault.

The charge was not sustained by the evidence, Judge Bruce said, and he discharged Mrs. Ricker. But at the same time he ordered Probation Officer Hurley to make a thorough investigation as to certain bruises Miss Whitcomb is said to carry.

The girl is now at the home of Mrs. Arthur Brown, to whom she went when she left Mrs. Ricker's. Mrs. Brown said yesterday:

"I have taken the girl to live with me and she shall stay here as long as she cares to. She is of age, however, and can do as she likes.

"Later on I may have more to say, for a further investigation of the case has been ordered and the whole affair is in the hands of the authorities."

The case has stirred Wakefield society and women's circles to its depths. Mrs. Ricker is the wife of Edgar J. Ricker. They live at Wakefield Park. Mildred Whitcomb, a mocherless girl, daughter of William Whitcomb, a Somerville engineer, was taken into the Ricker home to live when she was three years old. She is now nineteen and a member of the Wakefield High School junior class.

Mildred Whitcomb testified that she was severing the Whitcomb house last Sunday morning, that Mrs. Ricker struck her in the right eye, that the eye became swollen, that she stayed there Sunday night but went to school Monday and thence to Mrs. Arthur Brown's, where she is now staying.

The Working Man's Friend In Time of Sickness.

I am a blacksmith by trade and would like to say a word to all who have to work hard and suffer with their kidneys. I suffered for about ten years and was treated by a Waynesboro, Va., Doctor. He said that I had Bright's Disease and that he had done all he could for me. I read about Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and as I could hardly do a day's work, was willing to try anything that would do me any good. After taking Swamp-Root a few days I felt so much better that I continued until I felt that I was cured and I was altogether a new man. That was eight years ago, and if I ever feel the least pain about my kidneys I just take a few doses of Swamp-Root and in a few days I am all right. I feel today that I am a well man and would say to all who suffer with their kidneys, take Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, for it has done more for me than all the doctors, and saved doctor's bills.

I can further say that about two years ago my son was sick in bed and was taking medicine from doctors and got worse all the time. I went in the night and got a fifty-cent bottle of Swamp-Root and told him to lay aside all the doctors' medicines and take Swamp-Root. He took six bottles and I am glad to say that he is well today and has not had any trouble with his kidneys since. It was Swamp-Root that cured him. My son now thinks that there is no medicine that a doctor can give that can compare with Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

Very truly yours,
G. W. HARDING,
Covington, Va.

Personally appeared before me this 8th day of March, 1912, G. W. Harding, who subscribed the above statement and made oath that same is true in substance and in fact.

Given under my hand this 8th day of March, 1912. B. H. PATTON,
Justice of the Peace.

Cost $4 a Week for Remark About Wife

Young Husband Who "Don't Care Anything About Her" Ordered To Settle.

Russell W. Gray's uncomplimentary remark about his young wife, in the Malden District Court yesterday, is to cost him $4 a week. The Grays are from Everett. He is an Elevated brakeman. They were married last May, each at the Age of seventeen. She had him in court for non-support.

"I will continue the case to see if some settlement can be made," said the Judge.

"I don't care anything more about my wife, anyhow," muttered Gray as he stepped down from the stand. Judge Riley caught the remark.

"In that case I change that finding and order you to pay your wife $4 a week for her support," said the judge.

Leonel M. Glover, also of Everett, was likewise in court for non-support. His wife said he was forty dollars in arrears to the weekly payments of $10 to her ordered a few months ago.

GREAT CROWD OUT AFTER BIG CONTEST

Cheering, bobbling over with enthusiasm, jostling thousands thronged the streets last night after the Dartmouth-Harvard games. Oddfellows declared it the biggest football crowd that ever paraded the streets of Boston.

The throngs were out early—almost immediately after the big game at the Stadium. The colors of Dartmouth and Harvard intermingled, and the crowds poured steadily along, filing into cafes, hotels, theatres and making merry generally.

Every theatre was packed. In the cafes and hotels the managers had to place guards at the doors to keep the crowds filing in and out.

At the Elks' Home on Somerset street, Beacon Hill, 500 persons gathered for a big cabaret show. It was an assortment of arts and performers now appearing in Boston.

The show began at 8 in the lower dining hall.

John J. Cassidy was chairman of arrangements. Among those present were James B. Connolly, the author; Gus Williams, the actor, who founded the Boston lodge of Elks, and many others.

"Odd Eye" Is Latest Lure of Women

One Larger and Brighter Optic, They Think, Appeals to Man's Love for the Unusual.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The odd eye is the latest freak fancy of the fashionable woman, but to obtain it she must be prepared to risk serious damage to her sight.

If you wish to be alluring, weird, mysterious, have odd eyes to match the odd side of your dress.

Nowadays gowns have in many cases an odd-sided appearance.

Some have only one sleeve, the second arm being covered with floating chiffon. Other dresses are trimmed and draped all the back on one side only—or laced and soft materials are swathed around one hip or one side of the bodice and not the other.

This has evolved the idea of the odd eye, and now women are using belladona to make one eye larger and brighter in appearance than the other, and in Paris they are even dropping coloring matter into one eye to make it a different tint.

A woman who has adopted the "odd eye" fashion recently stated that it is supposed to fascinate men who are known to like anything unusual, because it attracts them in the first place, and the more mysterious women are the more men will think about them.

FIND WOMAN DEAD HUSBAND IS HELD

Mrs. Jennie Steel, thirty-three, was found dead at her home, No. 18 Bremen street, East Boston, yesterday. Her husband, Angus Steel, was held by the police, pending an investigation.

The body was taken to the North Grove street morgue. Steel reported the death of his wife.

"SPIES ON ISTHMUS."

Goethal's Son Gives Hint; English Are Active.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Lieutenant George H. Goethals, son of Uncle Sam's chief engineer on the Isthmus, today sailed for Panama on the steamer Mineola. Lieutenant Goethals is detailed on the examination work, but the War Department has put a seal on the lips of the engineers.

"There has been so much trouble with spies of English shippers and merchants, that we have our hands full."

$30,000 FACTORY FIRE IN STONEHAM

Explosion of Oil Gives Firemen of Three Towns Battle of Several Hours.

Fire caused by an explosion of a barrel of oil yesterday afternoon destroyed two two-story wooden factory buildings of the Stoneham Japanning Company, No. 99 Spring street, Stoneham, owned by Nathan Council of Lynn. The loss was estimated at $30,000.

The home and stable of Charles L. Converse, No. 95 Spring street, caught fire. The stable was destroyed, and a cow was burned to death. The damage, according to Mr. Converse, to the house and barn was $5,000.

The Stoneham Fire Department was late in arriving, due to the failure of the alarm to work. When the box was pulled it registered "1" instead of "28."

By this time the flames were enveloping the factory buildings and threatening other places. The Wakefield and Woburn departments assisted the Stoneham firemen and all fought the flames for several hours.

The building in which the fire started was built ten years ago by Timothy Howard, brother-in-law of Mr. Connell. Twenty-five hands were employed in both places.

Automobile Hit by Fire Engine

Ex-Councilman Monk of Cambridge Is Cut by Flying Glass in Smash Up.

Former Councilman Sidney Monk of Cambridge was slightly cut by flying glass last night when his automobile was hit by Chemical Engine No. 1 at Prospect and Hampshire streets, Cambridge. The fire engine was on its way to a fire at No. 21 Tremont street. William Kelly was the driver. Swerving to one side to miss a car that had stopped Kelly hit Monk's automobile, smashing the windshield. The engine then proceeded to the fire. It was in a two-family house occupied by Fred O. Burton and William Mill. The fire was soon put out.

WORKMAN FALLS TO DEATH

Misses Step in New Building at Cambridge.

Joseph Pasquale, a laborer for the Morrison Contracting Company of No. 280 Milk street, Boston, fell through an opening on the third floor of the new building in process of construction at Banks and Flagg streets, Cambridge, yesterday afternoon, receiving injuries from which he died at the Cambridge Hospital. He lived in the North End of Boston.

PAIR FACING MORE CHARGES OF THEFT

Mary Walsh and John Richards, held at the Charles Street Jail to await the action of the Suffolk County Grand Jury, on the charge of stealing goods from Boston department stores, are said to be implicated in several robberies at Ayer and Belmont. Charges have been filed with the Boston authorities.

The Walsh woman and Richards were arrested a week ago Saturday night. The police assert goods valued at $500 were found in their rooms on Hanson street.

Tods to Live in Brookline.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Tod of New York, are to make their home in Brookline. They have taken an apartment at No. 231 Harvard road. Mrs. Tod is the daughter of Sir Caspar Purdon Clarke, of Kensington, England, the former director of the Metropolitan Art Museum of New York.

Foss to Greet Mayors.

Governor Foss will give a reception to the mayors of Massachusetts cities at Young's Hotel Tuesday, when a dinner will be given under the auspices of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange. Dinner will be at 5:30 p. m. A discussion on "Waterways" will follow.

GRAND TRUNK FACING SUITS

Smithers received his orders to stop his proposed extensions in New England. He promptly agreed to and Morgan told him how.

The understanding here, also, is that the Grand Trunk will resume and complete the construction of the Southern New England from Palmer over to Providence.

What Mellen Plans.

This Palmer-Providence line will be constructed, ostensibly, by and for the Grand Trunk Railway.

But the "traders" will merely be waiting for "this thing to blow over."

The New Haven crowd is really fearful of the attitude of Governor Pothier and the business interests of Rhode Island.

When the public has forgotten—as the public has a way of forgetting—control of the Southern New England line will be quietly passed over to the New York, New Haven & Hartford.

And the sheer part of the deal is that the Grand Trunk shall have TRACKAGE RIGHTS—not trackage rights, which would be a different and a far better arrangement for the free commerce of New England—over the Boston & Maine from White River Junction, Vermont, down through northern New Hampshire to the terminals in Boston.

Chamberlin and Mellen are hardly mentioned in the New England discussion here. The star performers have been Morgan and Smithers.

And the only question over here is whether Massachusetts will stand it. Whether Massachusetts will not shake the dust off the feet of the rights in the Boston Holding Company and give J. P. Morgan & Co. the big licking of a lifetime.

The New York idea is that New England is altogether provincial in constantly hamstringing Mellen for the dexterities of the New Haven.

The brain that conceived the Railroad for All New England is not Mellen's, any more than the heart that surrendered to that rule is Edson J. Chamberlin's.

New England's railroad fate was settled between Morgan and Smithers—BUT:

Wonder at Our Inactivity.

But the New Yorkers who follow the affairs of railroads, and who are continually looking for Morgan and Mellen to stub their toes in New England, are amazed that New England—and more particularly Massachusetts—should even think about losing heart in the fight with this monopoly.

"How about the celebrated Holding Act?" New Yorkers ask.

New York isn't quite clear about this Boston Holding Company Act, passed by the Massachusetts Legislature of 1909, but it appears to be the impression here, in railroad circles, that the act affords a way for the Commonwealth to step in and take Boston & Maine control out of the hands of the New Haven crowd whenever the public good appears make such a step necessary.

It seems to be the impression here that the present humiliating position of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada is not of the Grand Trunk's making. The dishonor of the Grand Trunk Railway will do that organization no great good in Ottawa. It has always been the British boast that the word of one of her commercial leaders is "as good as another man's bond." The breach of faith with Rhode Island and Massachusetts by the Grand Trunk Railway—if the Grand Trunk shall be proved to have been at fault—would make the name of that organization a reproach even in Canada, where they pride themselves so being free from trickery and deceit.

And New Yorkers who discuss this feature of the situation hold that a way out may yet be found by the rescue of the Boston & Maine from the New Haven and an arrangement whereby all the transcontinental lines may reach the port of Boston through Boston & Maine territory, without any agreement whatever with the monopolistic New Haven.

Look for Action by Foss.

Men in this city who know something of the Governor of Massachusetts and his qualities of leadership say the natural thing to be expected of Foss is a great public-spirited effort to free his native New England from the clutch of Wall Street, which dominates the railroads of New England, not by stock "ownership," but by stock "control," which knows nothing about practical railroading, and which certainly cares more for New York than it can be expected to care for New England.

It is believed by the men referred to that one of the features of the coming session of the Massachusetts Legislature will be the passage of the Governor's Public Utilities Commission Act. Once such a bill is passed and a Foss commission named, the public-be-hanged attitude of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad—so far, at least, as Massachusetts is concerned—will be followed by an altogether different policy.

DEFECTION TO COST ROAD DEAR IN R. I.

It is going to cost the Grand Trunk Railroad as much money to withdraw from the State of Rhode Island as it would to complete its line from Palmer to Providence.

This is the latest development in the extraordinary situation caused by the Grand Trunk-New Haven agreement.

The Grand Trunk excavations lie across the face of Rhode Island as an unhealed scar. Houses have been torn down, property damaged, people have sold out all along the line of railway at a sacrifice, real estate has been damaged and, in the present temper of the people of Rhode Island it will fare hard with the Grand Trunk when the damage suits begin to be filed.

There doesn't seem any doubt that the Grand Trunk is liable to all damage or inconvenience caused along the line of its proposed railroad, and more than that, the question has arisen whether the $1,750,000 appropriated by the State for development of the Grand Trunk's proposed terminal on the waterfront cannot be collected from the retreating railroad.

In 1909 Rhode Island appropriated $500,000 for a State dock at Providence. About this time the city of Providence set aside $500,000 for the building of a sea wall. Then the Grand Trunk was talked of. It would enter Providence just as fast as the tracks could be laid. The State immediately appropriated $1,000,000 for the purpose of improving shore property in preparation for the coming of the railroad. Sea walls and docks were built, approaches to the docks were repaired and considerable grading was done. The Grand Trunk decided it would make tidewater near Field's Point. Consequently the city of Providence, following the example of the State, appropriated $250,000 more to afford better trackage facilities and extend the sea wall 1,200 feet. It is certain that neither of these appropriations would have been made if the people had not felt assured of the coming of the Grand Trunk.

The State's representatives in Congress succeeded in getting through a Federal appropriation of $450,000, which was used in dredging and widening the channels and cutting off a point of land known as Field's Point.

MASSACHUSETTS MAY SHAKE MELLEN LOOSE FROM BOSTON & MAINE

The Boston Holding Company Act referred to in the "dispatch from New York, here to be seriously considered and discussed at the coming session of the Massachusetts Legislature.

Exactly as Wall Street is said to understand the Holding Company Act, it provides for the State's assuming the control and direction of the Boston & Maine Railroad, even to the management of that system by directors named by the State.

The general impression among progressive legislators all parties, with whom the Sunday AMERICAN endeavored to get in touch last night, is that the first big effort of the new Legislature will be towards the passage of a Public Utilities Commission act.

Governor Foss will again urge the establishment of such a commission in his inaugural address. The commission would have full power over the railroads of Massachusetts.

At the same time there are legislators-elect who insist that the time has come for the State to stop in and shake the New Haven out of the Boston & Maine. They would do this through the Holding Company.

The passage of the Holding Company Act, in 1909, followed the discovery that the New Haven, in flagrant violation of the laws of the State, had acquired a controlling interest in the Boston & Maine.

The Holding Company is the intermediary through which the New Haven now dominates the Boston & Maine. And the Holding Company is controlled by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

How the New Haven is allowed to take hold, and how the Commonwealth may assume control of the Boston & Maine, is set fourth in the fourth section, the most startling portion of which reads as follows:

The Commonwealth may at any time by act of Legislature, upon one year's notice, take or acquire by purchase or otherwise the stock, bonds, notes and other evidences of indebtedness issued by the Boston Railroad Holding Company.

DEAN SUMNER IS TOO ILL TO SPEAK

The Very Rev. Walter T. Sumner, D. D., dean of the Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul, Chicago, is seriously ill and will be unable to preach at St. Paul's Cathedral today, where he was to have spoken morning and afternoon.

Heavy Weight On the Stomach

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Remove It and All Other Forms of Indigestion Quickly.

That awful feeling as though there were a heavy weight on your stomach—as though you had swallowed an enormous lump of lead—is caused by the failure of your stomach to thoroughly digest your foods. You may have eaten too fast or too much. Your stomach may be over-worked and tired out. Is it too weak to produce enough of the digestive juices necessary to take proper care of the food. Cases form and cause all sorts of agony. The stomach demands more pepsin, hydrochloric acid and other digestive agents which it is unable to secrete.

Medicines are not only worthless in cases of this kind but are actually injurious to the whole system. It is sheer lunacy to pour a lot of vile stuff into the stomach—drugs that have no digestive power whatever.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain ingredients that not only bring quick relief to indigestion sufferers, but actually digest the food for the stomach. One of these little magic tablets taken after each meal will rest the stomach, revitalize the secretory glands, strengthen the muscular walls—in fact, tone up the entire digestive system.

No home should be without Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets constantly on hand. They stop all forms of indigestion, such as sour stomach, belchings, heartburn dizziness, burning sensation, brash, etc. After a brief course of treatment your appetite improves. You enjoy your food more. You awaken every morning with a happy disposition. Life looks brighter. Your brain becomes clearer and your eyes sparkle with their old time snap and twinkle. You are practically a new person.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by all druggists, at 50c a box.

THANK YOU!

For the phenomenal and unprecedented patronage that has been accorded this store during the celebration of our Fortieth Anniversary Week, we return heartfelt thanks to an appreciative public.

Our patrons will be pleased to know through their endorsement of our methods, and their hearty co-operation, all trade records have been exceeded by many thousands of dollars.

We have dealt with the New England public for Forty Years, and it is with very deep feeling that in this event there comes to us the realization of a noble ideal from the fact that we have been able to retain, through all these years, the confidence and good will of that public; and through them to have become recognized by them as "The Store of the People," as well as the "Economy Shopping Center of Boston."

Again we say, Thank You.

Firestone

Non-Skid TIRES

Insure Against Mishap

Whether on slippery pavements, ice covered boulevards, or muddy roads, the angles, edges and hollows of the "Non-Skid" have a firm grip and prevent your car from skidding in any direction.

And back of the tread is the sturdy Firestone body of material and building strong enough to withstand any skid-preventing strain.

Increase Tire Mileage

The extra thickness of tough, resilient tread gives an extra length of tire service. The unusual mileage given by Firestone Non-Skid tires, after the tread "letters" have worn off, is the economical proof.

Reduce Car Repair Bills

By absorbing the bumps of the road, no matter how severe they may be, these extra thick treads prevent the rack and loosening of mechanism which thinner treads on the ordinary "slow" tire cannot avoid.

Economize on Gasoline

The road grip of the edges, angles and hollows prevents loss of power by wheel slipping or spinning. Traction is increased, gasoline consumption reduced to a minimum.

Give Greatest Riding Comfort

There is an added give and take to the extra thickness of the resilient tread, which materially aids the cushioning effect of the car's springs.

2nd Sale of Natio

The Sale that begins tomorrow has been planned on the most stupendous lines ever attempted in Retail Merchandising, the object being to indelibly impress upon the minds of people of the United States how vital to their interests is the great Chain of Siegel Stores, with their united purchasing power and tremendous distributing facilities.

WHY THIS SALE IS OF NATION-WIDE IMPORTANCE. WHY NO OTHER STORE CAN COMPETE.

Henry Siegel has four big stores—One in Boston—Two in New York and One in Chicago. Any sale that effects those cities is of nation-wide interest, for these are the three principal distributing centers of the nation. The Siegel name is known favorably from coast to coast, from the Panama Canal to the Canadian border. Every city, town and hamlet in the United States receives merchandise from the Siegel Stores, and they have come to be a national institution.

Mr. Siegel believes that the time is ripe to prove to New England people and to the entire country the full power of his great buying organization, by a sale of dependable New Merchandise at savings that you or any one else have never known before. Thinking people will readily realize after reading these two pages of unmatchable values that such savings couldn't be possible in any other Boston Store.

It Is Your Patronage That Has Helped Us Gain Our Commanding Position Among Boston Retailers

Tomorrow, and all next week, the Henry Siegel Store will show its appreciation of the splendid support accorded it by the great New England buying public in a sale that has no parallel, and just as this store, from its very inception, has set the pace in the improvement of merchandising in Boston, it will henceforth be supreme in value-giving.

MAYOR LUNN GIVEN FREEDOM ON BAIL

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y., Nov. 16.—George R. Lunn, Socialist Mayor of Schenectady, after a night spent in a six by eight cell in the Herkimer County Jail, where he was taken last evening following his conviction of violating of a local ordinance, was in a defiant mood today as he prepared plans to appeal his case and secure his release on bail.

The Mayor was released on bail this afternoon.

The Mayor said that as a matter of principle he would never pay the $50 fine and if necessary he would serve his ten sentence.

To Be Guest at Cleveland Home

Miss Hoar Will Receive With the Daughter of the Former President.

Mrs. Rockwood Hoar and her daughter, Miss Frances Helen Hoar, leave their home in Worcester today for Princeton, N. J., where they will attend the coming out party for Miss Esther Cleveland, daughter of the late former President, Grover Cleveland. Mrs. Hoar and her daughter will be guests of Mrs. Cleveland. Tomorrow Miss Cleveland will be presented at a reception to be given at the Clevelands' Princeton home, and Miss Hoar will be in the receiving line with the debutantante and the hostess. Later in the season both Miss Hoar and Miss Cleveland will be presented to society in Washington.

REVERE'S ACTING FIRE CHIEF OUT SUDDENLY

Golliff Resigns After Late Auto Trip Night Before; Says He Was on Post.

Revere buzzed with excitement last night when it became known that Philip G. Golliff, acting fire chief, had resigned, following a late trip in the chief's automobile the night before. According to the story told last night Golliff rolled into the Central Fire Station at 1:30 a. m., yesterday, and found Secretary Alfred Wills and Edmund J. Tabb, of the Board of Fire Engineers, waiting for him.

"Where have you been for several hours?" one of the men asked him. "We wanted to see you on business."

"Out on my post," he replied. "I've not been out of town."

Then, it appears, Golliff's resignation was suggested. Anyhow, when a small fire occurred yesterday afternoon in the rear of No. 280 Ocean avenue, George C. Smith was in charge and Golliff acted as a plain hoseman.

The Board of Fire Engineers held a meeting last night and accepted Golliff's resignation. They put Smith for the time being in his place. Golliff was asked if he had resigned.

"Yes," he replied. "I've been thinking of it for some time. Things have not been going to suit me in the department." Mr. Tabb, who acted as chairman at last night's meeting, said there was no politics in the latest move, but a determination to get the department into the best possible shape. Smith, the acting chief, is only twenty-six.

SIX-YEAR TERM IS URGED BY PRESIDENT

Giving of Seats in Congress to Cabinet Officers Also Advocated by Mr. Taft.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—In one of the wittiest speeches he has made since he was elected, President Taft tonight gave the members of the Lotos Club an inside view of what he thought of the presidency and told them of a number of changes which he thought ought to be made. In some of them he agreed with Governor Wilson, in others he was diametrically opposite.

The President advocated strongly a single term of six years for the chief executive of the United States, saying that this was ample time for him to do all the good possible, and not enough for him to become harmful to the country.

The giving to cabinet officers of seats in the Senate and House, a move advocated by William Jennings Bryan within the past week, was another step which the President favored. He said:

Four years is rather a short time in which to work out great governmental policies. Six years is better.

Another suggestion I would make is that executive steps be taken, for there is nothing in the Constitution to forbid it, bringing more closely together the operations of the executive and legislative branches. It has been promised twice in our history, after the fullest consideration by some of the wisest statesmen we have ever had, to pass a law giving to each department head a seat in the Senate and in the House, and a right to enter into the discussion of the proposed legislation in each of the bodies. This would keep Congress much better informed as to the actual conditions in the executive departments.

Former School Chums Now Mated for Life

Miss Bridgman Becomes the Bride of H. B. Lockwood, of Spokane, Wash.

Miss Elizabeth Bridgman of Hyde Park, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred F. Bridgman, was married last evening to Harold Bartlett Lockwood, now a prosperous young fruit grower in Spokane, Wash. Their courtship began while both were attending the Hyde Park High School. They were married at the home of the bride's parents, No. 27 Lincoln street.

Miss Dorothy Sanger of Hyde Park was bridesmaid. The attendants were Misses Clara and Edna Clark, Florence Cox and Agnes Truelson. The best man was John Becker, Jr., of Hyde Park. Harold Bridgman, brother of the bride, and Winslow Loveland were ushers. The flower girls were Miss Merriam Lockwood of Hyde Park and Miss Patricia Dodge of New York, niece and cousin of the groom.

WALTER L. SHEPARD IS SUED BY MOTHER

Mrs. Lucretia R. Shepard, a wealthy Melrose woman, has brought suit against her younger son, Walter L. Shepard, to recover 250 shares of stock of the silver manufacturing company founded by her late husband.

The Shepard Manufacturing Company on Franklin street is one of the biggest industries in Melrose. It is now carried on by Chesley B. and Walter L. Shepard, sons of Mrs. Shepard.

Mrs. Shepard complains that her son, Walter, told her on October 2 that the international Trust Company refused to advance any more funds to the company until the management had been changed. Mrs. Shepard declares that she turned over her holdings of 250 shares. She says she has since learned that the trust company made no such demands. Judge Pierce granted a temporary injunction.

SUPT. DYER SPEAKS.

Urges Industrial Training in Schools Here.

Superintendent of Schools Dyer strongly impressed upon the members of the Boston Manual Training Club, at their dinner at the City Club last night, the necessity and the value of industrial training in the public schools.

The new superintendent pointed out that the vocational training plan has been developed to a very effective degree in Cincinnati and outlined what his course would be dealing with the problems in the Boston schools.

DON'T PULL OUT THE GRAY HAIRS; A SIMPLE REMEDY RESTORES COLOR

"Pull out one gray hair and a dozen will take its place," is an old saying, which is, to a great extent, true, if no steps are taken to stop the cause. When gray hairs appear it is a sign that Nature needs assistance. It is Nature's call for help. Gray hair, dull, lifeless hair, or hair that is falling out, is not necessarily a sign of advancing age, for there are thousands of elderly people with perfect heads of hair without a single streak of gray.

When gray hairs come, or when the hair seems to be lifeless or dead, some good, reliable hair-restoring treatment should be resorted to at once. Specialists say that one of the best preparations to use is the old-fashioned "sage tea" which our grandparents used. The best preparation of this kind is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation of domestic sage and sulphur, scientifically compounded with later discovered hair tonics and stimulants, the whole mixture being carefully balanced and tested by experts.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is clean and wholesome and perfectly harmless. It refreshes dry, parched hair, removes dandruff and gradually restores faded or gray hair to its natural color.

Don't delay another minute. Start using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur at once and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in your hair.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

LEGAL STAMPS ARE AN ADDITIONAL ATTRACTION AT GILCHRIST'S

TOMORROW a Certified Bargain Sale at GILCHRIST'S

Taking you into our confidence, if you please—revealing some of the methods of preparing a sale in a large store;—

The plans are necessarily laid long in advance.

Then experts go through the market for desirable merchandise, enough under price to meet the rigid requirements for a Sale.

Thus, a large number of Department Managers and their Assistants have been instrumental in preparing this Sale, or any sale.

All are enthusiastic over their offerings, and confident of unqualified success.

Some may be over-enthusiastic at times, or otherwise errors may occasionally creep in, notwithstanding the best of intentions.

For years Gilchrist's has stood for honest advertising, the policy is clearly defined. As a striking example we decided upon this plan:

TO HOLD A CERTIFIED BARGAIN SALE, requesting each Department Manager to affix his signature to his advertisement, thus certifying that, to the best of his knowledge, everything is exactly as represented, living up to the spirit, as well as the letter, of the Unwritten Law for Truthful Advertising.

In this connection an Act of the Massachusetts Legislature relative to untrue and misleading advertising will prove interesting. We reprint it herewith.

We might use this whole paper to exploit the hundreds of fine offerings prepared for Monday—but larger type wouldn't make the values any greater, would it?

AN ACT Relative to Untrue and Misleading Advertisements

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

SECTION 1. If any person, firm, corporation or association, or any employee thereof, in a newspaper, circular, form letter or other publicat on published, distributed or circulated in this Commonwealth or on any billboard, sign, card, label or other advertising medium displayed on, in or near a street, electric car, showcase, store or other place in this Commonwealth, knowingly makes or disseminates or causes to be made or disseminated any statement or assertion of fact concerning the quantity, the quality, the method of production or manufacture, the cost of production, the cost to the advertiser, the present or former price, or the reason for the price of the merchandise of such person, firm, corporation or association or concerning the manner or source of purchase of such merchandise, or the possession of rewards, prizes or distinctions conferred on account of such merchandise, which statement or assertion has the appearance of an offer advantageous to the purchaser and is untrue or calculated to mislead, the person or corporation, or the member or members of a firm or association, causing such statement or assertion to be made or disseminated, also the employee making or disseminating such statement or assertion, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable to a fine of not less than ten nor more than five hundred dollars for each offence.

SECTION 2. Chapter three hundred and ninety-seven of the Acts of the year nineteen hundred and two is hereby repealed.

'JERRY' WATSON IS OUT FOR COUNCIL

Expects Democratic Indorsement, but Will Stay in Anyhow.

James A. "Jerry" Watson announced yesterday that he was in the fight for election to the Boston City Council until the votes are counted on January 14.

"I have already been endorsed by the Democratic organizations of Wards 18 and 22, and I am being actively supported by good workers in the Democratic party in Ward 21. I expect the endorsement of the Democratic City Committee, but I will stay in the fight, regardless of whether or not I receive it," said "Jerry" in a statement last evening.

The Watson platform will call for district representation in the City Council through a larger body, providing one representative at least from each ward. He is also opposed to the spending of $500,000 or more for the beautification of Copley square and sections of the Back Bay district. He believes that such a sum of money should be more practically spent for new streets, sewers and playgrounds in the suburbs.

STORY WRITER SUED.

Camille Fairchild, a short story writer of No. 50 Waltham street, Lexington, has been attached for $10,000 in an action of tort, by a writ filed at the East Cambridge registry of deeds by Attorney John J. O'Hare, acting for Catherine A. Burgess of Boston. Libel and slander are alleged.

Saw Wickersham About Barre Cases

Garland Back from Conference on Charges Against Wool Combine Company.

William H. Garland, Assistant United States District Attorney, returned yesterday from Washington, where he conferred with Attorney-General Wickersham regarding the cases of Treasurer Francis Vernon Wiley of the South Barre Wool Combing Company and Arthur T. Saville, an alleged agent.

The defendants are charged with violating the alien contract labor law by the alleged importation of foreign hands for employment at the Barre factory. They were arraigned before United States Commissioner Hayes and released on $3,000 bail.

Their counsel, Charles M. Choate, was present at the conference in Washington. Mr. Garland was instructed to prepare a detailed report of all phases of the case and submit it to Attorney-General Wickersham.

Cain's mother is worried. He had intended to enter a theological college in Canada this Fall. His sister is Mrs. William Caldwell of No. 1049 River street, Dorchester.

EAST SOMERVILLE IN STANDARD OIL FIGHT

Somerville residents, those in the factory and tenement district of the easterly section of the city, plan to pack their City Hall a week from Tuesday.

There's to be public hearing before the Board of Aldermen, over the petition of the Gulf Refining Company—a Standard Oil subsidiary—to build ten immense kerosene tanks at the foot of Roland street.

These tanks will hold 160,000 gallons of different grades of petroleum.

The first thing that the residents of the tenement and factory districts knew that the building of these tanks were a possibility, was when they heard that the licensing committee of the Somerville Board of Aldermen had recommended their building.

The residents of this congested district have their modest homes out there, in close proximity to these tanks. They object to 160,000 gallons of oil being placed right against their doors. They see in it menace. Their wrath is intensified because just a few yards away they have put up for years with the oil tanks containing 40,000 gallons.

They began to suspect some sort of a cat in the meal when the oil company's petition ran so smoothly at first through the Licensing Committee.

Many members of the Board of Aldermen knew nothing of the petition at first until it was reported by the Licensing Committee.

Then official trouble began. Alderman William T. McCarthy, in whose ward the proposed oil tanks are to be located, led the fight for the dwellers of East Somerville. He was supported by three members of the seven comprising the Licensing Committee and finally by a fourth.

That support reversed the report of the committee and puts the matter up to the entire Board of Aldermen.

Charles H. Innes, Republican leader of Ward 10, Boston, represented the oil company before the licensing committee, and had substantial assistance from some members of the committee.

The members of the licensing committee who first recommended the location of the oil tanks on Roland street and who now are agreeable to a public hearing before the entire Board of Aldermen are: Alderman William B. Brown, chairman, Frederick Jackson, Charles Draper, Joseph Hilleon, Ernest Flagg, Alfred Toomey and Robert Farrell.

Aldermen Draper and Hilleon have championed the cause of the oil company.

NOW FOR ARBITRATION.

Hotel Workers Union to Vote Peaceful Means.

Donald Evelyn, business agent of the Hotel Workers' Union in Boston, sent out a notice yesterday in which he said that the future policy of the national executive board of the union would be "not to strike red-handed, but to try and settle all differences arising by arbitration." Edward Blocklinger, who was sent to Boston from New York, and who was prominent in the organization of the union in this city, and the troubles that followed its back in the ranks, Evelyn says, each local now having its own organizer. The next meeting of the local branch will be held at its headquarters, No. 724 Washington street, on Tuesday evening at 8:30.

LATEST THEORY OF CATARRH EXPLAINED BY DR. HARTMAN.

DR. S. B. HARTMAN

Catarrh begins by congestion of the blood vessels of a mucous membrane. Any mucous membrane is made up mostly of minute blood vessels, called capillaries. Cold or irritation of any sort is liable to produce congestion of these capillaries. If the irritation is slight and is quickly removed the congestion cry soon disappears and no bad result obtains. But if the irritation is repeated many times or is long continued a chronic condition of congestion of the mucous membranes may occur. This is ordinarily called catarrh.

The blood no longer circulates freely in the small blood vessels that compose the mucous membrane. The blood becomes dammed up in the vessels, causing the vessels to swell up and the blood to stagnate and the serum of the blood to exude from the walls of the blood vessels, producing discharges.

These discharges are ordinarily called mucous discharges. The fact is, however, the discharges are not properly mucus. Real mucus does not irritate, but is a wholesome fluid which covers every mucous membrane in the body. The catarrhal discharge is a deranged sort of mucus that is irritating and very unwholesome. Such a discharge not only further irritates the mucous membranes, sometimes completely destroying them, but the discharge is a weakening drain on the system. Precious blood serum is lost in this way.

This condition of affairs is liable to happen in the stomach, in the bowels, and any other internal organ. As said before, it most frequently occurs in the nose and thro t.

Sometimes a little relief can be obtained by the use of local applications, especially when the catarrh is confined to the nose and throat. But catarrh cannot be successfully treated by local applications. The only remedies that are effective are internal remedies.

To d vise a remedy for catarrh that could be taken safely and effectively for catarrh wherever it happened to be located in the body, to devise such a remedy has been the ambition and study of my lifetime.

I think I have obtained such a remedy in Peruna. I regard Peruna as an effective and a safe catarrh remedy. I have never recommended it for any other disease than catarrh. The notion that prevails that I regard Peruna as a cure-all is entirely erroneous. Catarrh is liable to affect so many organs f r whi h I have recommended Peruna that it has given rise to the impression that I recommend Peruna for different diseases. I recommend Peruna only for catarrh. But I do insist that it is a remedy not only for catarrh of he nose and throat, but for catarrh of the stomach and lungs, larynx, liver and other internal organs.

The kidney are especially liable to catarrh. If th catarrh goes on unchecked in the kidneys it leads to organic disease, sometimes called Bright's disease.

I wish to make it plain that Peruna is not a cure-all; that I have never recommended it as a cure-all; that I have always insisted that it was a remedy for catarrh and for catarrh only. hope I have made this plain.

If catarrh affects the stomach, Peruna is the remedy.

If catarrh affects the colon, he intestines, or the lungs, Peruna is the remedy.

Not because Peruna is a remedy for many diseases, but because catarrh can locate itself in these various organs and disturb their functions.

Sometimes catarrh is associated with constipation. Other times a catarrhal subject may not be troubled with constipation. In some instances there is a looseness of the bowels.

People beginning the use of Peruna for chronic catarrh, wherever located, will usually get valuable advice by writing me, giving me a statement of the case.

I do not think it will be necessary for me in this article to describe catarrh of the various organs of the body. It is sufficient for me to say in a general way that any organ is subject to catarrh, because these organs are lined by a mucous membrane. When once catarrh attacks an organ it derranges the function of that organ more or less.

If catarrh attacks the stomach, dyspepsia is the result.

If it attacks the larynx and bronchial tubes, bronchitis and laryngitis will result.

If it attacks the lungs, cough and symptoms that resemble consumption will follow.

If catarrh attacks the kidneys, disturbance of the urinary organs is certain. Catarrh of the bladder is a very common form of catarrh. It produces distressing symptoms. A large proportion of men past middle life have this form of catarrh, more or less.

I not only devised a remedy to meet these cases, but I have at my command a corps of assistants and helpers which enables me to come into personal touch with thousands of people suffering from catarrh, and assist them in the treatment of their case.

Peruna, Manalin and La-cu-pia manufactured by the Pe-ru-na Company, Columbus, Ohio. Sold at all drug stores.

SPECIAL NOTICE—Many persons inquire for The Old-Time Peruna. They want the Peruna that their Fathers and Mothers used to take. The old Peruna is now called Ka-tar-no. If your dealer does not keep it for sale, write the Ka-tar-no Company, Columbus, Ohio, and they will tell you all about it.

Jordan, Mrs. Dr. A. E. Abbott and John E. Savage.

Woman Opposed to Cusumano Pardon

Mrs. Romano Declares Prisoner Deserves Punishment for Part in Crime.

Mrs. Vita Romano of East Boston, president of the Italian Women's Christian and International Aid Association, of which Mrs. John L. Gardner is a patron, opposes the pardon of Mrs. Lena Cusumano, who is serving a life term for complicity in the murder of her husband Frank Cusumano, at Hull, in October 1910.

Mrs. Romano, whose husband is a real estate broker, has written an eleven-page letter to Governor Foss. She says that to pardon the Cusumano woman now would be a menace, as it would give a false notion of the law and justice "to ill-treated foreigners." She says that if Mrs. Cusumano had served ten or fifteen years it might be proper and just to petition for her freedom, but that the woman deserves some punishment for the part she played in the crime.

Mrs. Cusumano was found guilty in the first degree with her sweetheart, Enrico Mandoli, who killed her husband with an axe. The man was electrocuted.

EVIDENCE FINISHED IN GUNMEN'S TRIAL

Both Defence and Prosecution Confident as the End Approaches.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—With the last shreds of evidence for and against the gunmen charged with the murder of Herman Rosenthal, laid before the jury, Justice Goff adjourned court at 1:20 o'clock this afternoon until 10:30 Monday morning, when counsel will begin summing up for the defence. Three hours have been allotted to Attorney Wahle. Assistant District Attorney Moss will take the same time, beginning at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon. Justice Goff will deliver his charge on Tuesday morning. By nightfall Tuesday, if not earlier, the gunmen will know their fate.

Both Sides Confident.

Both sides confidently proclaim victory. The four defendants, seems to the belief they have demonstrated their innocence, at least, of the charge of the Rosenthal murder, left the court room with their guard, laughing while a carbon which represented them as unsophisticated farmers being shown about New York by a guide in the person of Jack Rose.

Upon the part of those who have followed the trial throughout, a discernment of the jury is the outside limit to the hopes of the accused men. They have told a remarkable story of the events of the early morning of July 16, which though it was not broken down by the State, was lacking in serious confirmation by any witnesses aside from those directly interested in the verdict. The issue in the final analysis, therefore, narrows down to a question of the veracity of Jack Rose "Bridgie" Webber, Harry Vallon and Sam Schepps on one side and "Gyp the Blood" Harry Horowitz, "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg, "Dopey" Lewis and "Dago Frank" Cirofici on the other. The group led by Jack Rose says the gunmen did the shooting. The gunmen swear back that Rose and his crowd are guilty.

Shapiro Strong Witness.

One outside witness stands up—William Shapiro, chauffeur of the "murder car." Shapiro identified the gunmen as the Rosential murderers in the concluding hours of the trial. Moss admitted what hope might have been encouraged through the description of Webber and Vallon by Mrs. Kyd as the men who did the shooting.

He produced half a dozen witnesses who swore to conversations with Mrs. Kyd, in which she first declared she did not see the shooting, and afterward spoke of getting money from the defense for the information she was prepared to impart.

BURRIDEL BARKER, DORCHESTER, TO BE MRS. ROBERT SNOW

MISS B F BARKER

BEGAN ROMANCE AS OLD SCHOOLMATES

When children, coming home from school,
His hand he on my hand;
And every day it was his rule
To be her escort, take her books
And act in manner sweet.
From schoolmates soon they graduated
As helpmeets now for life they've mated
Prize poem.

A romance of schooldays with its beginning in the days of the primer and study of the three R's, is behind the wedding tomorrow night of Miss Burridel Barker, a pretty choir singer in the Dix Street Church, Dorchester, to Robert A. Snow, a Dorchester merchant. The ceremony will be performed in the Dix Street Church, and the pastor, Rev. George F. Pratt, will officiate.

The couple first met in the primary grades of the Mary Hemenway School. Their families were neighbors, and the children were always companions to and from school. Both finished the district school and entered the Dorchester High School, graduating together two years ago.

Like the bride-to-be, Mr. Snow is a member of the choir of the Dix Street Church. Miss Barker is the daughter of Mrs. George F. Barker, of No. 6 Layfield street, Dorchester. She is the treasurer of the Delta Gamma Club and is prominent in church work.

Miss Ruth Jenkins will be Miss Barker's maid of honor, and C. F. Barker, her brother, will be the best man. Miss Mary Brackett will be the flower girl and Master James Brackett the ring bearer.

PLAN ANNUAL DANCE.

Houghton & Dutton Association Will Have Ball.

The semi-annual happy event concert and ball of the Houghton & Dutton Mutual Relief Association will be held in Copley Hall, Thursday evening, November 23. Preparations are being made to make the occasion even greater than formerly, as the advance sale of tickets is surprisingly large.

SOCIALISTS MOVE TO END TRADE UNIONISM

Radical Measures Urged at A. F. of L. Convention; Talk Anti-Gompers Ticket.

By PHILIP J. HALVOSA.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 16. The A. F. and L. is called upon to abandon trade unionism and organize by industry, in one of the 129 formal resolutions pending at its convention here.

This particular resolution has the undivided support of the Miners' Union, which have over 5,000 votes out of 18,490 allowed the entire convention. It also is backed up by a number of smaller ones and the entire group of Socialists. The Socialists alone have eighty-four delegates present, with 700 votes, all favoring the change.

The old line trade unions, on the other hand, are strongly opposed to the plan. They say it is impracticable at present. If adopted, it eventually will put all building trades men into one big organization, all textile workers into another union, group together the mine workers, the printing trades, and so on.

A practical acceptance of the I. W. W. policy of industrial organization, although avoiding syndicalism and other radical features of the I. W. W. movement, this is the most sweeping change demanded at the hands of the delegates here.

Another pronounced departure urged by the same group of delegates is the proposed election of Federation officers by referendum vote. Both these measures are now being considered in committee hearings with 122 other resolutions. These committees will commence to report Monday morning when the resolutions will be voted on as brought before the convention.

Important Resolutions.

Among the most important resolutions pending, none of which has been debated or voted upon, are measures calling for:

A nation-wide unionization of all fire department employes.

A Federation investigation into the refusal of certain Boston unions to affiliate with the local building trades department.

Government loans from the postal savings banks to prospective home owners.

Compulsory affiliation of all local unions with city and State central bodies.

Minimum wage laws for women and minors employed in the textile and manufacturing establishments.

Investigation into charges that the White Hats of the Union deprive its members local autonomy.

Uniform labor legislation in the forty-eight States.

Revocation of International Association of Steamfitters charter, for non-compliance with past decisions of Federation.

Urge reforms in banking methods to prevent stocking men with credit at easy terms, of panics and justified declamation and high, of duty legislation.

Investigation of all the 1913 Panama Exposition in San Francisco.

The substitution of international arbitration for war, through a peace congress.

Going Up! Eggs Now 60c and Still Rising

No Profit in Fresh Egg Sandwiches at Five Cents Each These Days; Strike by Hens Said to Be on.

The restaurant man who sold a fresh egg sandwich yesterday for five cents not only didn't make any profit but he lost the price of his labor and the price of the bread. Eggs were selling for 60 cents a dozen. That means, of course, the big eggs.

This high price has hit Boston society as never before. Poultry dealers predicted that eggs would reach 75 cents a dozen this year. They are on their way toward it.

The cause of the high price is said to be the small supply of eggs. The hens seem to be on a strike.

A Montana man says that he feeds chickens $8 worth of food a week and gets only one egg a day. Similar stories come from other sections. The man who can make a hen lay a dollar has a fortune in store for him.

Lockes to Entertain.

"Stopped My Cough And Gave Me Health"

MRS. ILA BENJAMIN

Says Mrs. Ila Benjamin who calls it "The grandest medicine ever made." "It cured her of a cold when her doctor could give her no relief and built up her weak, rundown system after years of poor health.

"It is with great pleasure I write to tell you what I think of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I sincerely believe it is the grandest medicine ever made. It relieved me of a cough that my Doctor could not stop. I had been in poor health three years. I took lots of medicine, but none of it seemed to do me any good, till I heard of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and got three bottles and took it. Now I am better and I tell everyone how it helped me."—Mrs. Ila Benjamin, Woodhull, N. Y.

See How Easy It Drives Away Corns.

GET'S-IT Will Get Every Corn You've Got!"

At last, a real done-what-it-says corn cure. Nothing like it has ever before been known.

Every man and woman who has corns, callouses, warts or bunions ought to try "Gets-It" at once and see how marvelously it works. Quit shaving your corn with a razor. You may draw blood and cause blood poisoning.

"GETS-IT" is remarkable because it never irritates or turns the true flesh sore or raw. It can't. It is as safe as water. Stockings won't stick to it. Corn pains stop. The corn or callous shrivels up, comes out. Blessed relief!

"GETS-IT" is sold at druggists at 25 cents a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. Sold in Boston by Lawrence stores.

BULL MOOSE MAY ROAM UNHARMED

Protection for Deer on Harry Payne Whitney's Estate Guaranteed by State.

PITTSFIELD, Nov. 16.—Protection of moose, deer and all other wild animals and birds on October Mount, the 14,000 acre preserve in Pittsfield, Lenox, Washington, Lee and Becket, owned by Harry Payne Whitney, is assured for next week, "Deer Week" and afterwards through an agreement entered into by the Fish and Game Commission and Mr. Whitney. All over the preserve 200 notices have been posted by game wardens.

Under acts of 1902 the commissioners have authority for the creation and use of it as a park for making scientific investigation upon propagation of any useful wild birds and quadrupeds. Pursuit or injury to the animals is forbidden under a penalty of imprisonment for not more than six months or a fine of not more than $200.

The agreement bars Mr. Whitney or his friends from hunting on the preserve until it is terminated by consent of the State commissioners. Three moose, including a big bull moose, are now on the preserve, with many deer within the enclosure, which contains twenty miles of wire fence nine feet high.

HUB WOMAN HACKETT DEATH CASE WITNESS

Miss Ricker to Tell of Alleged Advice of Bert Raymond to Wife to "Burn Shoes."

Miss Anne Ricker, of No. 142 West Canton street, South End, will leave tomorrow morning for Augusta, Me., to be one of the principal witnesses for the State of Maine in the trial of Mrs. Elsie Hobbs Raymond for the murder of Mattie Hackett seven years ago. The trial begins Tuesday.

The gist of Miss Ricker's testimony is the most mysterious and most important murder trial on the history of the Pine Tree State will be her seventeen year old grandniece, Gertrude Raymond, ten years old half sister, that she heard Bert Raymond, the defendant's husband, say to his wife the day of the murder.

"Well, Elsie, you'd better be sure and burn the boots you wore last night."

Miss Ricker is an aunt of Mrs. Herbert Raymond of Mrs. Herbert Raymond is a brother of Bertram, more commonly known as "Bert" Raymond, husband of Mrs. Elsie Hobbs Raymond. Miss Ricker was visiting her niece, Mrs. Herbert Raymond, at the time of the murder of Mattie Hackett at Readfield, Me., on August 17, 1905. She says that her grandniece Gertrude, happened to go over to Readfield to see her "Aunt Elsie" the very day after the murder.

Miss Ricker was seen yesterday at her bulding on West Canton street. This is the story, she said, that she is prepared to give at the Raymond murder trial in Augusta

At the time of the murder of Mattie Hackett I was visiting in Readfield. I was visiting Herbert Raymond, a brother of Bert Raymond, whose wife is now on trial

Herbert Raymond married my niece I am no blood kin to the Raymonds.

I myself never saw Mrs. Elsie Raymond, nor her husband during that visit. I never saw Mattie Hackett. But my niece's daughter, Gertrude Raymond, who was then ten years old and is now seventeen, went to her "Uncle Bert's" home the day after the murder, and before any suspicion against Mrs. Elsie Raymond had been talked of. Gertrude told us when she came home that the Raymonds house was in a terrible state. Elsie was a slave a careful housekeeper. But the child said that, although it was late in the afternoon, the bed was not made, the dishes were not washed and everything was topsy-turvy

She didn't notice anything strange or unusual in Mrs. Raymond or her Uncle Bert. But she caught just one sentence that seemed to stick in her mind during their talk with each other, and she told us that sentence. It has stuck in my mind ever since. I can never forget it

Gertrude told us she heard Uncle Bert and Aunt Elsie talking, and that she heard Uncle Bert say.

"Well, Elsie, you'd better be sure and burn the boots you wore last night."

That is all I can tell about the case.

It will be remembered that shoe prints were found in a field nearby the spot where Mattie Hackett was strangled at Readfield. Detectives believed that the imprints were made by a woman living in Readfield. The Bert Raymond house was searched. The shoes worn by Mrs. Raymond the day of the search were larger than the foot-prints measurements. But it was declared she usually wore smaller ones. Mrs. Raymond was questioned about burning any shoes.

MISS ETHEL REHAN, OFFERED OPPORTUNITY BEFORE FOOTLIGHTS

GOLD MEDAL BEAUTY GETS A STAGE OFFER

Quickly following the announcement yesterday that Miss Ethel Rehan of No. 566 Beach street, Revere, was one of five girls to win a $100 gold medal in the National Prize Beauty Contest, conducted by the Sunday AMERICAN and its allied newspapers, Miss Rehan was offered a position in the big company that comes to the Raubert Theatre next Monday evening to present "The Passing Show of 1912." The offer came from the management of the theatre

Miss Rehan is a dancer and for several years has directed her studies with a view to going on the stage. Her sister, Vivien, is a professional dancer. Miss Ethel, how ever, did not want to make her debut as a dancer, and because of that has been holding in abeyance an offer to go into vaudeville.

Miss Rehan, as an attendant at the Rogers Street Baptist Church, has appeared in many amateur plays and has been praised for her cleverness as an actress.

'BILLY' MURRAY OF LOWER HOUSE DIES

Representative "Billy" Murray of Ward 3, Charlestown, one of the youngest and best-liked of the Boston legislators, died yesterday at his home, No. 42 Corey street.

"Billy" lived long enough to see himself re-elected for his fourth consecutive term, the first Representative ever given that honor by Ward 3 Democrats.

He was only twenty-eight years old. When he went up to the State House last January he was greeted joyously by his fellow-legislators, Democrats and Republicans alike, on account of his good fellowship. He will be missed there when the boys reassemble at New Year's.

There was sorrow throughout Ward 3 when his death became known. But there was the sad consolation for the voters that they had shown their confidence and loyalty in "Billy" up to the last.

Flip-Flops—And Men's Right Suits

"WHEN I was a little chap," remarked the Men's Clothes Man, "I went with my father to the circus. The most vivid picture I took home with me was that of a man turning a complete flip-flop right off his feet on the tan-bark.

"A few years later I was surprised to hear that a circus man had turned a double flip-flop. Everybody was talking about it. Then somebody turned three flip-flops at a time. Whereupon the public expected four or five. And the fellow who had turned three was regarded as slow.

"The other day, while in New York planning my next Spring clothes campaign, I got to thinking of that flip-flop business, and the thing struck home. Must have been a bit fagged, or inclined to the indigo; for I caught myself saying:

"'No matter how much a manufacturer of clothes may put into his product, no matter how much wisdom and care the retailer may put into the selling of those clothes, the public will marvel for a while and then look for another flip-flop.'

"My rather gloomy ruminations were interrupted by a man who called me by name and looked pleasant. Couldn't get him at first, but then I remembered, that I had known him a good many years ago as a manufacturer of high-grade clothes for men

"'Why haven't I heard anything of you?' I asked.

"'Because I have been out of the clothes business for five years,' he said.

"We chatted on for a minute and then he remarked:

"'I see you are wearing a ———— suit.'

"He was right. Out of the clothes business five years, yet he knew at a glance that the suit worn by me that day was made by a certain house!

"That set me to thinking. Perhaps I was wrong about that flip-flop thing. The longer I thought about it the surer I was that the added flip-flop—by which I mean achievement—does count after all. Certainly it counts in the making of men's clothes.

"Take the suits of this make for example—the kind I was wearing and the kind that man knew at a glance.

"We brought them into the Filene men's store as one of our exclusive lines. We provided five models, representing the main classifications of physique, each a distinctive style. We were warned that they possess too much individuality for New England men.

"But it turned out they possess just the kind of individuality New England men want. Which is proved by the fact that we have sold more of them than of any other make—so many that we have done a good deal of reordering.

"Now that proves two things. First, that achievement in clothes counts. Secondly, that New England men know it when they see it. Their only trouble was they hadn't had full opportunity of seeing it until Filene specialization took hold of the problem for them and put it across."

And it proves this other thing to us—we have a pretty good Men's Clothes Man!

Won't YOU, Mr. Boston American Man, come in and get acquainted with him and the kind of suits and topcoats he has here for you?

Filene's

A Dream That Has Come True

FOR YEARS one of our merchandising dreams had been to give to New England distinctively Filene shops for jewelry and leather goods—shops limited to the doing of certain things well rather than many things indifferently. In other words, specialty shops.

Dreaming turned to planning, and planning to the four corners of the earth, until one day the doors opened and the curtain rose upon real Filene shops of jewels and related things.

ALMOST instantly the venture came into public appreciation. Friends old and new realized that here was specialization of the highest order, the efforts of a few trained men directed solely at the few things they have been trained to do.

Just as these friends had found Filene made-ready apparel right and reasonably-priced because of our concentration upon that one thing, so they find Filene jewelry and leather goods right and reasonably-priced because of concentration by experts.

For the reason that we eliminate yardage from our store in general we eliminate table ware, clocks and luggage from these new shops—preferring to do the few things well.

MUCH of the success of the jewelry and leather goods shops may be traced to certain essentials that made the old store successful and the new store more successful even than anticipated.

As was to have been expected, the organization of a selling staff so large as this was not accomplished without the making of some mistakes. Too many men or women here—too few there—and some unwise choosing.

But the rearrangement and elimination natural to the organization of a large new staff have been and will be comparatively small. So that the jewelry shops, like the store in general, feels that it is almost in final readiness.

AS to prices, we see no more reason for a large margin of profit on a hatpin or a watch or a handbag than upon a hat or a coat. Why list one as a necessity and the other as a luxury?

Therefore Filene prices pertain throughout the jewelry and leather goods stocks. Prices that reflect wise buying.

Wise buying is cash buying. And every dollar's worth of goods in Filene's has been purchased at best possible cash discounts.

These discounts we pass on to our patrons. To us they simply have been keys with which to unlock the doors of best choosing.

THIS week we propose to make a great many new acquaintances for the jewelry and leather goods shops. To do this we shall name special prices on a number of new needfuls. Tomorrow's newspapers will contain a few of the details.

Remember that everything is new and up-to-the-minute in style.

Remember that the needs of men and little folk are looked after as those of women.

Remember that there is no crowding—that a good portion of the first floor is given over to these new things—things primely seasonable with Christmas just around the corner.

A MASTER STROKE IN FURS—This shall be another fur week in the Filene store. And to emphasize the fact we shall present, beginning Wednesday morning, a congress of fur garments and pieces in our full battery of street windows. Among these will be furs provided especially for the occasion. A good portion of these furs will be on view in the fur shops (sixth floor) tomorrow prior to their being placed in the windows.

DEMOCRATS SAY THAT PEOPLE SHOULD NAME NEXT SENATOR

But Sunday American Poll Shows Republican Regulars Almost as Unanimously Opposed to Selection of Crane's Successor by Hurried Primary

Eleven Democrats and Eight Republicans Name Their First Choice; Fitz Popular With the Democrats; Crane, Weeks and McCall Among Republicans

JUDGED by a Sunday AMERICAN poll of legislators-elect, the January battle for the election of a United States Senator, to succeed W. Murray Crane, will be far and away the most hotly contested in all the history of Massachusetts.

The Republican Old Guard will insist upon a Republican caucus, into which every Republican must march and by the result of which every Republican must abide. The choice of such a contest, from present indications, would probably be Congressman John W. Weeks of Newton, the Boston banker. Mr. Weeks is a Stand Patter.

Most of the Democrats, all the Progressives and some Republicans—the latter led by Congressman Gardner—will do what they can to get away from the caucus idea. Some favor a free-for-all event, in the joint convention of Senate and House, with nobody bound by a caucus vote. Others want a popular primary, the voters marching to the polls and indicating their senatorial preference to the Legislature. The battle against a caucus will early develop one of the bitterest phases of the contest.

No Republican Names Draper; Twenty-One Are Undecided.

Nearly seventy members of the new Legislature today take the readers of the Sunday AMERICAN into their confidence.

Eight Republicans name their first choices.

One is for Guild, one for Plunkett and two each for Weeks, Crane and McCall.

Eleven Democrats are equally prompt with the name of their favorite.

Seven name Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston. There is one vote each for Governor Foss, Congressman Curley and former Congressmen John B. Thayer of Worcester and John J. Mitchell of Marlboro.

Here again there is a surprise that nobody mentions the name of Colonel William A. Gaston. Twenty-two Democrats are not ready to commit themselves.

More interesting even than these figures of the poll is that in the Legislature the two older parties are practically agreed in favor of the THEORY of the direct choice of United States Senators, but widely apart on the question of putting that theory into practice at the present time.

Democrats are Willing to Let the People Decide.

The Democrats, in nearly every case, are willing to adopt any workable plan by which the people may indicate whom they want sent to the Senate in Mr. Crane's place. Out of thirty Republicans, on the other hand, fifteen are openly opposed to any such plan, eleven are silent and only three in favor of it.

Unless the progressive Republicans get busy immediately and effectually, therefore the successor of Winthrop Murray Crane in the United States Senate may be one of the "insiders" of the Republican State machine, picked by an old-fashioned caucus of Republican legislators.

Republican legislators-elect—almost to a man—seem today to be opposed to any plan by which the people may be allowed to indicate their choice.

The Democratic members, on the contrary—almost to a man—favor a primary. The Sunday AMERICAN has been fa

MRS. J. L. KELLEY, KILLED SUDDENLY BY HEART FAILURE

Crusade for Later Train Service from Boston Bears Fruit

D. O. Ives Announces New Haven Will Start Theatre Trains to Framingham and Worcester at 11:40

Additional train service after theatres for residents of South Framingham and Worcester is the first direct result of the Boston AMERICAN'S crusade for late trains.

Mayor Fitzgerald yesterday received a letter from D. O. Ives, manager of the transportation department of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, notifying him that the Boston & Albany Railroad had granted the request of the chamber for later accommodations for out-of-town theatregoers.

It was at the request of the Boston AMERICAN that Mayor Fitzgerald urged the chamber to consider the matter of relieving a situation whereby Boston was bottled up for thousands of out-of-town people shortly after 11 p. m.

Manager Ives has communicated with the New Haven and the Boston & Maine and answers from these roads are expected shortly. The letter of Manager Ives follows:

In response to your communication of October 18th, which was referred to the transportation department and considered by the committee on transportation, I was instructed to take the matter up with the various railroads. The only definite advice so far received is the following from the traffic manager of the Boston & Albany:

"We change time on November 24th, and effective then, we have arranged that our train 69, which now leaves Boston at 11:30 p. m., will leave at 11 40 p. m. This train makes the South Framingham stop. This will give the South Framingham people service at 11:15, 11 25 and 11 40 and will give the Worcester people service at 11 15 and 11:40. This seems the best we can do at the present time and I hope will be satisfactory."

We have received advice from the New Haven that the matter will be looked into and further reply made later and presume we will hear soon from that road and the Boston & Maine.

I merely send this to you as a report of progress. Yours truly,
(Signed) D. O. IVES,
Manager Transportation Dept.

Let the Women Share in the Glories of War

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue, New York, advises women to share the glories of war as well as to pay the penalties, as they have done in the past. He spoke at Ford Hall yesterday, under the auspices of the School Voters' League, saying:

You say that a woman's greatest charm is her mystery, as does Loti. The veiled woman of mystery may be an altogether fitting denizen of a harem, but she is not the woman who lives and labors in our day and generation.

Too long have women been satisfied to endure grimly, and silently to send her loved ones to be slain and to slay. She has shared none of war's so-called glories, but has paid all of its real and terrible penalties. For one thing, after man has failed woman has learned how to heal war's bruised and broken victims.

TRAGEDY BRIDE IS FOUND DEAD IN BED

Mrs. J. L. Kelley, for Whom Gamaliel Bradford, 3d, Killed Self, Dies Suddenly.

END IN GREAT BARRINGTON

Girl Who Wed Six Weeks After Suitor's Suicide Succombs to Heart Failure.

The suicide of Gamaliel Bradford, 3d Harvard graduate, descendant of a famous early Governor of Massachusetts and son of Gamaliel Bradford, Jr., of Boston and Wellesley, author and publicist, was recalled in a particularly pathetic manner when news reached Boston yesterday of the sudden death in Great Barrington of Mrs. Elizabeth Corcoran Kelley, for love of whom Gamaliel Brandford, 3d, shot himself two years ago.

Mrs. Kelley, who had refused to wed young Bradford in the face of his suicidal threat, became the bride of Joseph Kelley, a telegraph operator, six weeks later. They went to Pittsfield to live.

Mrs. Kelley recently had suffered acutely from rheumatism. She had [illegible] case. A month ago she went to her mother's home in Great Barrington hoping to benefit her health.

She failed to gain. Instead she complained of pains in the region of the heart. She was found dead in bed, and the medical examiner's finding is that death was due to heart trouble.

Mrs. Kelley was Elizabeth Corcoran, a telegraph operator for the Boston banking firm of Bond & Goodwin [illegible] Ocean Spray, Winthrop, when Gamaliel Bradford, 3d., was so tragically in love with her.

She went to South Framingham [illegible] visit in August, 1910. On the 8th of that month young Bradford went from his home in Wellesley Hills to South Framingham to make a final appeal to her to become his bride.

Miss Corcoran declared she could not marry him. She was engaged to Joseph Kelley, and loved him. She knew no reason why she should break her engagement and marry Bradford.

"I shall not care to live if you reject me," Bradford said.

"I cannot do differently," replied Miss Corcoran. "I am very sorry to hurt your feelings."

Bradford said he would go back to the Kendall House, where he had engaged a room, and end his life. The girl did not take him seriously, though she realized he was despondent over being rejected.

But Bradford carried out his threat to the letter. Going to the hotel and his room, he sent a bullet into his brain. Miss Corcoran fainted when the news was broken to her. But she recovered from the shock, and six weeks later was married to Kelley.

MILEAGE FOR M. D'S.

Northampton Doctors to Charge According to Distance Travelled.

NORTHAMPTON, Nov. 16.—Mileage charges for medical attendance will be made by Northampton physicians hereafter. In order to meet the increased cost of living the medical men have voted to adopt a sliding scale of prices for house visits in place of the customary flat rate of $2. Under the new scale calls within a mile and a half of the physician's office will cost the patient $2 and an additional charge of fifty cents will be made for each mile beyond.

FAIR AND COLD TODAY.

Bears Control Weather Market, Says One Mr. Smith.

The bears have got hold of the weather market, and downward today goes the mercury, though the temperature generally may not be much more chilly than it was yesterday, Smith, the weather man says it's a good suggestion to get ready for real Winter by a laying-on of wraps and coats and a laying-in of a plentiful supply of woolens for the wardrobe.

"Fair today. Moderate westerly winds."

FIND BODY OF SLAIN BOY.

Buffalo Police End Search of Over a Year.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 16.—After a search lasting for more than a year the police of Lackawanna, heeding a postal card received two days ago, this morning found the badly decomposed body of Joseph Josephs, seven years old, in an abandoned outhouse. Evidence of foul play was apparent. The boy's disappearance excited the State at the time. It was believed he had been kidnaped by Syrians and was being held for ransom.

URGE CHINA TO FIGHT.

President Yuan Asked to Act by Hundreds of Messages.

PEKIN, Nov. 16.—Hundreds of telegrams urging a declaration of war against Russia were received by President Yuan Shi Kai today. Outer Mongolia must be defended, according to the popular clamor, at all costs.

The situation has reached the point where Yuan may be overthrown unless he takes drastic action. The offer of France and Japan to mediate the trouble is universally opposed.

PREXY LOWELL'S SISTER A POET

BOSTON COLOR IN BOOK

Dainty Children's Poems and Thoughtful Lyrics Among the Pieces.

Boston society is taking to poetry.

The members are reading and talking about the first volume of poetry ever published by a member of this exclusive set.

Miss Amy Lowell, sister [illegible] Lowell of Harvard, has this hon[illegible]. Her volume, just from the press, is called "A Dome of Many-Colored Glass."

Miss Lowell is an exception to the rule that society people of Boston find little to do outside their social functions. Her library is one of the largest in Massachusetts belonging to a woman, and is full of rich and rare books.

Began Writing Two Years Ago.

She began seriously to write poetry about two years ago. Her first efforts attracted little attention, but, being a woman of leisure, she has spent much thought and time on the ways to express beautiful thoughts in verse.

Many profitable hours she has passed in the Boston Athenaeum. These she commemorates in a poem in blank verse, which has proved the best of her efforts to describe local objects of interest. She [illegible] the Boston Athenaeum:

Thou dear and well loved haunt of happy hours,
How often in some distant gallery hast I passed
Long, peaceful hours seated on the floor
Of some retired nook, all lined with books.

Her verse shows much coloring as she pictures here and there a scene in this well known place of old books and talks about

The noisy city-sounds of modern [illegible]
Float softened to us across the old graveyard.

Very Fond of Boston.

Miss Lowell is very fond of Boston and its many associations. Living a quiet life in her beautiful home on Heath street Brookline she has gained many friends here, and to them some of her [illegible] and sonnets are dedicated.

Naughty little speckled trout,
Can't I coax you to come out?
Is it such great fun to play
In the water every day?

Do you pull the Naiads' hair
Hiding in the lilies there?
Do you hunt for fishes' eggs
Or watch tadpoles grow their legs?

Do the little trouts have school
In some deep sun-glinted pool,
And in recess play at tag
Round the bed of purple flag?

I have tried so hard to catch you,
Hours and hours I've sat to watch you
But you never will come out,
Naughty little speckled trout.

Other Verses.

In several of her poems the beauty of New Hampshire hills has been painted in vivid colors. Then she is fond of the sea.

Her lyric poems, which compose the best part of the book, are, according to good judges, specimens of poetry. One poem read many times before gatherings of the literary in Back Bay, is this:

PETALS.

Life is a stream
On which we strew
Petal by petal the flower of our heart;
The end lost in dreams,
They float past our view,
We only watch their glad early start.

Freighted with hope,
Crimsoned with joy,
We scatter the leaves of the opening rose;
Their widening scope,
Their distant employ,
We shall never know the stream as it flows.

Sweeps them away,
Each one is gone
Ever beyond in infinite ways.
We alone stay
While years hurry on,
The flower flared forth, though its fragrance still stays.

LONDON'S CAPTURED!

Suffragette Army Enters Capital After March from Edinburgh.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The suffragette army which started from Edinburgh on October 12 completed its 400-mile tramp to London this afternoon, having taken exactly five weeks for the journey. Under the leadership of Mrs. De Fontblanque, who traveled on horseback, they proceeded immediately to the Prime Minister's residence in Downing street and presented their petition demanding suffrage for women. Premier Asquith had retired to the country for the week-end. His secretary, however, accepted the document and there was no untoward incident.

MISS MARGARET LIONBERGER

Harvard Athlete's Pluck Captures St. Louis Girl's Heart After Rift in Love Affair.

WHEN "Don" Cutler used to play hockey at the S[illegible] in the Back Bay, and later was a star in hockey at Harvard, he earned the sobriquet "The Man Who Wouldn't Give Up." That characteristic [illegible] many a hard-fought [illegible] the glassy surface of the [illegible].

It has served him even better in his fight for the girl he loves. Brookline and Boston social circles buzzed with pleasant excitement yesterday when it became known that Cutler's engagement to Miss Margaret Lionberger, an heiress of St. Louis, once broken, had been mended thoroughly, and was better than new.

The news went further, adding that the marriage day had been set. The wedding is to take place at the Lionberger home in St. Louis on December 7.

"Love at First Sight."

Love at first sight, an engagement, parental interference, the return of the ring, a second [illegible] these are the features of the romance of the young man who wouldn't give up when he was playing hockey and who wouldn't give up his sweetheart.

Donald F. Cutler is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred B. Cutler of No. 57 Upland road, Brookline. He was a brilliant athlete all through his school and college career. He was on the Harvard varsity hockey team. It was while he was at Harvard that his romance started.

On a visit to Marion he met Miss Lionberger. She is the daughter of a wealthy St. Louis business man who has a Summer home at Marion. Miss Lionberger possesses unusual beauty, besides having outdoor and athletic [illegible] that fully accord with those of Cutler.

Parents Gave In.

The young couple played tennis. Miss Lionberger [illegible] at it. They [illegible] together. The girl is an expert equestrienne. Those were great days for Cupid [illegible] little [illegible] who is always [illegible] for any game of hearts. The engagement was announced and the young couple were duly congratulated.

But it seems that the parents of the girl had not been consulted. Anyhow, after a time it was announced that the engagement had been dissolved.

But the [illegible] hockey player of Harvard was used to interference of all kinds and he promptly began to combat it. The parents of the young woman were [illegible] [illegible] a few days [illegible]

DIRECTORS OF PORT URGE GREAT DRY DOCK TO FLOAT HUGE LINERS

The construction of Commonwealth dock.

The more immediate utilization of the 6,000,000 feet of made land belonging to the State in South Boston.

The speedy deepening of the channel until a depth of forty feet at mean low water is reached.

Renewal of efforts to remove differentials affecting the volume of our exports.

These are the chief features of the program of Chairman Bancroft of the Port Directors, as outlined in a report to the board, which may form the basis of their report to the Legislature.

The report is a remarkably complete and comprehensive document, covering twenty seven typewritten pages.

It commences by enumerating the physical advantages of the harbor, which is large and perfectly sheltered with its piers only an hour distant from the open sea.

As Sandy Hook lightship is two hours from the New York piers, and as Baltimore, Philadelphia and Montreal are tremendous distances from the open sea Boston has a great advantage in this way.

The Broad Sound Channel has thirty five feet at low water and forty four and one half feet at high water and a width of 1,5[illegible]0 feet.

The main ship channel has also thirty five feet at low water and is 1200 feet wide. Vessels loaded to thirty-two feet can enter or leave at any hour, and this ton an anchorage basin 1,000 feet wide and one mile long, dredged to thirty feet at low water. This is in addition to the natural anchorage at President Roads, where the water is from forty to sixty feet deep.

REPORT PLANS FOR GREAT PORT

The pier owners have dredged slips alongside steamship piers to a depth of from 30 to 35 feet. The State has supplied these slips with similarly deep connections of ample width with the main channel.

The report declares that the Boston & Maine piers are too short and cannot be lengthened, that the passenger accommodation is inferior at the Hoosac, and the Mystic piers doubly unsuitable for passenger ships.

The Boston & Albany terminal is modern, with piers 780 feet long. For passengers and freight it is not convenient to Boston. All in all, these piers are the best in the harbor.

The New Haven terminal at South Boston has antiquated piers, but they could be refitted without excessive cost. They vary from 770 to 1,000 feet in length, and have from 26 to 30 feet of water alongside.

Both for passengers and local freight, South Boston is the most desirable situation in the harbor.

The Atlantic avenue piers are, in many cases, too short and cannot be lengthened. They cannot be supplied with adequate railroad connection. The enormous warehouses upon these piers make them extraordinarily valuable and adds to the difficulties of any radical rearrangement of this waterfront.

Big New Drydock Is Needed.

Bulk freight at the various piers is well handled. The battery of coal hoists at the New England Coal & Coke Company are models.

In Boston, as in the competitive American ports, there is no commercial drydock suitable for the larger ships in the foreign or coast-wise trade. The largest dock here is 465 feet long. The Navy Yard dock, which is 725 feet long can accommodate any ship now coming into port, but is available only when not in use by the navy. It is doubtful if it would be available for repairs that would tie it up for more than a short time.

It is imperative that each steamship line that comes here shall be served by cars of all three railroads, so that the waterline may have the territory of all to draw from and to supply. Switching charges must not interfere with this interchange.

At present the New Haven reaches the Boston & Maine piers by detouring its cars so far as possible before they reach Boston. Otherwise, cars are exchanged via the Union Freight Railroad. The New Haven similarly detours all freight possible designed for East Boston. After striking the Boston & Albany's main line, New Haven freight gets to East Boston over the Grand Junction Railroad.

The Boston & Albany would reach East Boston by detouring its freight at South Framingham or exchanging with the New Haven at South Boston. It reaches Charlestown via the Grand Junction, exchanging with the Boston & Maine at Somerville.

For the exchange of freight between coastwise steamers and ocean carriers or between the coastwise and rail carriers the dray is the usual medium. Lighterage is becoming customary and there is room for considerable development of lighterage in the harbor. The larger part, but by no means all, the freight transshipped in this manner is sent at through rates.

Question of Switching Charges.

There are no channel dues in Boston, and the steamship lines pay no rental. The railroads which own the pier exact a wharfage charge on all city freight which is not charged on goods hauled by the railroad. Coastwise steamers usually rent their piers or berths from the owner at market rates.

In cases where goods arrive over one railroad for export at the terminal of another, or are imported at the terminal of one road for interior shipment over another, then, in either case, the railroad owning the terminal makes a charge to the other road for its services in switching car to or from its terminal and for loading or unloading it. The switching charge is at least 50 cents per ton.

Through freight usually gets this charge absorbed by the railroad, but New England freight usually finds the switching charge added to the rate.

As regards sources of traffic, it is found that the manufactures of New England were valued at $2,670,065,000, using raw material valued at $1,476,297,000.

The competition of New York for this New England business is strong. It has steamship connections with all parts of the world. As there are no steamship lines docking at the New Haven's South Boston terminal all of the New Haven's import and export freight pays the switching charge of the other railroads.

Despite the lighterage charges on New Haven freight in New York, that city has an advantage over Boston because of our switching charges.

Our effort must be to have the Boston rate on all railroads made to apply to freight delivered to or received from any pier in the port.

Boston is farther away from Chicago than any of the competing seaports, and the differentials in railroad rates handicap her severely.

This affects our exports, which are largely from the West, but our imports, which are chiefly for New England, are not affected.

On imports it is absolutely essential that Boston holds the Baltimore rate, which she now enjoys.

Boston's Export Future at Stake.

Boston's future as regards exports is to be found in the growth of Canada, toward which we are better situated than Baltimore or Philadelphia.

Although we have ten sailings a week to the South Atlantic ports, we have no steamship line to the Gulf. New York has nine regular sailings per week to Mobile, New Orleans and Galveston.

Yet New England industries are heavily interested in transportation to the Southwest. We now ship very largely to this territory via New York, and pay a high local rate before the goods are placed aboard the connecting steamer at New York.

When one considers that it costs 93 cents a 100 pounds for cotton from Texas common points to Lowell, and the rate for 100 pounds of cotton from Galveston to Liverpool is only 65 cents, we see what Boston loses by not having a direct Texas line.

We must also have a service to the Pacific Coast as soon as the Panama Canal is opened. This is the equivalent of a transcontinental line, and in point of low rates will give us what no transcontinental line could do.

Our coastwise trade at present is far greater than our foreign trade. During 1911 there were 1,876 vessels, with a tonnage of 2,007,821, employed in our foreign trade, against 10,240 vessels, with a tonnage of 11,905,887.

Boston Closer to Europe.

If Boston is farther away from Chicago, the trunk line centre, than any of the other big ports, it is nearer Europe. Boston is 110 nautical miles nearer Liverpool than Montreal, 194 miles nearer than New York, 337 miles nearer than Philadelphia and 493 miles nearer than Baltimore.

Boston is also nearer to all the east coast of South America including Rio Janeiro and Buenos Ayres and nearest to all Africa of American ports. It is nearest to Asia and Australia via the present trade routes the Suez Canal and the Straits of Magellan.

When the Panama Canal is opened we shall lose our advantage in respect to the west coast of South America, but Boston will be only 681 miles off the Summer route and 460 miles off the Winter route from Liverpool to the canal. Boston will be a convenient port of call for these new foreign lines. By means of them we can hope for first-class steamers to the west coast of South America, the Philippines, China and Japan.

There is some slight leeway allowed for the Boston steamship lines to Europe to cut export rates to equalize the unfavorable differentials.

During the last eleven years our imports have more than doubled in value, while our exports have been cut in two. Boston's imports since 1901 have not only steadily increased, but at a greater rate than imports into the whole United States.

There are two conspicuous causes for the decline of exports, the diminishing export of foodstuffs from the United States and unfavorable railroad rates from competitive territory.

The entire exports of New England are insufficient to support a port of the first magnitude. The exports of the Middle West are much needed. The loss of export back is the serious factor disclosed by a study of the volume and trend of our foreign trade.

The result of Boston's relative deficiency in exports is that many ships in the foreign trade bringing imports here go to other ports for part or all their export cargo. More than one-third of our total foreign tonnage does this.

Because of this New York and Montreal not only reach ports and lands which we do not touch, but also by direct service ports that we only reach indirectly. The Boston railroads do not to any great degree control the routing of export freight, though they can and do solicit exports for their connecting ocean lines.

Our chief hope for export tonnage lies in Canadian grain. Fully half of Boston's export grain comes from Canada even at present. A second hope for export lies in cotton. Finally we have great reason to hope that our attractions as a passenger port will compensate lines between Boston and England for deficiencies in outward cargo.

Regarding a drydock the report says:

"Thorough surveys and borings have developed an extensive ledge which appears to be an admirable site for a drydock on the Commonwealth property on the south side of the harbor. It seems probable that a great drydock can be constructed here for considerable less than has previously been estimated, because of the saving in the cost of the foundation.

"A tentative plan for the improvement of the property which the State now owns north and south of the harbor has been approved by the directors and submitted to the United States engineer officer in charge."

HAS PLAYED MANY PARTS.

J. S. Robertson Has Run Range of Tragedy and Comedy.

John S. Robertson, who plays the leading male part with Rose Stahl, has been in his time a player of many parts, and looks back on a career which ranges from Shakespeare to pure farce. "I don't think," said Mr. Robertson recently, "that any player is ever happier than when he is making his beginnings. Success in a measure dulls the sensation of enjoyment which comes with accomplishment when one is striving to attain that position. I have spoken with many players of this, and the majority of them seem to agree with this fact. I remember very well my own first experiences on the stage. It was with Robert Dowling, the Shakespearean actor, at the Boston Theatre. I had made up my mind to be an actor, so I enlisted in the army of supers, my pay being 50 cents a night, of which 25 cents went to the super captain. Well, any way, in that first piece, although I was a bowling mob and my lines consisted of angry shouts, I acted the whole play inside myself, and to such result that Mr Downing engaged me for a member of his company, and I got my first real chance to act."

CORN SHOW HERE.

Prizes for New England Farmers at Exhibition.

Agriculturists of New England will be in Boston this week at the annual New England Corn Exposition, which will be opened in Horticultural Hall on Wednesday morning and continue through Sunday, November 24.

More than a thousand exhibits of corn will be judged, the premium list amounting to $4,000 in cash and trophies. Among the latter are two silver cups known as the President Taft cups, which are the grand sweepstakes. There are also six big silver cups offered by the Governors of the six New England States.

DEVELOPING BUST

Mlle. Merlyn, America's greatest authority on Health and Beauty Culture, advises deep breathing each morning and night, massaging the parts with Melorose Beauty Cream each night, and each morning bathe the parts with cold salt water. Take White's Vaucaire Galega Tablets four times a day, drink water freely and within a very reasonable time excellent results will be noticed. It is essential that you take the Vaucaire remedy that contains the GENUINE IMPORTED GALEGA such as Willard White Company's does, and to be on the safe side ask for this brand, take no substitutes, as they are worthless and a waste of time.

The tablets are more of a food than a medicine, and are perfectly harmless. Easy to take.

Not only does Mlle. Merlyn indorse this method, but also all high authorities on beauty culture and beauty writers and thousands of women who have successfully used them. White's Vaucaire Galega Tablets are no new experiment.

MADAME DE LE VIE

The world's greatest writer and lecturer on Health and Beauty Cult, recommends only Willard White Company's Vaucaire Galega Tablets for developing the bust and as a general tonic and flesh builder and maintains that they are much better than the liquid. Houghton & Dutton sell this wonderful preparation at 79 cents for the $1 size box and will fill mail orders.

MORE leading actresses use the famous Melorose preparations than any other kind. Indorsed by thousands.

BLANCHE RING,

Playing in "The Wall St. Girl," is loud in her praise for the Melorose preparations, and writes the following letter:

M'NAMARA WANTED TO DIE, SAYS WITNESS

Action Planned After News of Result of the Los Angeles Explosion.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 16.—Muncie, Ind., was the favorite dynamite and nitroglycerin storage place for the McNamaras and McManigal, according to testimony given at the dynamite conspiracy trial in the Federal Court here today. Thousands of pounds of dynamite and the hundreds of quarts of nitroglycerin were hauled carelessly through and up and down the streets of this little city by Ortie McManigal, J. J. and J. B. McNamara in innocent looking boxes loaded on drays.

In corroboration of McManigal's testimony the government introduced Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Grant as witnesses. The Grants lived next door to the nitroglycerine cache in a vacant house at No. 227 North Enright street, in 1909.

"We saw them drive up there with wagon loads of boxes," said Mrs. Grant, "and we used some of their empty boxes for kindling, but we had no idea that they had had nitroglycerine in them."

Mrs. Grant, her husband and Mrs. Elizabeth Hines identified McManigal and the two McNamaras as the three men they saw about the vacant house.

Margaret Burns, the Pittsburgh jewelry clerk who sold McManigal a dozen alarm clocks in 1910, identified McManigal as the man to whom she made the sale.

That J. B. McNamara wanted to commit suicide when he heard the result of the Los Angeles Times explosion was the testimony of Frank Eckhoff of Cincinnati, a friend and neighbor of the McNamara family.

M'LEAN OFFERS SEAT.

Senator Wants Merger of G. O. P. and Progressives.

HARTFORD, Ct., Nov 16.—United States Senator McLean, in a statement issued here, asks Republicans and Progressives to get together, and offers to sacrifice his own senatorial office to get such a result.

Farmers Stirred by Prison Potato Sale

MIDDLEBORO, Nov. 16.—Sales in the retail market here of potatoes raised by prison labor on the State farm at Bridgewater have stirred farmers of this section, and as a result of their opposition members of the local Central Labor Union have been urged to stop buying the "spuds." As yet the C. L. U. has not acted officially on whether or not the sales are to be condemned by union labor.

The potatoes were described as having been particularly choice lots. Union men purchased them as well as householders generally. One effect of the present agitation against the buying of "tubers" raised by prison labor is a movement to organize the retail clerks of Middleboro into a union.

Fr. Gasson to Lecture.

The first of a series of lectures under the auspices of the Guild of St. Radegonde will be given this evening in Boston College Hall by the Rev. Fr. Gasson. The subject of the lecture will be "The Chasubled Soldier." The Guild is a society of Catholic nurses of which Rev. William F. Conway is the spiritual director.

BUSINESS COURSE OPENS IN JANUARY

The second course in Business Methods and Salesmanship, originated by Nathaniel C. Fowler, Jr., begins Tuesday night, January 14, in Union Hall, No. 48 Boylston street. The course will be under the personal direction of Mr. Fowler, and over 200 business men, educators, Harvard and Tech professors will appear on the stage taking an active part. Prominent men and women will appear as customers or as applicants seeking positions.

The course will occupy ten successive Tuesday evenings. Among the lecturers will be Director Fowler, Colonel Frank L. Locke, Dr. David Snedden, State Commissioner of Education; Professor Thomas Nixon Carver of Harvard, Dr. William Orr, Superintendent of Schools Dyer, David A. Ellis of the School Committee, Professor Frank V. Thompson, assistant superintendent of schools and others.

Among those to appear as customers or applicants for positions will be Attorney James M. Head, Professor Doten of Tech, William T. A. Fitzgerald, John J. Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. George Perry Morris, Professor and Mrs. Colin A. Scott, Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead, Mrs. G. Loring Briggs of Brookline, Miss Anne Withington of Newburyport and Miss Harriet E. Woods of Brookline.

25 CENT "DANDERINE" FOR FALLING HAIR AND DANDRUFF—GROWS HAIR

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast.

A little Danderine tonight—now—anytime—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application you will say it was the best investment you ever made. Your hair will immediately take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy; and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

The Magic Art of Growing Hair and Other Beauty Secrets By Miss Valeska Suratt

Valeska Suratt Is the Only Woman on the American Stage Who Wears No Puffs, "Rats" or Switches

Miss Suratt in Her $3,000 Black Velvet Costume Trimmed With Rhinestones

"You Should Notice the Difference in Your Hair Anyway in a Week or Ten Days."

ONCE I knew a lady, "and a very nice lady was she," whose comb was always tangled with a mass of broken and dying hair after she had finished combing it. Of course, some hair will always come out in the comb or brush, but what I mean is that at every combing she drew out almost enough hair in a week to make a good-sized pin cushion.

If her hair had not been naturally rapid in its growth she would by this time be almost bald. She had to wear rats and puffs and switches, of course, as most women do, to make up for lack of hair. She tried nearly everything under the sun, and quit disgusted.

That "nice lady" was myself. Now this lady, very remarkable as this may seem to you, wears no rats, no puffs, no switches. She has enough hair to make it up in any way she likes in a few minutes, without having to have recourse to any of these subterfuges.

How do I do it? How did I stop my hair from falling out after having tried everything recommended by my friends and most of the treatments advertised? It flashed across my mind one day, when I noticed that the falling hair was greatly decreasing in quantity, that the cause of it was a certain head-wash I had been using for some time. I at once experimented further, and found, what I have been able to prove since, is the most remarkable hair and scalp treatment I have ever used or heard of, and I have tried them nearly all.

Here it is: With a half-pint of water mix half a pint of alcohol. To this add one ounce of beta-quinol. Shake thoroughly, and it will then be ready to use. If you prefer you can use imported bay rum instead of the water and alcohol.

The beta-quinol you can get at almost any drug store for not more than fifty cents. The ordinary prepared hair tonics which you buy in the stores usually cost you one dollar. But this formula makes one full pint of the [illegible] hair grower and tonic one can ever hope to obtain.

This formula should be applied very freely on the scalp after brushing the scalp generously for a few minutes all over. Rub the tonic thoroughly into the scalp with the finger tips. This will surely stop your hair from falling out. You should notice the difference anyway in a week or ten days. After a while you should notice your hair beginning to take on new life. It will have a more silky appearance and will begin to grow so luxuriantly that it will be one of your greatest prides.

MRS. ELLEN T. asks: "What can I do to get rid of pimples? I have had them for years and no creams or lotions seem to do any good, in spite of the fact, too, that I am very careful what I eat."

The food you eat has really less to do with the presence of pimples than most people think. Besides, you can surely get rid of them without having to diet at all. If you will dissolve twelve ounces of granulated sugar in one-half pint of water, and add one ounce of sarsene and mix the whole together thoroughly, adding more water to make a pint, you will have one of the most splendid and effective pimple removers it is possible to obtain. Sarsene is a liquid which you can get at the drug store by the ounce. It makes a blood remedy which has an exceedingly wonderful purifying effect in a very short time. Take one or two teaspoonfuls of this mixture three or four times a day, with a little water if desired.

You will, of course, appreciate the fact that I am giving you something which is absolutely safe in every respect.

You will find the difference in your face in short order. I have had many use this formula, and it has invariably done its work in brilliant fashion.

FLORA FRECKLES—I am surprised you should consent to use such a rank poison on your face. This constitutes the main principle in most of the treatments sold for whitening the skin. It makes the skin rough, eats into the outer skin and usually ruins all prospects of ever beautifying the complexion. Some time ago I gave my readers my secret for whitening the skin, which I believe you will say is really a marvel. It will at the same time make your face bloom like a rose, and as soft as velvet. I will repeat it here in a few words.

Boil half a pint of water. Add two tablespoonfuls of glycerine. Keep stirring, while adding one ounce of zintone, until it is all dissolved. Then let cool. If the cream is too thick to pour easily from a bottle, thin it down a little with more hot water. The cream will be white and satiny. After bathing in the morning, hold a wet, hot towel to the face several times for several minutes. Rub this cream on the entire face liberally. Let the cream dry on the face. Repeat this again at night. Any good druggist will sell you an ounce of zintone for about fifty cents.

CORA H.—Many women complain of red, rough hands. If you will read my instructions above to Flora Freckles you will surely see the result in a short time. This formula will whiten and soften the arms and hands most beautifully.

MISS ENGAGED—I have had a great many requests for the best hair remover. Next Sunday I will give you full details and the formula. I use it constantly. The results will surprise you.

FONDA—"What shall I do for wrinkled hands? I am only 31 and they are a sight. Also for crow's feet."

This is one of my beauty formulas. I gave it some time ago, but will repeat it here.

In one-half pint of boiling water, pour two tablespoonfuls of glycerine. In a few minutes add two ounces of eptol and continue stirring until all is dissolved. At first it will look like jelly, then it will start to cream. When it does this, remove from the fire and stir constantly until cold. Keep in air-tight jar. You should be able to get eptol at any good drug store and it should not cost you more than fifty cents. This will last quite a while.

Apply this cream every morning with the tips of the fingers, after washing your face with very warm water and soap. Use very liberally. After you have applied it take up the flesh in your fingers, pinch it and roll it for a few minutes until the cream disappears. Then apply your complexion powder. This cream will not grow hair.

"This Hair Formula Is the Best I Have Ever Known."

NAMELESS—You will find a remarkable difference in your scrawny neck and lack of bust development by using the following:

In a half-pint of hot water dissolve two ounces of ruetone and half a cup of sugar, all well mixed together. Of this, take two teaspoonfuls three or four times a day in a wine glass of water, after your meals. I have found this to be a peculiar tonic, giving astonishing results in a few weeks' time. It will cost you one dollar at the drug store. It will do all you can ever ask of any treatment for this purpose. You will assist the development a great deal by massaging the bust with the eptol cream mentioned above.

EUNICE—If you will use the beta-quinol formula treatment given above on your eyebrows, you will find a decided result in a short time. It is a very powerful promoter of hair growth, the best I have ever known. It will do the work.—Advertisement.

'HURRY UP' SIGNS FOR XMAS SHOPPING

A campaign to educate Christmas shoppers in the busy down town streets to help relieve congestion of traffic will be begun by the Street Commissioners the coming week.

By signs and buttons the board hopes to be able to impress upon the holiday purchasers that a little consideration for the traffic rules will lead to more general comfort for all who are obliged to frequent the busy streets, as well as tending to relieve congestion.

The signs will be displayed on prominent sections of Washington, Tremont and Winter streets. They will inform pedestrians not to walk in more than pairs, to keep to the right of the sidewalk, not to stop in the middle of the sidewalk for conversation and similar instructions, which, if followed, the board believes will help greatly.

The buttons to be passed out by officers of the traffic squad will have appropriate mottoes, such as "Keep Moving."

Baldheaded Women? 'Nevaire!' Says Maria Gay 'Not While There Are Wigs,' Adds Opera Singer

MONG those who have read that the beautiful woman of the future is going to be baldheaded is Maria Gay. Maria Gay is the Apostle of Naturalness and also the only Carmen who throws orange peel at the orchestra, and bites pieces out of Don Jose with success.

Madame Gay, accompanied by her husband, Zenatello, was in Boston the other day and consented to be interviewed.

"Yes, I have heard," said Maria, "that the woman of the future is going to be baldheaded, but don't you believe it. No woman will ever be baldheaded, while she can buy a wig.

"There are baldheaded women now, lots of them, but nobody ever suspected it except their husbands and sometimes even they are deceived.

"If I were to tell you the famous women I know who are baldheaded it would create a sensation in operatic circles. How fortunate it is that I am discreet."

"Come on and tell," urged the interviewer. "You know you are dying to."

"Nevaire" exclaimed Madame Gay.

"But in the future, according to Dr. G. R. L. Cole of Washington, bald women will be considered beautiful and won't try to conceal their condition."

SUPPOSE MARY GARDEN LOST HER AUBURN LOCKS

"Then what is to become of grand opera," demanded Madame Gay.

"What's grand opera got to do with it?"

"Everything!"

"Bupose Mary Garden were baldheaded, which of course it is not, although I don't care for red hair myself, but suppose she were and she thought it was beautiful and wouldn't wear a wig, she could never play Melisande in "Pelleas et Melisande."

"Why not?"

"Because one scene represents Melisande at her tower window letting down her long golden hair in a shower, and Pelleas kisses and fondles the glowing tresses. How could he kiss the hair of a bald headed woman?" demanded Maria triumphantly.

If it must not be supposed that Maria speaks as eloquent English as the above paragraph, but writing dialect is hard work and it always makes the person concerned indignant.)

"That's a good point," the interviewer admitted.

"Sure," cried Maria. "I will tell you something else. If women didn't have any hair they would look just like men. It is the long hair that makes our features delicate and our eyes beautiful and our lips red. Shave our heads and we would have features as coarse as a man, not me, because I am exceptionally beautiful" (read in a roar of laughter from Maria), "but all other opera singers."

"Speaking of hair, can you imagine Marguerite without hair? Why few actresses ever had hair enough to play Marguerite. They have to wear a long braid down to their heels and in the last act let it hang loose.

WOMEN MUST HAVE HAIR FOR RIVALS TO PULL.

"And there is Mascagni's new opera, in which Lady Godiva rides through the street of Coventry, clothed in her hair. Where would she have been if she was bald headed, answer me that?

"She would have been pinched—in the booby hatch, that's where she would have been.

"Don't talk to me about bald-headed women. There never will be any."

"But Old Doc Cole says that hair is a sign of savagery."

"Well, women are savages, that's why they will always have hair. You can't civilize women. They never have bothered their heads about anything but love and babies, and they never will. When another woman tries to steal her admirer, a woman goes to her tell me that, if the rival was bald" rival's hair. What would she do,

"Women are always going to have sweethearts and wives, men are always going to try to steal them, so women will always have to have hair."

"I would borrow some of Giovanni's and make it into a wig," replied Maria. Zenatello, whose job when Maria is around is keeping quiet, broke into laughter at this, for to tell the truth, he hasn't hair enough for one.

"I think, though, that I would look better bald headed than most women I know," aded Maria. "If a woman has a fine figure, a beautiful face and wears a cap that comes down over her ears she might be bald headed and get along all right.

"But a fat woman with a bald head would be an abomination. and all fat opera singers would have to retire from the stage, thus giving us slender ones more opportunity."

Illustrations by William Stevens. "NO woman will be baldheaded as long as she can buy a wig," says Maria Gay

WANTS CHURCH TO BUILD APARTMENT

Brockton Woman's Plan Would Devote Profit to Paying Church Expenses.

BROCKTON, Nov. 16.—The Rev. Myra C. Hoyt, the energetic pastor of the Wales Avenue Baptist church, says some time ago her church got into the apartment house business as a private individual would.

The church society is paying off a debt on land on which the church building stands. After the society has a clear title to the land, Mrs. Hoyt proposes that an apartment house be erected adjoining the church and that the income derived from the building investment be used to defray the running expenses of the church.

When the apartment house is built and the church society becomes a landlord with flats to let, the question may be raised as to just what kind of tenants will be taken into the place.

Possibly tenants will be expected to join the church, which is the landlord. Certainly the tenant will be expected to pay rent very promptly if it is wrong to delay a landlord on a bill it must be twice as wrong to keep a church waiting.

But these questions will not come up for some time. The church has first to get its land paid for. Mrs. Hoyt suggests the building idea to the church leaders a few days ago and it met instant approval.

Mrs. Hoyt paid $1,000 on the land debt and $1,200 remains unpaid. When this is paid off the building proposition will be taken up with vim.

Cardinal Gibbons at Carrollton Ceremony

BALTIMORE, Nov. 16.—Dangerfield Manor, with its quaint chapel, where repose the remains of the first Charles Carroll of Carrollton, presented a spectacle of brilliancy that recalled to mind memories of many years gone by when the colonial estate of the signer of the Declaration of Independence was a mecca of the statesmen and distinguished folk of the nation.

After many years Dangerfield has again been opened. The festivities, made solemn at the outset by the celebration of pontifical high mass in the presence of Cardinal Gibbons and a score of Catholic clergymen of Maryland, marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of the wedding of Charles Carroll and Mrs. Carroll, who was Miss Susanna Bancroft, a granddaughter of the American historian.

For nearly a quarter of a century they have lived in Paris.

The festivities marked the resurrection of the historic estate and before long pilgrims from Baltimore or elsewhere will be able to visit the tomb of Charles Carroll of Carrollton.

LIGHTHOUSE KEEPERS PROTEST CONDITIONS

If the lighthouse keepers and their assistants were organized the majority of them would go on strike. That is what veterans in the service say, and members of their families hereabouts put it even stronger. They say the men in the service are dissatisfied generally and that they are not being treated right in many respects.

They complain that they don't get enough time off, and that some stations are undermanned entirely in regard to fair treatment and pay.

Instances in more or less demoralized, they say, and the same attained is alleged poor management by civilian naval officers, stewards, lighthouse inspectors, etc. The second district are reported to be in order.

The second district takes in all the lights from Hampton Beach, N. H., down around Cape Cod and clear to Watch Hill, R. I. There are 141 lights of all types in this district and 216 men.

The well known lighthouse keeper, publication of whose name, he said, would mean prompt dismissal, voiced the sentiments of many other keepers and assistants. He said:

Absolute precision and purity of ingredients are essential in the preparation of your doctor's prescription.

Of equal importance, however, is the technical knowledge of the druggist who compounds the prescription.

Two men may be given exactly the same ingredients and yet the man with greater experience, the one best fitted for his vocation, will attain a finished product conforming exactly to the physician's desires, while the other will make a poor mixture.

Riker-Jaynes prescription men must, first of all, have qualified before the State Board of Pharmacy and must have attained a knowledge of drugs, their actions and methods of compounding, which come only with long service in the school of experience.

Fountain Pen With Box of Writing Paper

You may well ask how any Fountain Pen that is of practical use can be sold with a box of linen finish writing paper at this price.

We were a little skeptical ourselves at first.

By a simple turn to the right the pen tube is filled and it is ready to write with.

You can afford several for emergencies and it's just the pen for school children. 24 sheets, 24 Envelopes and Fountain Pen, all for..... 23c

An Emergency Shaving Outfit—1 Cintio Safety Razor, 1 Tube Calista Shaving Cream, 1 Rubberset Shaving Brush, All for 50c

Every man, whether he owns a $5 razor or not, should have one or several of these handy outfits in some convenient place for cases of emergency. Perhaps in the office, the traveling bag, etc. The razor is a decidedly original device a most simple little instrument, being, in fact, no more than a guard and holder for the blade. Your fingers take the place of a handle. You will get a natural, easy stroke.

The shaving cream is an excellent preparation made by Scherffius & Co. Makes a heavy lather, softens the beard, does not draw the skin. 75c combination all for..... 50c

Comb and Brush $1.00 Combination . . 59c

Cigars and Tobacco

You must appreciate that profit is one of the least important considerations when we recommend to you some particular brand of cigar, cigarette or tobacco.

Of what benefit would it be to us to make a cent or two more profit on a transaction if it meant dissatisfaction and a customer lost to us?

To hold your business permanently, therefore, on our own brands of cigars we realize we must give you better value than you can get elsewhere.

We guarantee each one of the following cigars to be the greatest smoke values offered, prices being made possible only by the elimination of the middleman's profit and our tremendous output:

Jaynes Perfecto, 15c value, 7c straight.
Jaynes Concha, 10c value, 4 for 25c.
Jaynes Limited, 10c value, 5c straight.
Jaynes Six-O-One, 3 for 25c value, 5c straight.
Jaynes "50s," 5c straight quality, 7 for 25c.

Special Anniversary Offer

The prices of our cigars are never cut, the profit on them is too small, but for this occasion only, to make new smokers, we offer

REPUBLICAN OLD GUARD DEMANDS U. S. SENATORIAL CAUCUS

These legislators were asked if they were willing to announce their first, second and third choice for Senator.

They were also asked whether they believe in the direct election of United States Senators; and, finally, if they would agree to a suggested plan of adjournment, from day to day, in order that a primary election of United States Senator may be held early in January.

The questions, in their briefest form, were:

Will you kindly name your first choice for Senator? Your second choice? Your third choice?

Do you favor the direct election of United States Senators?

Will you agree to any plan of postponement, from day to day, by which the voters of Massachusetts may have a primary vote in the present contest?

Eight Republicans and eleven Democrats are willing to let the people of the State know whom these legislators-elect favor, at the present time, for United States Senator:

For WILLIAM B. PLUNKETT—Representative J. Edward Boland of South Adams.

For JOHN R. THAYER—Representative Charles A. Ostrom of Worcester.

For JOHN J. MITCHELL—Representative James M. Hurley of Marlboro.

For JOHN F. FITZGERALD—Representative Vincent Brogan, Michael F. McGrath and Benjamin F. Sullivan of Boston, John E. Quinn of Cambridge and John R. Wallace of Lynn, Senator Timilty of Boston and Representative William H. Carney of Boston.

Both Sides in Favor of Direct Nominations.

On the question of the Direct Nomination of United States Senators there is little apparent disagreement.

Don't Know: Republicans 10, Democrats 1.

Doubtful: Republicans 1, Democrats 0.

The numbers of the two old parties appear to be farthest apart on the "theory" of the Direct Election of United States Senators but on putting the theory into "practice" in the present contest:

Doubt: Republicans 11, Democrats 3.

Undecided: Republicans 0, Democrats 0.

VIEWS OF LEGISLATORS ON THE SENATORSHIP

The replies of Senators and Representatives are here printed in alphabetical order; first, the Democrats; second, the Republicans; third, the Republicans: SENATOR JAMES M. BERMAN of Chelsea, Democrat.

My choice for United States Senator will be the choice of the Democratic caucus. He will be my first and last choice. I have always been in favor of direct election. I favor it now. I should certainly agree to any plan by which we might learn the wishes of the people in the present contest.

I would much prefer to withhold any opinion I have in regard to my choice for United States Senator or the method of selecting the same, believing in the insidence that sufficient time will have elapsed before the Legislature convenes to get a full and free expression of the voters upon this most important subject, and having gained more knowledge I shall be in a better position as a Senator to reflect their sentiments when the time comes for me to act.

Morgan Will Abide by People's Decision.

SENATOR FRANK J. MORGAN of Boston, Democrat:

I promised my constituents that, if elected, I would submit the question of the United States senatorship to them on a referendum plan by return postal card service.

I shall submit the question. I will abide by their decision.

As a member of the present Senate, Mr. Morgan went on record as favorable to the direct election of United States Senators, as well as in favor of a primary vote.

He predicted the same now, he says.

SENATOR JOHN H. MACK of North Adams, one of the leading Democrats of the Legislature, has no choice for Senator at this time. The North Adams Senator answers "Yes" to the other questions.

I am strongly in favor, Senator Mack writes, of any legislation that will give the people of the Commonwealth the right to say by direct voting whom they want for United States Senator. Any movement in this direction will have my steadfast and untiring support.

SENATOR CHARLES F. McCARTHY of Marlboro, Democrat—I prefer not to state the name of my choice for United States Senator.

To the other questions: "I do" and "I will."

REPRESENTATIVE-ELECT JOHN A. NEWMAN, Democrat, of Dorchester states his choice for Senator as "the best Democrat, in my own judgment, in caucus."

Does Mr Anderson favor the direct election of Senators?

"Certainly."

Would he agree to any plan by which the people might be consulted on the present contest? He answers:

"I certainly. I represent the people's wish."

REPRESENTATIVE-ELECT EDWARD C. DOUPISH of Wrentham, Democrat, tells us frankly that he has "no choice as yet."

"Yes," Mr. Doolish favors direct elections.

He is undecided about this postponement plan that has been discussed.

REPRESENTATIVE VINCENT BROGAN, of Ward 8, Boston, Democrat:

First choice, Hon. John F. Fitzgerald; second and third choices, still a question. To the other inquiries, "Yes."

REPRESENTATIVE JAMES D. BURNS of Salem, Democrat:

"I do not know at the present time the names of all the candidates.

"I have voted for direct election in the House. I will do what I can to allow the voters to make their own choice in the present contest."

Representative-elect John J. Courtney of Springfield, Democrat, favors the direct election of United States Senators, he says, and would agree to any plan of postponement that would lead to an immediate primary in the pending contest. As his choice for Senator, Mr. Courtney is silent.

Representative Daly Has Not Decided Yet.

REPRESENTATIVE GEORGE T DALY of Ward 13, Boston:

Choice for Senator?

Answer—None.

Favor direct election?

Answer—Yes.

Agree to a plan by which there might be a primary in the present contest?

Answer—Yes.

REPRESENTATIVE-ELECT JAMES H. DONOVAN of Cambridge, Democrat, says he has no first, second or third choice "at present." He favors the direct election of Senators "very strongly." He would not object to the plan of postponement from day to day.

REPRESENTATIVE-ELECT JOHN J. CALLAGHER of Milton, Democrat, is one of many who want time to consider and reflect.

This is the first time I have been elected. I feel sure that there will be many names presented as candidates for Senator. I do not think that I could make a very intelligent first choice at this time. I am in favor of direct elections.

REPRESENTATIVE-ELECT THOMAS J. GIBLIN of East Boston, Democrat, is at present "undecided" about the Senatorship. Thomas will "look them over." He favors direct election, he says, and today is inclined to believe that he will support any project by which the people may be allowed to choose Mr. Crane's successor.

Representative Gordon is for Direct Election.

REPRESENTATIVE ISAAC GORDON, of Ward 9, Boston, Democrat:

"I shall vote for the individual who comes nearest to typifying the principles of the Democratic party, and who, as United States Senator, will be best able to represent the people of our nation.

"I am in favor of the direct election of United States Senators and so voted repeatedly, as a member of the Legislature of 1912.

"I would gladly lend my energy and efforts to any plan or movement that was genuine and sincere, whereby the voters of Massachusetts would be given an opportunity to express their preference for a United States Senator."

The high regard in which the people of Marlboro held former Congressman John J. Mitchell of that town ought to compensate Mr. Mitchell for the party sacrifice he made when he accepted the Democratic nomination against John W. Weeks.

A new evidence of Mr. Mitchell's popularity at home is seen in the declaration of REPRESENTATIVE JAMES M. HURLEY of Marlboro, Democrat:

"If I was to vote at once for my first choice for United States Senator I should vote for John J. Mitchell of Marlboro. At present I have no second or third choice. I am strongly in favor of the direct election of United States Senators.

"I will agree to any plan of postponement by which the voters of Massachusetts may have a primary vote in the present contest."

4 and 8—Yes.

CONGRESSMAN JAMES M. CURLEY of Boston will go into the Democratic caucus with at least one vote for Representative William F. O'Brien of Ward 17, Roxbury, a personal friend of the young Congressman, named "the Hon. James M. Curley" as his first choice and does not name any other choice. Mr. O'Brien believes in direct elections. He would favor any plan to put the present question up to the people, provided that the plan be "sound and practicable."

REPRESENTATIVE-ELECT JEREMIAH O'LEARY, the first Democrat to carry the town of Sharon for the Legislature in twenty years, favors a Democrat for the United States Senate, favors direct election and would vote for a primary by which to decide the present contest.

Mr. Quinn favors having the Senator elected by the people. He would agree to any plan by which the present contest could be settled by a primary.

REPRESENTATIVE-ELECT WALTER F. RUSSELL, Democrat, of Brockton:

"I have no choice.

To your other questions, 'Yes and yes.'"

REPRESENTATIVE CHARLES D. SMITH of Gloucester, Democrat, favors "a Democrat" for the United States Senate, favors the direct election of Senators and would agree to a plan of postponement.

REPRESENTATIVE JOHN G. STEVENS of Marshfield, Democrat, doesn't know yet who the candidates will be, and so, having no first choice, writes that "it is impossible to answer the first three questions."

Mr. Stevens reminds us that in two years in the Legislature he has already been recorded in favor of the direct election of Senators. He will agree, further, to any plan by which the present matter can be decided and he says that the people may decide it by a primary.

TIME IT! ANY SOUR, GASSY, UPSET STOMACH CURED IN FIVE MINUTES

Sour, gassy, upset stomach, indigestion, heartburn, dyspepsia; when the food you eat ferments into gases and stubborn lumps; your head aches and you feel sick and miserable, that's when you realize the magic in Pape's Diapepsin. It makes such misery vanish in five minutes.

If your stomach is in a continuous revolt—if you can't get it regulated, please, for your sake, try Diapepsin. It's so needless to have a bad stomach—make your next meal a favorite food meal, then take a little Diapepsin. There will not be any distress—not without fear. It's because Pape's Diapepsin "really does" regulate weak, out-of-order stomachs that gives it its millions of sales annually.

PAPE'S 25 GRAIN TRIANGULES OF DIAPEPSIN
MAKES DISORDERED STOMACHS FEEL FINE IN FIVE MINUTES.
CURES INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, SOURNESS, GAS, HEARTBURN.

Soothing, Healing, Germ Destroying Air Ends Catarrh Misery

Nothing Ever Known so Certain as Hyomei to Bring Immediate Relief and Heal the Distressing Soreness as Australian Eucalyptus When Properly Combined With Other Beneficial Antiseptics.

No stomach dragging—just breathe it—that's all.

Pronounced High-o-me.

When you get ready to rid yourself of catarrh, hawking, spitting, snuffling and that revolting habit of clearing the throat of mucus in the morning get a HYOMEI outfit.

This outfit, which consists of a hard rubber inhaler, a bottle of liquid HYOMEI and simple directions for use is supplied by pharmacists for $1.00. If another bottle of HYOMEI is needed for an extra stubborn case the price is only 50 cents.

Pour a little HYOMEI into the inhaler and breathe it deep into the lungs. It's the only way to reach and kill the catarrh germs that are slowly undermining your health.

For catarrh, colds, coughs and croup HYOMEI is guaranteed.

Send for our new mail order catalog. It's the best any liquor house has issued. We have never seen another catalog that lists such a variety of high-class liquors at rock bottom prices, nor which offers such careful service. And everything it lists will come to you under the CALLAHAN GUARANTEE of your money back without question in return for goods bought from us and not up to your expectations. You are to be judge and jury.

As always CALLAHAN "A" WHISKEY is our leader. It's a pure, ready-to-drink whiskey that, at 4 quarts for $3; 6 quarts for $4.50 and 8 quarts for $6, is the biggest value in whiskey that we have ever seen.

Of the 51 whiskies named in our catalog at various prices CALLAHAN "A" WHISKEY is the one we advise you to try first. It is Callahan value—our idea of a big money's worth, and it satisfies more New England tastes than any other brand. It's a popular New England whiskey at a popular price, and, after sampling one bottle, if you think you can get something equally good for the same price, return what you have left and we'll rush your money back to you.

Get out catalog and see how agreeable your business relations with us will be. In the meantime if you live in New England, and want a shipment of CALLAHAN "A" WHISKEY, just send this advertisement and the price as quoted above and we will get your goods to your express office without delay and without further expense. We pay express charges on 4 quarts or more of CALLAHAN "A" WHISKEY to any express office in New England.

NEW RUG STORE—The fame of the new Rug Store is getting more and more abroad. Besides what we say in the papers, one tells another, and so the interest spreads.

The Rugs here are the sort that make talk. Such variety, such richness, such economy in one place is no common happening.

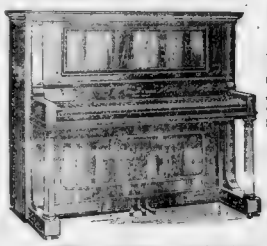
A change in the management of the Muslin Underwear Store creates a sale in which many lots will be sold Monday at half prices.

ACTIVITY IS THE KEYNOTE HERE

EACH WORKING DAY BRINGS ITS OWN MISSION

If you don't know us, let the VALUES quoted today make us acquainted. Words are weak to tell of them. But we invite—urge you to look at the prices. Don't doubt that EVERY offering is REAL. Every word we print rings true because we have truth to ring. Women seeking to supply needs economically should not pass lightly over this page. Read every word.

OUR PIANO SALE REGISTERS A SUCCESS



Extraordinary because every one, whether buyer or casual visitor, music teacher or Piano expert, without exception, praised the pianos unreservedly.

KNOWING THE REPUTATION OF THIS STORE AND SEEING WITH THEIR OWN EYES

Buying was as easy for the inexperienced as for the experienced, for the easy-going as for the shrewd trader. The best price first—One Price To All—Pianos plainly marked.

TERMS ARRANGED TO SUIT INDIVIDUALS

THIS IS THE END OF THE SALE—Every Piano absolutely new and fresh from the factories. Many of them unboxed within the last 48 hours. Only a few of each style now. Every Piano guaranteed as represented and the usual Shepard Guarantee.

FRESH LIFE AND VIGOR IN

THE CHILDREN'S STORE

The new manager has been going through the Children's Store with a metaphorical knife cutting prices wherever he thinks it wisest to do so. Many of the reductions involve broken lines, others affect garments that have tarried too long. It's deep, earnest, incisive work that brings you welcome economy. Hundreds of price-tickets suffer. This list is only a drib hinting of the savings.

YALE AND PRINCETON PLAY 6=6 GAME

PUMPELLY TIES THE SCORE AND SAVES OLD ELI

Kicks a Goal from the Field in the Last Period When Princeton Has the Game All but Won, 6 to 3, and Ties

By DAMON RUNYON.

PRINCETON, Nov. 16.—We find ourselves uttering the name of Pumpelly Harold Pumpelly, in fact with double frenzy this evening, for this morning we couldn't have rightly said wherein it meant a vegetable or a piece of machinery. Mr. Pumpelly is famous. Mr. Pumpelly is justly so.

It was at a most doleful period in the

BRICKLEY KICKS FIELD GOAL; 40,000 SEE DARTMOUTH FIGHT HARVARD TO THE LAST DITCH

Hanover Giants Repeatedly Stop the Crimson Rushers—Brickley Crosses the Line but is Robbed of a Touchdown by a Penalty—Harvard all but Gains 6 Points at the End of the Game

By L. R. MURDOCH.

CHARLEY BRICKLEY [illegible] Harvard [illegible] yesterday By one goal from field which [illegible] Dartmouth [illegible] gave the Crimson, near-world champions, all they had [illegible]

Harvard's hero had the ball one yard from Dartmouth's goal line in the last ten seconds of the game. But just as he made ready to plunge into the huge Green mass for the final play, which should have counted six points more, the whistle blew and Harvard was fairly stopped for [illegible] cool of the afternoon today when Princeton's young Mr. Hobart Baker appeared to have the hopes of Yale kicked to the general consistency of mush. I was at that moment of dense [illegible] when the supporters of the losing side are wondering if they can get a settlement of their indebtedness at six bits on the one bark, that the pompadour turban of young Mr. Pumpelly arose behind the Blue line nearly fifty yards from the Orange and Black goal and the broad toe of Mr. Pumpelly boosted a drop kick over the Princeton posts and brought Yale to a tie with the Tigers. He comes from the State of New York, and we think well of New York for it.

Baker Beat Flynn.

There was about a minute and ten seconds left of the pastime, and young Mr. Hobart Baker was leading Yale in general, and Yale's Mr. "Lefty" Flynn in particular, to a decision on points by a count of 6 to 3. It was not Mr. Flynn's fault that this was true. He had left-footedly done his full share, and had any two or three other members of the Yale team done proportionately as much, which would have been only fair, the Blue would not have been in such dire distress

Mr. Flynn had played himself almost out of his trousers, and they were stopping the game at intervals during the last half to keep him pinned together. He had been poked and nudged and had his toes trod on by players through three periods and a paragraph and finally he retired altogether, and one H. Baker, a name which is ever dangerous in a pinch, took his place. Mr Pumpelly had relieved Flynn earlier in the game, but had retired at the opening of the second half, only to reappear as relief for Mr. Markle On the first play after Mr. Flynn's final disappearance the ball was handed to Mr Pumpelly, the exact position being as stated, on or about the fifty-yard line

Mr. Pumpelly dropped the ball the instant it struck his hands, and dropped it on its toe. Had it been a fullback it would have mashed his corns. The ball appeared to roll off his foot, but as it rolled it began to rise, and to the utter astonishment of all beholders it arose and made its way toward the Princeton goal. Mind you, this was from nearly fifty yards, and the score was 6 to 3 against Yale.

Tied Up the Game.

We pursue the ball still further. It rose, and rose and then began to untie as it neared the Tiger goal. Then as peacefully and quietly as anything it passed across the bar, and settled down on the hard turf just beyond.

Above the wild yells from the Yale stands, and even above the heavy silence which came from the Princeton side, we could hear the murmur of voices

"Just like Bill Snooks did in ouffy naughty naughty

And soon after the game came to an

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 17. In one of the hardest-fought games ever played on Yale Field the Harvard Freshmen came from behind today and beat the Yale freshmen 18 to 17. Yale got a whirlwind start and ran up 14 points before the crimson seemed men got their bearings.

In less than seven minutes and without once losing the ball, Yale made two touchdowns and kicked two goals. The fine running of Thompson, who played in a line with the other backfield men, featured in the early stages of the game

Harvard got together a touchdown after a fine thirty-yard run by Captain Mahan but the crimson leader failed to kick a goal. The first half ended 14 to 6 in favor of Yale

At the opening of the second half, Harvard began with a rush, and after working the ball down to Yale's twenty yard line, a kick formation was ordered but Mahan shot a beautiful forward pass to Lyman in the forward pass zone back of the Yale goal line. It was the prettiest [illegible] was muffed and Harvard lost a chance for another point. Soon after the opening of the fourth period, Captain Garraway of Yale, kicked a pretty field goal from the thirty-seven yard line

There was where a Yale error counted heavily and cost the Eli youngsters the game. A Yale lineman muffed Harvard's kick off and Cowan fell on the ball on Yale's forty-yard line. Steady rushes by the Harvard backs took the ball over the line, Mahan making the touchdown. Yale made a fine stand on her one-yard line and held Harvard for three downs.

I wish to hand all the credit in the world to Pumpelly and his drop kick from the fifty-yard line that saved our scalps. I was in a position to appreciate the real beauty of the performance and I am sure every spectator did whether [illegible] sympathies were with or against us. An active player often misses the spectacular because he has his hands full guarding his play. But aside from the game, it was interesting, as an onlooker from the side lines I got the whole benefit

I had never seen such a wonderful kick in my football experience. I cannot say that I was surprised exactly, for all of us boys knew what Pumpelly could do. Still he was so far away for a drop kick and so much depended on the result that I was in a dreadful fuss till I saw the [illegible] bounce fairly over the middle of the bar

There may have been [illegible] kicks in football than that of Pumpelly, but none I am sure, mean more to Yale. The loss of me[illegible] to the Tigers would have been a severe blow to us. I am sure with the big Harvard game only a week off

No Yale crowd was ever known to quit, and the rooters stuck to us when things looked mighty blue. For their sakes I could not have been better pleased with Pumpelly's great drop-kick had I made it myself

And what made the play all the more wonderful was the fact that it was absolutely the last chance. There was but one minutes and ten seconds of time left when the Yale leader decided to stake his all on what was at least a hard chance. Princeton gave us a great game and I am glad of it. It was just the sort of battle needed to put us all on edge for Harvard next Saturday on our own ground.

"Tiger Line a Wonder."

I cannot too highly praise the Princeton line. It is a wonder for one composed of such light men. It is very fast and charges well, getting quickly into motion and putting a great deal of power into the final charges. Bluethenthal is a fine centre man, without doubt, but I think that Ketcham outplayed him today

It was noticeable all through the con-

HARDWICK TELLS HOW HARVARD WON VICTORY

By HUNTINGTON HARDWICK

Written exclusively for the Boston Sunday AMERICAN by the Harvard halfback

YOU cannot rightly call yesterday's game spectacular. But at times there swept over the field that peculiar feeling of tense excitement which grips the spectators and makes even the players feel that there is something about to happen, and this strange, [illegible] telepathic feeling was enough in itself to supply excitement for the game

Each side at times had its goal line threatened. In the earlier part of the game, I am free to confess, the Dartmouth men had the Harvard team rather played off its feet, and when Englehorn fell back for the first try at a placement goal, everybody on the Harvard side and certainly everybody in the gridiron, knew that on the success or failure of that kick the real strength of the teams would be determined

Again, when Brickley's goa[illegible] was blocked in the second half that same feeling rang over the stands, hushing the rooters and proving to everyone that a crucial period of the game was at stake.

Nervous Moment.

Again, when Harvard had the ball on her own one-yard line and was unable to advance it through rushing, the excitement was almost overpowering as Felton fell back for the pur[illegible] Would the kick be blocked. It had never been done to have Would the pass be fumbled? Perhaps the most nervous moment in the [illegible] of some of the men on the team.

You had the spectacle of two equally matched teams playing a plucking game through and for the men were so equally matched that there was nothing to choose between either man either team.

Gained More Ground.

Perhaps for the magnificent rushes of Morey and Llewellyn, I believe Harvard gained more ground, but we never uncovered any plays as brilliant as the delayed pass on which Morey suddenly soared through our line and started like a Vanderbilt cup winner toward our goal line. There were many who thought the game would be settled then and there and I was only by a beautiful Harvard tackle that we stopped that streak of greased lightning in middield

We owe the game to our captain. I think there is not much doubt of that in spite of the fact that Brickley came across FRANKLIN FIELD Philadelphia, Nov. 16. Playing the most sensational football seen on this field in [illegible] years, the Pennsylvania [illegible] defeated the Carlisle Indians this afternoon by a score of 46 to 20 before a record-breaking crowd of 35,000 wildly enthusiastic spectators.

Fail to Kick Goal.

The Pennsylvania [illegible] were [illegible] faster in the second period, and the total [illegible] at the end of the [illegible] was 20-13 in favor of the [illegible] and better [illegible] work in the third period and a seventy-five yard run by Pierce helped them to a score. When the [illegible] how the Indians led by 26-20. But the determined Quakers fell [illegible] in the last period and added [illegible] touchdowns, making the [illegible] 46-20 in their favor.

Try Rough Tactics.

The Redskins tried rough tactics, but they were penalized several times and also found that both teams could play at that game. Thorpe made some star plays, but usually he was nailed and thrown without gain, while Powell, the ground gainer, who was relied upon to make good, did not [illegible] particularly. Then, too, the [illegible] fumbling was costly, two of the Pennsylvania touchdowns being directly the result of fumbles and accepted opportunities.

Forty thousand—the greatest crowd that has ever seen a football game—filled the field and [illegible] It was the greatest [illegible] ever witnessed at Harvard [illegible] to see Harvard smash Green, and Princeton hold Yale to [illegible] deadlock, [illegible] the football championship of [illegible] as already triumphantly won, for the first time in the history of the gridiron the vast Harvard throng [illegible] silence when only that slim field goal separate victors from vanquished.

Harvard Lacked Punch Enough.

Brickley's battering team did not [illegible] hard enough to punch its way across the Dartmouth goal line for a touchdown. Three times [illegible] crashing down the field far enough to give Brickley a chance to kick, but not quite far enough to hope for an old-fashioned score. Dartmouth held fast in the last ditch every time.

When Harvard's first parade down the field was [illegible] the second period Brickley undertook to [illegible] a field goal from the thirty-yard line. He failed. When another mad attack was checked at the twenty-yard line early in the third period, Brickley stepped back and booted [illegible] time from the [illegible] yard line. The ball went low and [illegible] far to the left. For the second [illegible]

Penalties Opened Way for a Score

Unable to hammer down Dartmouth's [illegible] defense, Gardner [illegible] Harvard [illegible] attack with this [illegible] and played safe against chance of [illegible] his own side [illegible] from that [illegible] time on, Pierce [illegible] punt kicked [illegible] Dartmouth's [illegible] few moments of play [illegible] Harvard [illegible] operating [illegible] the line, only to be [illegible] by Harvard's [illegible] and later, intercepting a forward [illegible] on Dartmouth's 25-yard line. [illegible] to within one yard of a touchdown, where the game ended with [illegible] scored.

Some good throng of Cambridge supporters had not much to cheer about. The customary snake dance of the bubbling over with [illegible] was stayed. No bars were thrown down over the goal bars. The crowd and the players walked away as solemnly as if they had lost instead [illegible]

Betsy good sports, the ebullient bunch in the Stadium could not accept even the solitary field goal as fairly won by virtue of superior football strength. Two minor side penalties inflicted on Dartmouth opened the door for the single score that Brickley made. One of them was for a with the necessary field goal. After all, it was Wendell's plunging that took us to the line, and it was his tackling—that little applauded but much needed part of the game—that held the Dartmouth men in check when time and again they threatened substantial gains. We owe him thanks and praise for his work, and whoever denies it simply does not recognize one of the best exhibitions of all-round football which, in my opinion, has been seen around here for a long time.

Faithful Fenton.

Once more let me say what I said last Sunday. Felton is one of the standbys of the team. Whereas Morey's kicking was short, erratic, and, therefore, hard to follow, Felton was always able to come across with the necessary here at the crucial time. That is true, not merely in the punts in which he actually had to kick from behind Harvard's goal line, but likewise on the second half where time and again he punted to save the line from having to take the brunt of the heavy, slashing, cannon-ball Dartmouth attack. The ends backed Felton well, and he, as all good kickers do, was careful not to outpunt them and to give them time to get down under his punts.

This Morey did not do. It is a part of Felton's skill, and not Llewellyn's fault, that so many of those lofty kicks were fumbled.

The Funny Point's.

I have mentioned thus far the serious points of the game. There are, however, some funny ones which are nearly as interesting. I have said that Wendell was a bu.wark of defence defensively; and in this he nearest competitor was Brickley. Apropos of that a strange thing happened which caused Gardner to double up with laughter in spite of the attack. Hoggett was making an end run along the side line. Berrigh, the best lineman, was in the middle of the play. Out comes Brickley, makes a beautiful flying, running tackle of Hoggett, and is sweeping him to the ground he succeeds in bringing Hoggett's feet full and square against the seat of Burleigh's trousers. The shock lifted that astonished official into the air and deposited him on the turf with a dull thud and a gasp of laughter from the people who were watching.

The kicks which Brickley and Englehorn tried were extremely difficult by reason of the small sized hurricane which was blowing through the Stadium, striking the open end with peculiar force. To allow for that is difficult, and twice Brickley's kicks were spoiled in that way, for each time he was compelled to kick at the open end. When finally he did get into good position the goal was near enough so that a much poorer kick would have gone true. As it was, Brickley came across with the beautiful drop kick which made the game a Harvard victory and which would have been good at a much longer distance. Englehorn's kicks would have been perfect kicks on a still day, but in view of the high wind we knew that they were hugely ambitious to accomplish what was well-nigh impossible. They were not dangerous, and they had not a chance of going over.

The forward passes of the afternoon were all unsuccessful. We tried only two—and lost both. Dartmouth tried several, and tried to gain on either of them. On one of those an interesting piece of first class. At brain work was pulled off by Gardner as Llewellyn was back. If I remember rightly. He threw the pass hard and clear to one of the Green's ends, who was quite unprepared it when Gardner came in between.

Now, it is a rule that if a forward pass goes outside it goes to the opposite side. Otherwise the team trying it merely loses the down. So Gardner, with wonderful presence of mind, put up his hands and caught the ball on the Green's side, driving it as far back toward Dartmouth's goal as he could. That gained us several yards and gave us the ball, too. Things like that are the things which make Gardner so valuable the team cannot afford not to have him on the grid iron.

Parmenter a Wonder.

Once more let me pay my tribute to the golden haired and sure player, Parmenter. As a center he was a wonder; always cool, cheerful, and reliable, and he always came across with the goods. While Morey was bothered several times in getting off his kicks by poor passing, Felton always knew that he would receive the pass where he needed and wanted it, and never did the Crimson centre fail him. We do not applaud the linemen enough, but every man on the Harvard team knows he owed Parmenter a great deal more than merely the weight in the line.

I can hardly stop mentioning one point which, if technical, is nevertheless easily understood. That is the policy which the Dartmouth men had of tackling the backs —the secondary defence, so-called, especially. Time and time again they threw men into the scrimmage every time knowing that if ever their ball-carrier did get through the Harvard tackles, it would mean a long run. The two brilliant runs of Morey and Llewellyn are tributes to the wisdom of the policy.

SNOW GIVES BRICKLEY CREDIT FOR VICTORY

By "WIN" SNOW.

Written expressly for the Boston Sunday American by the celebrated Dartmouth fullback.

It was a great game. Both teams were evenly matched, and Brickley was the man who won for Harvard. We must all take off our hats to Brickley. His drop kick was perfect, and he got it away with wonderful speed.

Only on one of his four attempts did the Dartmouth line break through and block him. His line plunging was very weak, and his work on secondary defense only fair, but if he had been playing on the opposite team today the score would have been reversed.

Dartmouth has improved wonderfully since the Princeton game, and every man on our team played his best possible game. Llewellyn deserves a great deal of credit for playing the way he did when he really should have been under a doctor's care on account of an injured knee.

Beat Harvard at First.

The first two periods, I think,, we played better than Harvard. Both teams got near enough the goal lines to try two field goals apiece, but all four attempts were weak. In the third period, Harvard by the aid of two penalties and a wonderful end run, came to the fifteen-yard line, and from there it was only too easy for Brickley to drop the ball over

Wendell is surely a wonderful line player. He with Felton and Brickley compose a trio which could defeat almost any team in the country. He is the most aggressive man on the team.

Both teams were shy on the use of forward passes, either because of the danger of trying them, or because Harvard has something up the sleeve for Yale next Saturday. Harvard's tries at forward passes were poor, and it will take a much better developed pass to fool the Blues.

Felton's Great Kicking.

Felton was surely there with the kicking game. His punts were long, and most difficult to handle, and the ends covered the kicks well, especially in the latter part of the game. Morey's punts were shorter, but were very passing to the Harvard quarterback.

Gardner seems to me to be the one weak spot on the Crimson lineup. He showed very good judgment in choosing his plays, but he was very slow, and too many times would hesitate and change his signals.

This is very trying to a team, and they cannot have the confidence in him that was had in either Llewellyn or Ghee. Gardner was also very weak in handling punts. Many of Morey's punts rounded for as long a distance as Felton's, merely because Gardner fell all over himself in recovering them.

Best Lines in the Country.

Probably the two best lines in the country were against each other today. Both were like stone walls. It was almost impossible to gain more than a couple of yards at a time.

The Harvard shift formation did not do much except tire the men. They would change from one side of the line to the other, and then merely shift back. The shift was slow and was not of much use.

The series plays that we encoked in the last two periods had Harvard guessing for awhile, but their heavy line finally broke them up.

Harvard's best gain was when the end run from punt formation, and the fake plays run with eight men on the line. Hoggett and Hogeboom played wonderful games for us, especially on the defensive. They were in every play, and were very good on getting down under punts.

Dave Morey played his third Stadium game and, he surely outdid himself in his last chance at Harvard. His run of 85 yards through a field of Crimson jerseys was the most spectacular bit of play in the game.

Green in Great Physical Shape.

A great deal of praise is due to our coaches and trainer for the perfect physical condition we were in. The Harvard team also deserves credit for the clean game they played. They fought hard, but in not a single instance did I see any unnecessary roughness.

Harvard looks to me to be about the best team in the East, and they should defeat Yale next week. They have a fine, well-balanced team, and if they continue to put up the clean-cut back position, they would be well nigh invulnerable.

Gay Society Throng Has Exciting Time at Stadium Battle

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Whether they went in their own automobiles, stood in line at the South Station an endless time waiting for trains or whether they packed, jammed, pushed and shoved their way through the crowds on Tremont street and scrambled breathless into the subway everybody finally arrived at the Stadium, possibly a little bruised and tattered, but in the height of good spirits nevertheless, and watched Harvard once more cover itself with glory

Then crowd so squeezed, pushed and jammed, with its pretty crimson chrysanthemums, so fresh a few moments before, now crushed and bruised into a pulp or lost altogether; feathers torn from the trimmings of the hats bought especially for the occasion, and pained faces caused by many passes and jabs and snubbing elbows with the rush for cars, was withal reasonably happy—as happy, perhaps, as could be expected when you realized that the strong armed crew used elbows with a vengeance in the wild rush to get them for the opening. But as they all poured into the great Stadium, past griefs were forgotten in the joy and excitement of the moment at hand.

Dressed in Latest Style.

Styles? They certainly were there, ranging from the flapping picture hat with satin gown and picture hat worn by the girl who was attending her first game with her best young man, and who came in street car, to the simple tailored suit covered with a heavy fur coat, and the close fitting fur hat, worn by the society girl who came in her auto.

It was the first real outing of society in furs this season, and there was a splendid and expensive array of them Nearly everyone wore a fur coat. Any girl who didn't have one borrowed one, and it's lucky she did or some of Boston's blossoming young women would have been frost-bitten. As it was, they were momentarily threatened with death by freezing. My own teeth are chattering yet.

But a fact far more interesting than furs was that every inddie had his lassie.

All Were So Interested.

They were all so aggravatingly interested in each other, too. I'll wager there wasn't one in three who knew the score when the game ended. In pursuit of such a youngster on the street rushed up to a pretty girl with a crimson hat trimmed with fur and wearing a long light-colored fur coat. He breathlessly inquired the score. The girl looked lost for a moment, puckered her pretty brow in deep thought, and then, giving up, answered sweetly. "Well, really, I don't know—perhaps my brother can tell you. He's right behind." "Ah, is your brother there?" he questioned in his best English, but she was there relieved of the strain, for at that moment her "brother" stepped up to her escort.

Everybody Was Happy.

But it was great to be there, just the same, whether you watched the game, conversed with your "brother" or watched the crowds. Everybody was there with the sole intent and purpose of being happy, and happy they were.

The great Stadium was a mass of bright colors, in which crimson and green predominated. But all the loyal Harvard rooters didn't wear crimson ribbons and gowns. There was Dorothy Forbes, for instance, who drove a party of friends out in her own car and wore a dark blue tailored suit under her heavy fur coat, and a dark blue hat trimmed with feathers of the same color. But she did wear a huge bunch of crimson roses.

Looked Like Teddy Bears.

Raccoon was the favorite in fur coats for both men and women, and as the great throngs left the Stadium and hurried to their cars they looked like a huge army of like a lot of animated Teddy bears on an outing. With the great raccoon coats were worn dinky little automobile caps, perched down well on the head and tied for decoration a bow or pocket of vivid crimson. In the interesting party asleta nee by Mrs. Dorothy N. Slater, which included her pretty debutante daughter, Esther, her son and some of their young friends, all wore raccoon coats and all sported a flash of crimson in the hats of the girls There was a crimson scarf worn about the neck or a cluster of crimson roses worn at the bodice

Miss Sears was one of the most enthusiastic and conspicuous of the rooters for Harvard, and in almost every instance when cheers were in order did the leading, who wore a smart black suit under her heavy fur coat and a raccoon fur hat trimmed with crimson. When her clear ling she was working overtime in her jammed in any tighter than sardines, so that was all right.

A lance part of the crowd had not dreamed that the Cambridge subway has a Stadium station, and nobody told them so they piled out at Harvard Square, leaving plenty of room for the wise ones The usual mob was pushing its way over the Charles River bridge at the Stadium, but it was a jolly party.

Like Flower Beds.

In the Stadium when we arrived were the rest of the 40,000 people. That many look very lovely and picturesque when quietly seated in the Stadium. I have heard them compared to vast beds of flowers nodding in the breeze, and they do look a bit like that

They sound, however, like a vast herd of bull moose bellowing in the breeze, and they are about as chartrely disposed towards the opposing players as the late W. H. Nets, the Roman violinist, was to a crowd of Christian martyrs.

I have often been impelled at the ease and accuracy with which the football writers name the men who carry the ball who make the tackle and get knocked out of the game. The men are dressed alike, even to black headguards, and they are quite wipe hard, lusky

This mystery is now explained. In the centre of the long line of newspapermen sits a man with a list of names in a hat. When a play is made he reaches into the hat and draws a name Then he announces through a megaphone that Wendell has made an end run, or Llewellyn has made a tackle

The referee's public yesterday used a different system. When a red legged man made a gain through the line or around the end it was Morey. When the runner didn't make a gain it was somebody else

HARVARD ROOTER RAPS GREEN PENALIZING

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

There was a girl sitting alongside of me who had on a gray fur overcoat, a fur cap, and a turned-up nose that the cold had painted a lovely Harvard crimson, and she said.

"Football would be a better game if there were no referee.' What good is he anyway? The players don't like him, the spectators hate him, and he always breaks into the most interesting part of the game with his idiotic penalties.

Why should a football team be penalized for holding? If a player is allowed to step on the face of another, trip him up, knock him down, fall on top of him and otherwise entrench him, what's the harm in a little holding that doesn't hurt anybody?

The most conspicuous feature of yesterday's contest between Dartmouth and Harvard was a person in a blue bonnet who kept interfering Didn't Mind It.

I was glad enough when he let that mouth back 40 yards in two penalties for holding I didn't mind that very much because I was opposed to Dartmouth. A Dartmouth man, forty-five years old with white whiskers, came next to me and talks about his old wolfegs all the time. From long in on the car yesterday morning I had to end it by telling him that Harvard would win The Dartmouth men were naturally somewhat peeved and I was with a very beautiful young girl close by wanted to know why somebody did not murder him

Then when the referee strolled out and declared that one of the prettiest touchdowns ever made on a football field, a touchdown which not everybody on the Harvard side desirous, was no good because a Harvard lineman had been observed gently clinging to a Dartmouth gentleman who couldn't have stopped the play anyway, it was very annoying.

Blind Referee Best.

Now I do not wish to advocate the abolition of referees, because it is well to have some person in authority, but if I had anything to do with selecting the officials for the Harvard-Yale game, I would find some honest and reputable gent.eman who is also blind.

It's a terrible thing to be mad and cold at the same time. I was mad because the touchdown was not allowed, and my indignation couldn't even cause me to shiver

The first sidelight came at Park street, where about two thousand people were discovered trying to squeeze into an elegant subway entrance about as large as an ordinary hall door. Just then a big, fat, white only two persons can crawl abreast

After ten or fifteen minutes I succeeded in breaking an entering and dis appeared through the door amid boots and hoots that stopped short. Once inside, it was all satisfactory, and a subway train was waiting. We were both frantic endeavor to keep warm, and several times it looked as though she were going to do the Charleston Flip that ends the touchdown was not allowed.

Dr. and Mrs. John A. Ceconi entertained a jolly party, including Mrs. Ceconi s pretty young sister, Grace Rooster, and several brothers, who wore crimson ribbons in big suit or dark gray cloth, a raccoon coat and crimson-trimmed toque, while Miss Rooster was most attractive in the great raccoon coat, which almost covered her long skirt, and a raccoon hat trimmed with a crimson velvet bow.

Wore Both Green and Crimson.

Pretty Elise Amee was with her mother, Mrs. Oliver Amee, who was all in black, and her debutante sister, Miss Olivia Amee, who looked like a pretty little Easter lily in white. She wore a coat of white furs and the collar of her fur coat turned up so far that all but her eyes and nose were covered. Miss Elisabeth Sears, who is to shortly become the bride of young Warren was also in recess, literally from head to foot, and carried in her hand a great bouquet of crimson roses. She and her sister were both guests in the Ames party

Miss Alice Dexter, all in black save for a great raccoon coat which she wore, was with her daughter, Mrs. Stanley McCormick, who wore a crimson velvet hat trimmed with fur and a deep crimson suit which was almost covered by her long heavy fur coat.

Miss Nina Burnham was in black and kept her friends guessing by wearing a green hat, indicating a strong interest in Dartmouth, but also wore a cluster of crimson roses—so—well, perhaps that was just one of the inconsistencies of women which might be expected.

GIANTS OF HANOVER HOLD HARVARD FAST

Putting the ball in play on its own 20-yard line after a punt the Crimson unexpectedly found itself in midfield on two rushes, although Dartmouth had thrown the Harvard backs for losses on each of them After the first one Dartmouth was penalized 15 yards for piling on Wendell. After the second the Green lost 15 yards more because, after once being tackled and thrown, Wendell rose and started to run again, whereupon he was tackled for the second time

Encouraged by this freak of football fortune, Harvard shot O'Brien around left end for eighteen yards and Hardwick around right end for thirteen yards more. From the 21-yard line, Brickley, Wendell and Hardwick ripped open the Dartmouth line for small gains until they were checkmated and Brickley tried the ball goal.

Fumbles and penalties cost Dartmouth chances to get the ball within scoring distance of Harvard's line. Twice Englehorn had desperate opportunities to kick goals from the field, but he failed both times

When Harvard finally did come down to the Dartmouth line with a touchdown in sight the Crimson's opportunity was due only to the most desperate speed and fresh pep adopted by the Green in the last minutes of play. By this means Dartmouth tried its last football in the hope of scoring, risking everything for the chance that by some fluke a touchdown might be gained from nothing. Harvard took advantage of the Green's reckless spirit and would have scored, if the game had lasted a moment longer.

HARVARD KICKS TO SAFETY THROUGH THE FIRST PERIOD

Percy Haughton, Percy II, whose other name is Wendell, and who bosses the destinies of Harvard eleven and Fingy Gardner—not Larry—had their eyes and their minds fixed on next Saturday's battle at New Haven when they mapped out the campaign that nearly sliced enough off Dartmouth's hide barely to slip into the victory column

Through one-quarter of the encounter they let Dartmouth have the ball, to do with it as Dartmouth pleased. This policy stood as long as Dartmouth kept the pigskin on its own side of the chalk mark in midfield. As often as the Green monster approached or continued over that dead line, Harvard stiffened up and made Dartmouth Savvy Llewellyn boot—mostly Morey.

Felton and often as Morey booted, Felton booted back. It was fight shamefist to make those Dartmouth ends work their brawny backs out of joint pushing the ball so hard only to have Mr. Felton deftly take it away from them and, with one letterly, husky drive, hoist it back far beyond the place whence it came

Felton's Punts Fooled Him

It was sad, too, to see little Llewellyn stand directly under those punts, let them drop serenely into his outstretched arms, and then, as he was about to embrace the ball down the field as the Green rooters shrieked over the line. At this point Harvard succeeded in pushing the ball down to a position where Brickley finally scored a field goal

Thereafter Felton persisted in kicking the ball into Dartmouth territory as often as Dartmouth punted it across midfield. Harvard's orders were to down whomever the ball came into Crimson territory, and to attempt no rushing unless the pigskin was acquired on the fifty-yard circle of the line

In the last three minutes of play Harvard took possession in midfield on a poor kick by Morey and advanced by rushes to the 25-yard line.

Here Brickley made his run around left end for a touchdown, only to be called back because his team mates transgressed the rules Forward passes failing, Dartmouth took the ball. Then it was that Brickley recovered a Dartmouth forward pass and by clever quibbling and berrisiness rushing advanced the ball to Dartmouth's 1-yard line, when time was called.

SNOW GIVES BRICKLEY CREDIT FOR VICTORY

By "WIN" SNOW.

It was a great game. Both teams were evenly matched, and Brickley was the man who won for Harvard. We must all take off our hats to Brickley. His drop kick was perfect, and he got it away with wonderful speed.

Only on one of his four attempts did the Dartmouth line break through and block him. His line plunging was very weak, and his work on secondary defense only fair, but if he had been playing on the opposite team today the score would have been reversed.

Dartmouth has improved wonderfully since the Princeton game, and every man on our team played his best possible game. Llewellyn deserves a great deal of credit for playing the way he did when he really should have been under a doctor's care on account of an injured knee.

Beat Harvard at First.

The first two periods, I think,, we played better than Harvard. Both teams got near enough the goal lines to try two field goals apiece, but all four attempts were weak. In the third period, Harvard by the aid of two penalties and a wonderful end run, came to the fifteen-yard line, and from there it was only too easy for Brickley to drop the ball over

Wendell is surely a wonderful line player He with Felton and Brickley compose a trio which could defeat almost any team in the country He is the most aggressive man on the team

Both teams were shy on the use of forward passes, either because of the danger of trying them, or because Harvard has something up the sleeve for Yale next Saturday. Harvard's tries at forward passes were poor, and it will take a much better developed pass to fool the Blues.

Felton's Great Kicking.

Felton was surely there with the kicking game. His punts were long, and most difficult to handle, and the ends covered the kicks well, especially in the latter part of the game. Morey's punts were shorter, but were very passing to the Harvard quarterback.

Gardner seems to me to be the one weak spot on the Crimson lineup. He showed very good judgment in choosing his plays, but he was very slow, and too many times would hesitate and change his signals.

This is very trying to a team, and they cannot have the confidence in him that was had in either Llewellyn or Ghee. Gardner was also very weak in handling punts. Many of Morey's punts rounded for as long a distance as Felton's, merely because Gardner fell all over himself in recovering them.

Best Lines in the Country.

Probably the two best lines in the country were against each other today. Both were like stone walls. It was almost impossible to gain more than a couple of yards at a time.

The Harvard shift formation did not do much except tire the men. They would change from one side of the line to the other, and then merely shift back. The shift was slow and was not of much use.

The series plays that we encoked in the last two periods had Harvard guessing for awhile, but their heavy line finally broke them up.

Harvard's best gain was when the end run from punt formation, and the fake plays run with eight men on the line. Hoggett and Hogeboom played wonderful games for us, especially on the defensive. They were in every play, and were very good on getting down under punts.

Dave Morey played his third Stadium game and, he surely outdid himself in his last chance at Harvard. His run of 85 yards through a field of Crimson jerseys was the most spectacular bit of play in the game.

Green in Great Physical Shape.

A great deal of praise is due to our coaches and trainer for the perfect physical condition we were in. The Harvard team also deserves credit for the clean game they played. They fought hard, but in not a single instance did I see any unnecessary roughness.

Harvard looks to me to be about the best team in the East, and they should defeat Yale next week. They have a fine, well-balanced team, and if they continue to put up the clean-cut back position, they would be well nigh invulnerable.

TIGER AND BULLDOG END GAME WITH THE SCORE STANDING EVEN

PUMPELLY, A SUBSTITUTE KICKER, SAVES YALE A DEFEAT

DROPS A GOAL FROM THE FIELD IN THE LAST PERIOD AND PRINCETON STRUGGLE ENDS IN A 6-6 TIE

DESPERATE BATTLE ON NASSAU FIELD ENDS IN A TIE SCORE.

By H. M. SEDGWICK.

PRINCETON, Nov. 16—The Yale bulldog "came back" today and after the Tigers had a 6 to 3 lead scored a field goal, the game ending with the score 6 to 6. [illegible] Till the final [illegible] period was almost over, the Princeton rooters were in the zenith and the chorus "Old Nassau" rang a chorus of destined victory. Three minutes before the sands of the [illegible] of the game had run out, [illegible] Pumpelly [illegible] Oswego, N. Y., came from the [illegible] 10 minutes before as a substitute [illegible] from the reserves to fling new [illegible] into the weakening Eli attack [illegible] into the football hall of fame a new record for the season, a field goal by the drop kick method from the 30-yard line.

Yale Men Satisfied.

Touchdowns there were none. [illegible] goals there were four, all by the drop kick route. Twice Hobe Baker, whose name today [illegible] the Tiger Hall of Fame, with these [illegible] and DeWitt lifted the [illegible] over the cross bar for field goals [illegible] the six points scored by Princeton. Once Pumpelly duplicated his efforts, and, first of all to breaking into the scoring column, "Lefty" Flynn, upon whose all-round fighting powers Yale hopes centered, booted a field goal through the Princeton uprights.

Aside from Pumpelly's wonderful efforts, Princeton outplayed its ancient bulldog foe, carried the fight to it almost constantly and missed three other chances to score by the narrowest of margins. It was a battered Yale team that rallied for a final barrage in the closing minutes of the final period but it did not have the [illegible].

Baker Ran Back Punts.

Yale had shown inferior form in handling punts and [illegible] [illegible] the first time in many years.

Waller tackled Flynn in the second period so roughly that Umpire Snow ordered him removed from the play. He is the first player in a quarter century to be ousted from a Yale-Princeton match for excessive roughness. Flynn was dazed and left the game for the remainder of the period, but returned when the second half began.

Player after player left the Yale team in the middle period, till ten shifts had been made, almost an entirely new team being projected into the play. Three were used at right guard [illegible] three points of the game.

[illegible] carried the punting game to Yale and Wheeler muffed another kick at the Yale 30-yard line. Two smashing runs for "Hobe" Baker made it first down again and from the 23-yard line that player sent the ball merrily sailing between the uprights for the tieing score.

[illegible]

HARVARD'S GREAT STAND

end, with a new and brilliant luminary shining over the football world. A quiet youth by the name of Pumpelly had come to take his place among the gridiron greats.

However, the feats, and also feet of Messrs. Baker and "Lefty" Flinn, aforesaid, must receive consideration in discussion as to heroes of the occasion. But for Mr. Baker's two field goals Mr. Flynn would have defeated Princeton with a single boot.

Flynn Also Kicked a Goal.

A fumble by "Stew" Baker, which name is no reflection on the young man's condition, but a contribute of love and affection from his comrades, transpired in the first period. Mr. Avery of Yale fell upon the ball and the Princeton eleven fell upon Mr. Avery. Then Mr. Flynn dropped back and booted a goal from the 20 yard line, giving Yale three points.

In the second period a fumble by Mr. Wheeler of Yale gave "Hobe" Baker his first crack at the Blue goal, from the 35-yard line, and Hobart pushed the ball over with a heavy kick, tying the score. Subsequently thereto Flynn punted out of bounds, and now for a passing moment we might enter the realms of the experts. Said punt gave Princeton the ball on Yale's 30-yard line, and Mr. DeWitt of this city bustled through the Yale line by means of a hastily punched hole for some 18 yards before Flynn could secure a hammerlock on him.

Twice again [illegible] DeWitt carried the [illegible] through the Blue defence [illegible] and finally in [illegible] "Stew" Baker [illegible] the ball a few feet further and DeWitt relieved him and pushed it an inch or two nearer. At this moment the ball was handed over to Hobart, who gently bumped it across the Yale goal posts for three more large points.

Thereafter there was not much doing, save a few hundred plays of one kind and another which you will find scattered at intervals about this paper. "Tub" Waller of Princeton, N. J., was noted leaning lightly over the upturned countenance of "Lefty" Flynn as Mr. Flynn lay prone upon the earth staring at the sky, the only trouble being that Mr. Waller just barely failed to step clear over the obstruction.

Waller Put Out of Game.

His foot appeared to set right on Mr. Flynn's face and the officials spoke to Mr. Waller with such effect that he left the game. They call this "roughing" in football as we understand it, and assault and battery in civil life.

Flynn left the game before the end of the first half, being relieved by Pumpelly, [illegible] returned before the opening of the second, which found Pumpelly back on the side lines. Some wise and mysterious fate whispered into the ear of the Yale coaches that Pumpelly was too valuable a man to be sitting huddled up in gray bed clothes outside the line of scrimmage, and so he was sent back to relieve Markle, and to save the day for the Blue.

Meantime, Flynn had been trying a few odds and ends in the way of shoots at the Tiger goal, but was having no luck. The Princeton team was supposed to be heavily outweighed by the Yale line, but appeared in no wise distressed by the fact. Flynn could never really get into his stride galloping with the ball before some Tiger cut him down. This young man DeWitt is quite a fellow to have around in a hear fight, and so is Spalding, of Yale. The latter could drive drifts and tunnels through the Tiger line almost anytime he started.

There was an ample audience. The crowd numbered some 30,000 people. It was a great crowd and a great day for a football game, or anything else, and up to a late hour this evening most of those present were reported convalescing from the surprise and excitement attendant upon Mr. Pumpelly's unexpected boot.

M'DEVITT PRAISES BATTLE BY TIGERS

By ELMER M'DEVITT.
Former Yale Guard and New Eli Coach

PRINCETON, Nov. 16.—It was a great day and a great game. The game was hard and well fought all the way. Princeton was a great Princeton team. It played fine football all the way. It was a much stronger team than any Princeton has had in several years.

The Yale team was a new team, and its possibilities unknown. It came through to the satisfaction of all Yale men. The game was very evenly played and filled with fine football and many spectacular features. The kicking of Flynn of Yale was really great. With the wind against him he lifted beautiful kicks, driving back the Princeton team.

DeWitt Also Kicked Well.

DeWitt of Princeton also kicked very well. His kicks were not so long and spectacular as Flynn's, but were well executed and of great service to his team.

It was a great kicking game, each team kicked and ran about the same length of time.

Princeton's team showed clearly the experience it had learned from its season's play. The line had snap and ginger and lots of power both on offence and defence.

It was much more alive to the occasion and had more fight than in its early game, so Princeton's ends played much better and the backs ran better. On the defence the Princeton boots were invaluable to the team. DeWitt, especially, did great work backing up the line.

H. Baker Shining Star.

H. Baker was a shining star. He made both of Princeton's scores, and his running back of punts in the second half was wonderful indeed. It was the best seen this year. For Yale the whole team did well. The men were a little slow at getting into the game, and in the first few minutes the Princeton team carried the fight to them.

The line played great football. It was a steady, even struggle between the two lines.

At centre Ketcham was a marvel of speed and hard football. Bluethenthal played fine football, but was unquestionably not as good as Ketcham. At guard Cooney and R. Pendleton played great games for Yale.

Great Help to Yale.

Cooney showed his great strength to advantage and was a great help to Yale. Pendleton lately moved in from tackle, played like a veteran. He grew stronger as the game grew older. The Princeton guards played good football. Their style of defense did not let them show, but they were very effective.

Yale's tackles were in evidence all the way. Warren and Talbot played great games. The Princeton tackles were very strong—much stronger than them. A[illegible] and Bomeisler stood out above all. He played a wonderful game, covered kicks beautifully and tackled terrifically. His headwork was fine. On offense he blocked in great style.

Avery for Yale was another star, not as bright as his running mate, but just as steady. The Princeton end was strong too. Flynn ran well, but was covered and unable to do much. Captain Spalding played a great steady game for Yale. Philbin did well, too. Wheeler did well for his final big game. He ran the team splendidly and handled kicks well.

Pumpelly Strong.

Pumpelly was strong for Yale, he carried the ball well and was strong on defence. He furnished one of the most sensational finishes ever seen at a big game.

SPRINGFIELD BEATS AMHERST AGGIES

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 16.—Springfield Y. M. C. A. walked away from the Massachusetts Aggies [illegible] this afternoon 41 to 0. The local team had things its own way at all times and their goal was never in danger.

Kelly scored the first touchdown in the first period a few minutes after play started on a plunge from the five-yard line after Briggs had made thirty yards on a forward pass. In the second period Briggs recovered a fumbled kick by Gore on the [illegible] yard line and went over for a touchdown.

A little later Ma[illegible] gathered in [illegible] yards [illegible] another touchdown. [illegible] touchdowns in the last half on fine run.

Poehler Sets Up New Record

Galway's Mark Is in Danger

Little by little, the City League bowlers are creeping up on the three-string mark of 382 made by Bill Galway several years ago. First [illegible] Holmes came through with 366, then Chet Martel with 370 and now comes Paul Poehler with 372. With the exception of the first the other marks are better than the high three-string individual record made last year.

It is likely that even better marks will be put up as the season wears on. The collection of bowlers in the City League this year is without doubt the best in New England.

Another feature of the week's bowling was the mark of 1614 put up by the Chauncey team. This is ten pins less than the record made by the same team several weeks ago.

The Suburban League bowlers are beginning to come into their own. At last week's meeting the Malden and East Boston teams came through with scores better than 1500. Archie Walsh, "Lucky" Baldwin, Sullivan and Hodge did the best individual work.

WILLIAMS AT LAST DEFEATS AMHERST

Annual Battle Between Old Rivals Ends in 12 to 0 Score.

Summary:

WILLIAMS — AMHERST

[illegible]

AMHERST, Nov. 16.—Williams finally broke the Pratt field hoodoo and defeated Amherst, 12 to 0, on its own field today.

The visitors outplayed Amherst in every department of the game, but by hard fighting Amherst made a very interesting contest of it. In the first and third quarters they held their own with Williams, but weakened in the other periods.

Williams used a beautifully varied attack of open plays, for which Amherst's straight football was no match. The strength of the line was well proven when it held Amherst for downs on the ten-yard line in the last quarter.

Amherst had the ball in Williams' territory during most of the first quarter and almost scored on a drop kick. In the second period, however, the visitors came back strong.

In the second half Amherst made a great effort to score and was at the very beginning helped by a wild pass from centre which lost the ball for Williams on its twenty yard line.

Line plunging did not yield much, so McGay tried another drop kick, but failed. As play progressed, Amherst seemed to get stronger.

Toolan was easily the star of the game with his long, spectacular runs. Lewis also did considerable ground gaining.

The Williams line was well balanced and betrayed no weak spots. Amherst was strong in line. Proudfoot and Morrow excelling but were completely baffled by the open plays. Hubbard and Connolly made several substantial gains.

Haverhill High Gets Revenge on St. John's

HAVERHILL, Nov. 16.—St. John's Prep School failed to score against Haverhill High this afternoon, but the locals crossed the line twice. The score was 14 to 0. It was Haverhill's from the start and they kept the [illegible] most of the time, gaining on end runs and line bucking alike.

Doherty was the Danvers team's best player. Today's was the third annual game, and Haverhill's first win, St. John's having won the first and tied the second.

Every Heat a Race at Fellsway Meet

Every heat was a race at the matinee meeting of the Fellsway Driving Club at Combination Park, Medford, yesterday afternoon.

In the first three classes the finishes were so close that it was difficult for the judges to pick the winners, and in each of them three heats were necessary to decide the race.

In the Class B event a dead heat between Fanny M. and Nelsie Wilkes, with John W. just nosing out in the lead was the closest race of the season.

FAULKNER'S 37-YARD RUN DECIDES GAME

Speedy Bowdoin Back Causes Downfall of Vermont Warriors; Score 7 to 0.

Summary:

BOWDOIN — VERMONT

[illegible]

PORTLAND, Nov. 16.—Plunging through right tackle and then dodging and brushing aside tackler after tackler until he had a clear field, Faulkner, Bowdoin's speedy left halfback, ran thirty-seven yards to a touchdown near the end of the second period of the game with the University of Vermont here this afternoon. LaCasce kicked the goal and there was no further scoring, Bowdoin winning, 7 to 0—the first victory she has scored over a college eleven this season.

Boston College Team Beats Connecticut

STORRS, Ct., Nov. 16.—Boston College defeated Connecticut State in an interesting game here today, 13 to 0. Boston had but little trouble in making first down and after the first period used many substitutes.

Dorchester Is Winner In Great Struggle

Dorchester High's strong team played the gridiron battle of its life at the Dunbar Avenue Grounds, Dorchester, yesterday afternoon, beating the heavy Powder Point School eleven of Duxbury, by the narrow margin of 2 to 0. The two points were made by Van Ulm, in the third period of play after he tried for a field goal, which was blocked, the ball bounding back into his possession, he scoring a safety, thus winning the game.

The game was crowded with features throughout and the light Dorchester men had all they could do to keep on their feet from the onslaught of the heavier Powder Point boys. MacDonald at centre for Dorchester, was a stonewall in the defense. Tommy Fitzgerald, the son of the Mayor, was also there in every play for Dorchester.

The line-up:

DORCHESTER HIGH — POWDER POINT.

Score—Dorchester High 2. Safety—Van Ulm. Linesman—MacDonald. Referee—Redding. Umpire—Hewit.

Old Driver Guides His Horse to Victory

The Dorchester Driving Club held its matinee racing card in Franklin Field Speedway, Dorchester yesterday afternoon, despite the cold weather, and a fair sized crowd witnessed four good races.

The summary:

CLASS A. Mixed. John W., b g (D. M. Sweeney) first; Sunshine, b m, (Allen Briggs) second; [illegible] (W. A. Bennett) third. Time 1.07, 1.07½, 1.07¾.

Tie Game at Clinton.

CLINTON, Nov. 16.—Leominster H. S. had the ball within five yards of Clinton H. S. goal line in the first period, but was held for downs, and after that Leominster was never dangerous. Neither team was able to score. Merrick's fifty-yard run around the end in the first period was a feature.

The line-up:

CLINTON H. S. — LEOMINSTER H. S.

[illegible]

Score—Clinton H. S. 0, Leominster H. S. 0. Linesmen—William Ward, Harry Elwood. Referee—F. H. Baldwin, Lawrence. Umpire—A. B. F. Boland, Holy Cross. Time—Two 10, two 8 minute periods.

Mechanic Arts Ties Latin School Team

Summary:

BOSTON LATIN — MECHANIC ARTS

[illegible]

Mechanic Arts High School eleven and Boston Latin School elevens failed to score in the game which was played on the Volkmann field, Allston, yesterday.

Both teams put up a great fight, the former team putting eighteen men into the game, four of them into left end for the purpose of strengthening, but it failed to stop the onrush of the ends for Boston Latin, which were remarkably strong.

McCarthy, Boston Latin's fullback, outplayed the other players, making long rushes through the Mechanic Art team. Boles and Gersumky also played a good game, while for the other team Menandler played well at runs and punt. Shea and Husk shared the honors with him.

Failing to win the game puts Mechanic Arts out of the city championship. Thanksgiving morning Boston Latin meets English High School eleven.

Junior Oarsmen Win Exeter Class Races

EXETER, N. H., Nov. 16.—With a magnificent burst of speed, the class of 1914 defeated the third crew by half a length, winning the Exeter inter-class four-oar races which were held on the Exeter river this afternoon, over a half-mile course.

By defeating '13 and '15 crews, the third crew which was entered in place of the class of 1916, had earned the right to meet the '14 oarsmen.

Two races were necessary to decide the inter-class championship. In the first race the third crew won by seven lengths, but on account of fouling by the '14 the referee ordered the race rowed over.

The inter-class races were the first of their kind held at Exeter since 1881. Before that time crew races were annual features, but interest in the sport gradually declined. The revival this year of rowing resulted from the presentation to Exeter of two four-oar shells by Harvard University.

"MISS MILLER" WINS.

Captures Heat in Fall River Club Drive.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 16.—Only four classes appeared at the week-end meet of the Massasoit Driving Club today, and the fastest heat was run by Miss Miller in the Class A, mixed.

The summary:

CLASS A. MIXED.

BEAT ALUMNI TEAM.

Salem High Takes Game by Score of 21 to 7.

SALEM, Nov. 16.—On Bertram Field today the Alumni played the Salem High School eleven, and was defeated by a score of 21 to 7. It was a team of all stars, but they were out of condition. Odell made a seventy-five-yard run for a touchdown and starred at all times, as likewise did Anderson for Salem.

The lineup:

SALEM HIGH SCHOOL — ALUMNI

[illegible]

Score—Salem H. S. 21, Alumni 7. Touchdowns—Anderson, Odell, Martinson 2. Goals from touchdown—Merrow. Safety—Friedburg. Linesman—Harrington. Referee—Long, Salem Normal. Umpire—Davies. Time—Four 12-minute periods.

Both Matches Close.

Two semi-final matches were played yesterday in the Newton Golf Club links in completing the match play events for the Saturday and Fall handicap cups.

Both matches were very close. H. L. Stevens winning over E. G. Hapgood by 2-1 in the Fall cup and H. H. Howe winning a meager victory over E. F. Rockwood on the last green by 1 up in the Saturday cup events.

Swarthmore Noses Out Bucknell.

SWARTHMORE, Pa., Nov. 16.—Swarthmore defeated Bucknell yesterday by a score of 14 to 13. Swarthmore made all its points in the first half, but Bucknell made a rally in the second period and a missed goal kick defeated them.

Fittons in Tie Game.

The Fitton A. C. football team played a tie game with the Cunningham Gym team of Milton. The most spectacular play of the game was Captain Kerr's tackle of Powell, saving a possible touchdown.

PORTLAND IS BEATEN BY WALTHAM BOYS

Watch City Team Plays Slashing Game and Wins by 35 to 0.

Summary:

WALTHAM H. — PORTLAND H.

By speedy playing and clever open field work which completely baffled a heavier team Waltham High in its annual contest with Portland High played at Waltham yesterday afternoon, took the Pine Tree State aggregation into camp by a score of 35 to 0.

It was all Waltham from start to finish, Portland having the ball in dangerous territory only twice through the game. Portland made first down but three times, while Waltham even with subs in her lineup, gained ground at every stage of the game.

Honan playing as a substitute right halfback on the Portland team had his collarbone broken in a scrimmage in the third period.

Everett High Swamps Medford, 49 to 0

Everett played circles around Medford High before 3,500 people in the Suburban League yesterday on the Medford High School field, running up a score of forty-nine points, while Medford played a wholly defensive game.

Only once did Medford have any chance of scoring, and that was when Grant shot a forward pass to Tyler for a gain of thirty yards. Sweetland and Cannell pounced upon him before he got well under way.

If the Harvard rooters cheered for their Brickley the Everett rooters did no less cheering for his younger brother, Captain Brickley of Everett High. Brickley scored five of the seven touchdowns and kicked all of the seven goals, scoring a total of 37 of the 49 points and doing all of the punting that was done during the game.

EVERETT H. S. — MEDFORD H. S.

[illegible]

Score—Everett H. S. 49, Medford H. S. 0. Touchdowns—Brickley 5, Bond, Sweetland. Goals from touchdowns—Brickley 7. Linesman—[illegible]. Referee—[illegible]. Umpire—Nobel. Time—[illegible] periods.

Methuen Beaten, 3 to 0.

LAWRENCE, Nov. 16.—The South Lawrence soccer team defeated Methuen today, 3 to 0. The playing of Butterworth and J. Kershaw of South Lawrence and Wylde of Methuen featured.

Noted Scouts Found Flynn He's the 1912 Hero of Yale

HERE'S "LEFTY" FLYNN OF YALE

MAURICE FLYNN '13

"Tad" Jones and Johnny Kilpatrick "Found" Flyn in the Schools of Greater New York. His Father Is a Great Builder, but It's Plain "Lefty" Flynn for the Yale Wonder.

NEW YALE FULLBACK WILL BE A GREAT ALL-ROUND ATHLETE

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 13.—Like a cloudburst, "Lefty" Flynn descended on Yale. He's the football hero of 1912. It sounds like the good old times of Ted Coy and the mighty warriors who went before him to see "Lefty" Flynn at work

This Flynn person, who was sent like a meteor across the Yale football skies, is the son of a rich New York contractor. But his cognomen suggests the opposite. He was dug up by "Tad" Jones and Johnny Kilpatrick, the famous quarter and end, respectively, who went scouting for him as the baseball emissaries scout for players.

Flynn has been known to the close circle which scouts for football possibilities for four years. His career has been watched in interscholastic circles, both in the game of the grammar schools in the Bronx, New York city, and up the Hudson, where for two years he has shone in the all-round sports of the Pawling School, where "Tad" Jones, the old Yale football star and baseball captain, is in charge of athletics.

Flynn Comes Into His Own.

"Lefty" came to Yale a year ago, but made no splash in his freshman year. This was due to adverse circumstances, for he fell into the hands of the faculty, who withdrew him from athletics through some technicality or other.

This Fall, however, Flynn has come to his own. With the possible exception of Charley Brickley, he promises to shine as the genuine headline star of the gridiron campaign. Upon him Yale leans most heavily for success in the coming Princeton and Harvard games

Flynn is the best drop and place kicker on the eleven. Its heaviest backfield battering ram, its fastest end runner. When all the team failed Yale was held for three downs only six inches from the Brown rush-line in last Saturday's game and it was Flynn who tore through the line for the solitary touchdown "Tad" scored, and assured Yale success.

"Lefty" Is An All-Round Star

Yale men believe that Flynn will prove an all-round star in athletics before another season. He is a wonderful left-handed pitcher and is expected to occupy the box in Yale's biggest games next Spring.

On the track he leaped twenty-three feet in the broad jump and cleared the bar at six feet, two inches, in a trial for Trainer John Mack this Fall. He is the best hurdler and one of the best sprinters in college.

In private life—that is, the life where nicknames don't go—he is Maurice Bennett Flynn. He is son of the president of the Bennett-Sterrett Construction Company, which built the Singer building and most of the latest New York skyscrapers. Kilpatrick, who helped to get him here, is with the construction company of which Flynn's father is at the head.

FROST IN RADIATOR IS A MENACE TO WINTER MOTORING

Pros and Cons of Best Three Methods of Preventing Cooling System From Freezing—Alcohol Is Least Harmful.

By J. C. KERRISON.

Now that Jack Frost has made his appearance, it is a reasonable time to recall the fact that a radiator of a car radiates just as effectively when the car becomes colder than the water as it does when the water grows warmer than the air. The result is that the radiator becomes a sticky element freezing in Winter—for the reason that the water that has been heated freezes more rapidly than water from which the air has not been expelled by heating. Therefore, something should be done to prevent freezing even when the car lately seems cool enough to make trouble in the circulating system.

Of course there is the good old makeshift of throwing a robe or blanket over the radiator, but that has its disadvantages other than the purely esthetic one of unsightliness. In the first place, the robe may be removed by some conscienceless miscreant. In the second place, the robe gives most protecting where the least is needed and the best protection where the most is needed. The warm air and warm water naturally rise and the colder element settles to the bottom and are still further cooled by the contact with the outer air; the pump, return piping and the bottom of the radiator are liable to freeze in cold weather while the top of the radiator still may be comfortably warm.

The safest procedure, however, is to fill the circulation system with an anti-freezing solution and submit to the necessity of giving it a little attention. The three substances that are most familiar as reducers of the freezing point of cooling water are alcohol, glycerine and calcium chloride. Each has its advantages and each has its obtainable drawbacks.

Alcohol is rather expensive and evaporates out of the water, leaving a weak mixture that is problematic. It is apt to be deficient, because the rate of evaporation is unknown and it has a deterioration effect on rubber.

Glycerine also has a disintegrating effect on rubber, and it decomposes at high temperatures, with an accompanying evil smell.

Calcium chloride sets up an electrolytic action on metal that contains it, and it imparts, as it not infrequently is, it has a corroding effect.

Alcohol is the least harmful of the three. One part of alcohol to three parts of water will not freeze until the water drops to zero and 5 parts of alcohol to 95 parts of water will stay liquid until the thermometer registers 15 below zero.

A mixture of 25 per cent glycerine and 75 per cent water freezes at 15 degrees below zero, and by increasing the proportion of glycerine to 95 per cent the freezing point goes down to 13 degrees below. Twenty per cent. calcium chloride and 80 per cent water by weight will freeze at slightly more than 20 degrees below, and 23 per cent calcium will bring the freezing point down to 20 below.

PRIVATE GARAGES CUT DOWN UPKEEP

Price of Gasoline Will Cause Many to Look After Their Cars.

It may very well be that the increase in the price of gasoline, with its proportionate effect on the high cost of garaging, will drive a good many persons to look after their cars for themselves who otherwise would be only too glad to leave them in public garages.

In the case where a man has a small plot of land available, which would not often be so in the heart of the city, he would be impelled very likely, to put up a small private garage of his own. On the outskirts of the city there are many properties which have room enough for such a building. Where a man so situated has an automobile he is almost sure to think of building or assembling a garage.

Formerly demountable garages or portable ones were wooden buildings, sold in sections, and sent ready to erect according to a given plan. But now there are a good many knock down garages of metal, of which the prices are not so large as formerly.

Originally, wood had the call, although naturally not so safe as metal, because the price was one-half or one-third what was charged for a small and unpretentious sheet metal affair. One type of sheet metal garage has a steel frame and corrugated roof and doors. It is shipped with wire glass windows, all complete, at prices ranging from $125 to $165. This is no more than wood used to be, and except in the case of very small buildings still is.

All depends upon the elaborateness and the size of these buildings. Where they are intended to house several cars and are built large and roomy with space enough to swing a car around in, they are bound to run into money. But concrete garages, small enough to house a single machine and allow a small amount of room in which to work around it, can be built very reasonable indeed. There are such to be had which won't cost more than $400 or $500, and the average of the moderate sized will be under $1,000.

In many respects the concrete buildings are superior to those of any other form of construction.

HISTORY REPEATS.

"This is history repeating itself, sure enough," laughed Vaugan Glaser, actor and producer of plays, one day recently, as he stepped from his Garford touring car in Philadelphia, after a run from Pittsburg. "In the old days of the show business, the little one-ring circus traveled over the country in horse drawn vehicles. Today, I am touring a large part of the United States, playing in various cities with my company, by means of a motor car.

During this season I have traveled approximately 5,500 miles over all sorts of roads and under almost every known weather condition. But 'overland troupeing' nowadays is vastly different from the old wagon-show experiences."

FAMOUS RACING CAR TO BE SHOWN HERE

National That Won at Indianapolis in Local Show Room.

The National car that won the 500-mile international championship at Indianapolis has been shipped to Boston and is now on exhibition in the salesrooms of W. H. Stevens, the local distributor, at 1629 Boylston street.

W. H. Stevens has just received word from the factory that their entire export of this season's cars are sold and delivered to dealers.

The National people have enjoyed an exceptionally large business this year, in fact the baskets of the stork chaps did themselves in a very certain position in order to meet the demand for National cars they are going to need a second series of this year's models will only a few minor refinements. The "forty" having made good in the hands of owners, no new models are found necessary.

The new series will have, however, a added equipment, Gray & Davis ignition and starting systems. This new equipment will make the National one of the most complete cars at a slightly increased price.

NEW FLANDERS SIX IS A SNAPPY CAR

Verdict of Motorists Is That Builder Has Surpassed Former Efforts.

The much-heralded Flanders Six reached town Wednesday and has been on exhibition at the J. S. Harrington sales room, 689 Boylston street (Copley Square), and scores of motorists have looked the new car over and are satisfied that Flanders lived up to everything he predicted and then some.

Disappointments in the delays of its appearance from the factory have been frequent, owing to the Flanders corps of engineers positively refusing to release the car until every detail of material, construction and equipment was satisfactory. The result is a veritable sensation of the variety the public has been subjected to look for from Flanders.

The verdict of the local motorists and those that have come in from all parts of New England is that Flanders as usual has not only made good, but has even surpassed his past efforts, as in the first of his six he shows a fifty-horsepower, six-cylinder car that, comparing favorably in lines, construction and detail with many of the highest priced cars.

The car is of the most approved six cylinder type, with a motor cast en bloc which, incidentally, is removed and looks more like a showcar motor than stock one distributed to agents for demonstrating purposes. The motor is unusually flexible, throttling down to three miles an hour on high, and from that point to fifty-five miles an hour in less than a block.

The equipment of the new car is high grade and comprehensive to a most noteworthy degree. It would seem that not a fitting that could contribute to convenience or luxury had been overlooked to say nothing of the new wrinkles that the Flanders equipment has contrived to make a part of the new car.

Included in its equipment are the Gray & Davis electric starter and lighting system, electric horn, Warner speedometer set in the deck over the floor, clear vision windshield of the storm tilt type with mohair top, electric cigar lighter and trouble lamp, electric dash lamp, illuminating all instruments, such as oil and gasoline gauge, speedometer, switch, together with special tire irons carried in the rear, with an extra demountable rim.

The body lines of the car are straight and clean-cut and the finish is equal to the highest-priced cars. The steps are clear of all rod boxes, tires or any unsightly projections. The wheel base of the car is 130 inches and the tires are 36x4½ all around fitted on the new type of Hayward demountable rims.

The car has a full seven-passenger body with disappearing extra seats, which fall into a recess back of the front seat when not in use, and it is also so arranged that the load is placed in the centre of the car, reducing the tendency to side sway at high speeds.

SEES BIG SELLING YEAR FOR TRUCKS

Many Large Firms Buying Power Vehicles Instead of Horses.

"From general indications this will be a big selling year for motor trucks," says Harry B. Hoop, the Ace general sales manager, who has just completed a trip through the Middle West and Canada.

"There is a general wave of prosperity throughout the country," continues Mr. Hoop, "This year's crops are a record maker, and the farmers' bins are bulging. The steel mills which have been able to obtain the raw material are working day and night. There have never been so many orders on their books as now.

"Delivering these goods to the ultimate consumer is going to be a large factor. The motor truck will play an important part in the hauling of them.

"Among the largest concerns which have ordered trucks from us and thus protected themselves against the slowness of horse delivery are the Standard Oil Company, Morris & Co., the big packers, the New England Coal & Coke Company, the Pabst Brewing Company of Boston, Lord & Taylor of New York and many of the largest department stores in the United States. The Smith Premier Typewriter, Harrison Brothers & Co., the well-known paint house, and others.

"It is interesting to note that all of these concerns have used motor trucks for over a year. That they are buying more trucks instead of horses to take care of the business rush is an evidence of the superiority of the motor truck over the horse."

TRAFFIC RULES ARE GOOD

They Protect Inexperienced From Bad Bumps.

"The green driver's best friend is the traffic policeman with his little book of rules."

George E. Daniels, general manager of the Oakland Motor Car Company of Pontiac, made this statement recently upon the two-hour examination he had which prompted a discussion of automobile traffic arrangements.

"If it were not for the carefully considered traffic rules," continued Mr. Daniels, "that are in force in each city there would be a great many more accidents. As a matter of fact, a good many of those would prevail and too great emphasis cannot be placed upon the training a car through a crowded street may be given. Instinct. The traffic regulations are his salvation. Without them he would go blundering through, perhaps at a terrific speed and at right into a jam, would lose his head and possibly damage his car. With the rules kept in check and saved from that."

Increased Output.

With so compelling and comprehensive a line of motor cars, it is not surprising that the Pope company has found it necessary to double its output in order to supply the demand for the extraordinarily great list of customers in all parts of the United States and abroad. A large proportion of these is manufactured during the current season will be represented by the six Pope-Hartford "40's," full particulars of which have been received with the greatest interest by those who know from previous and observation the value of a Pope-Hartford production.

Sees Big Demand for Electric Starters

There will be an enormous demand this coming season for electric self starters, according to Fred Bradley, manager of the Velie Boston branch.

The fact that nine out of ten prospective customers who call at our salesroom ask for details in regard to our electric self starter shows conclusively an almost universal demand for a positive electric starter. In fact, no car will be complete and up-to-date this coming season unless the equipment includes an efficient self-starter.

The Gray & Davis system, as applied to the Velie Forty and the Velie Six, is absolutely positive and 100 per cent efficient and no simpler that a child can start the motor. No matter how cold the weather or how adverse the conditions, simply press one foot pedal and away goes the car. There is no trouble, expense or annoyance. The dynamo automatically charges the battery without cost and the exceptional power gives you instant, positive ignition and makes the 1913 Velie an ideal car for a lady to drive."

Novel Guarantee.

A unique system in the handling of second-hand automobiles is used by the Berkeley Motor Car Company of this city. Manager Fred H. Freeman makes a guarantee to return the full purchase price if the car is not as represented or is unsatisfactory after a reasonable trial.

Flanders Will Leave Matters as They Are

As there seems to be a general misunderstanding and considerable mix appearance among dealers handling the various lines—Stoddard, Maxwell, Flanders, etc.—as to just what will happen when Walter E. Flanders takes hold of the reins of the reorganized United States, Mr. Flanders states as follows.

"While I am not yet ready, and it would be premature, to announce the new sales policy in detail, I will say that the general policy will be to leave matters just as they are so far as dealers are concerned. That is to say, those dealers who have been handling Maxwell or Stoddard cars will continue to enjoy those agencies undisturbed. And dealers who are handling the Flanders sixes will also continue to handle that line undisturbed. The sales, like the manufacturing policy, will be one of expansion, not contraction.

"That is to say, those dealers who have been trained to sell Maxwell or Stoddard cars in the field, who are imbued with loyalty and enthusiasm for the product, are the ones to continue to represent those lines. And that will be the policy.

"And while the general administrative offices will be moved to Detroit, our New York office will continue to be an important one."

Get Big Mileage in Gasoline Tests

Buick Officials Say They Got 28 Miles on One Gallon.

With the idea of getting at the exact gasoline consumption of the Buick cars, one of the officials of the Buick Motor Company recently made a series of tests on the various 1913 models. These tests were conducted in the city and over rolling hills with cars which were picked at random from shipments just at the Michigan factory.

The model 24 roadster and 25 touring car, each of which have thirty-two by two and one-half tires and twenty four horse-power motors, traveled on an average of twenty-eight miles per gallon, while the model 30 roadster and 33 touring, equipped with thirty-four by four tires and thirty horse-power motors, were able to average slightly over twenty four miles per gallon according to the official of the company who made the test. The model 40, five passenger touring car, which is the largest car listed by the Buick Company and which has thirty-six by four tires and a forty horse-power motor, exceeded the twenty-two mile per gallon mark.

"It is a well-known fact that the over head type of motor, because of its small combustion, temper and valve arrangements, is superior to the L or T-Head type," says an official of this company. "Any motor car owner who cares to figure the difference between the gasoline consumption on his own car and those on the various new Buicks, will probably find a considerable difference."

IT'S A SMALL WORLD.

Gramm Trucks in Use in All Parts of Globe.

"It's a small old world, after all," says O. W. Bennett, vice-president of the Gramm Motor Truck Company, of Lima, Ohio. "No matter how far away a person may get, he is certain to find products of his home country, either human or manufactured, which reminds him of this fact. "Gramm trucks are to be found in almost every civilized country on the globe where the transportation of goods and persons is a factor. One firm alone in Manila, in the Philippine Island, is using twenty-five Gramm vehicles now and ordering others at the rate of about two a month. Honolulu is well supplied with Gramms. Brazil, Venezuela, Cuba, Porto Rico, Australia, New Zealand and many other foreign countries are big since been accustomed to seeing Gramm trucks replace horses in the hauling of merchandise and passengers."

No-Rim-Cut Tires

10% Oversize

Used on 250,000 Cars

The final verdict on tires is told by the fact that Goodyears outsell all others.

In three years the sales have doubled six times. And we are doubling our output to meet next year's demand. We judge that these tires are used today on 250,000 cars.

That's because motorists are now making comparisons. Most cars now have odometers.

Men see what it means to have tires that can't rim-cut. They see what our oversize means.

The mileage figures show that in 13 years we have best solved the whole tire problem. We've cut tire bills in two.

You can see the reason by one glance at these tires. And men who have tried them—men who know—now buy on the average 100,000 per month. Come see the tires—see why men prefer them.

Treads With a Bull-Dog Grip

Here is the very last word in a winter tread. It solves the skidding question as was never done before.

It is an extra tread, made of very tough rubber, vulcanized on to the regular. Thus it gives you a double-thick tread.

The blocks are deep-cut, so they last for tens of miles. They present to the road surface countless edges and angles.

Each block widens out at the base, so the strain is distributed. Without this, a non-skid proves very short-lived.

You can see in a moment that this tread meets all your ideals in non-skids.

That's the Tire for your Car! the Diamond SAFETY (Squegee) TREAD

IT MAKES GOOD. It has traction, it's safe on any pavement, no matter how fast you're going, or how short you turn, and it holds when you want to stop. It's the

Diamond Safety Tread Tire

(Squegee)

IT'S just the same with tires as with cars—you've got to have something extra for emergencies. You've got to have something for tight places. The Diamond Safety Tread Tire has got it. I'm a good driver, but where'd I be in a tight place if my tires don't hold? I've always got traction with the Diamond Safety Tread and the car goes where I want it to go. There's no other tire that has the mileage in it that you'll get out of the Diamond Safety Tread Tire—it

Won't slip, Won't slide, Won't skid—it grips

RETAILERS GO IN FOR POWER WAGONS

Thousands of Light Delivery Wagons Come Into Use In 1912.

In motoring history, 1912 is going to be recorded as the year in which the retail merchant woke up.

The American storekeeper has been a hard nut for the automobile salesman to crack. He was skeptical on expense, and on reliability of motor car delivery. He was prone to demand facts and figures. These not forthcoming, he decided to let somebody else try it first. Also, he wanted to buy, when he should reach a favorable opinion, from someone he knew in a business way.

When, along with other prominent manufacturers, the Studebaker Corporation brought out its first delivery cars for the 1912 market, due deference has been paid existing conditions. Studebaker salesmen went out, instructed to show the man that the car would help him.

"Leave a couple of your horse-drawn wagons in the barn today, we'll do the work," was the customary opening and the salesman saw to it that the merchant kept track of the expense and the results.

Thousands in Use

Almost always a demonstration of this kind brought forth an order for one car. At the request of the salesman, the merchant kept track of his motor delivery cost. After the car had been use for a number of months, the salesman called and had the merchant summarize the [illegible] his experiment. As a rule, he celebrated his second visit as well, by selling one or more Studebaker "20" delivery wagons.

Thousands of these cars [illegible] now in use all over the country. The experience of their owner is, to a great extent, on file at the Studebaker Corporation's office in Detroit. Many of the letters are intensely interesting. They have come from grocers, laundries, dry-cleaners, clothing firms, milliners, bakeries, caterers, butchers, dry goods firms and a great variety of other lines. Automobile accessory houses are largely represented. One of the most thorough and successful experiments was that made in Salt Lake by the Zion Co-operative Mercantile Institution of which Joseph F. Smith is president.

Cheap Upkeep.

The most striking feature of these letters is their uniformity in statistical result. Each of the Studebaker "20" delivery wagons is called on for an average day's work of forty-five miles. The cost of supplies is almost invariably from six to eight dollars a month. Tires average from 8,000 to 5,000 miles. A gallon of lubricating oil lasts for from 200 to 300 miles and a gallon of gasoline is good for about seventeen miles, the motor being kept running at nearly all stops.

As a general rule, each delivery wagon supplants two horse-drawn rigs, though in many cases this number is increased to three. The relative expense of the motor wagon is almost exactly half that of the horses, according to the testimony of each merchant.

Emergency Thread Cutter.

In an emergency a thread can be cut in soft metal, such as aluminum, with a screw similar to the one that is to be used. The screw should be tapered at the end so that it can be entered in the hole to be tapped, and grooved like a tap so that there will be some sort of a cutting edge. Such an improvised tap will not cut much of a thread, but often will make it possible to put in a screw that will hold for a time, especially if there is not much strain upon it.

'MOVIES' SHOW HOW NON-SKIDS WORK

B. F. Goodrich Company Displays Pictures in Boylston Street Window.

The moving picture has come out of the d[illegible]

Most of us would be astonished to come forwards upon a full-fledged moving picture show, doing business in broad daylight, in full view of the passing crowds without fee or favor. Yet that is what is happening at 851-857 Boylston street.

The pictures are thrown from a moving picture machine inside the building, on to a white China silk curtain stretched across the window front. The subject of the first scene is "Preparing a Skidway," and if you have ever driven an automobile over wet, slippery asphalt streets you will realize that the first scene is well laid for the acts that are to follow.

The second scene opens with a touring car coming rapidly along a side street. Before your very eyes it whirls around the corner of that slippery street at twenty miles an hour, with little concern for the condition of the road. If you expect to see the auto do fancy figures and end up against the curb you will be disappointed, for it goes right on about its business, without slip or slide.

Another machine follows with the same apparent reckless unconcern, and it also sticks to the straight and narrow path. A third machine is following. It comes around the corner just like the other two. But you spoke too soon. Scarcely are the words out of your mouth before that car had turned completely around and might [illegible] be whirling if a curbstone hadn't interfered and put a stop to further activities.

This exceedingly clever idea has been devised by the B. F. Goodrich Company for the purpose of proving the effectiveness of the new Goodrich Safety Tread Tires, and it proves their value in an astonishing effective way. The machines that skidded were equipped with the ordinary smooth tires while the machines that held their course were equipped with the new Safety Tread.

TIRE IMPRINTS.

These Tracks Are Full of Significance to Those Who Motor.

If Conan Doyle were beginning his Sherlock Holmes stories today, there would undoubtedly be a reference to a monograph which Holmes had written on the subject of tire imprints as a factor in deduction.

The average man, even the average automobile owner sees no special significance in the tire imprints on a city street, but to men in the tire business, tire tracks are full of meaning.

"In fifteen or twenty minutes' walk I could tell pretty closely how Diamond Safety Tread Tires stand in this city," said a Diamond salesman the other day. "The imprint of our tire is as plain as print to a salesman. Wherever I go I catch myself scanning the pavements, especially on wet days or where they have just been sprinkled. Robinson Crusoe didn't spot the footprints any quicker than I can pick out a Diamond Safety Tread track from a maze of other tire prints.

"Maybe the Diamond track is easier to pick out than others for it is distinctive in having both cross and parallel bars, and as it never slips, every set of bars makes a sharp, clear-cut imprint. Then, too, a great many car owners use our tire on all four wheels, whereas most non-skid tires are used only on the rear wheels."

BIG TIRE EXPENSE DUE TO INATTENTION

Owner Attributes Much Trouble to the Lack of Proper Pressure.

"Seventeen thousand miles is the distance I have run one Goodyear tire on my car," said R. Parker Smith of Fort Wayne, Indiana.

"My odometer has registered 17,000 miles already and I candidly believe I can get twenty thousand miles out of the Non-Skid tire."

"The talk about the high cost of tires has had my attention for some time," continued Mr. Smith. "I believe the cost is due, in most cases, to the lack of attention of drivers. I always keep my tires inflated to the proper pressure and have never been bothered with underinflation troubles. There has never been an occurrence of such a thing as a loose tread or a broken side wall since the air gauge has been faithfully used."

GRAND PRIX CAR HERE.

Stutz "43" Attracts Many Speed Fans.

Covered with the dust of many battles, the Stutz racing car "43" is daily visited by many motorists at the salesrooms of the Stutz Motor Car Company. Several offers have been made for the car by enthusiasts who desire the honor of driving the car which made such an enviable showing on the track during the racing season just closed.

"This year, against the pick of American and French factories, this car, piloted by Gil Anderson, finished in third place in the Grand Prix, lack of gasoline at a crucial moment depriving it of second place by only thirty-one seconds. Thus, in the entire history of the Grand Prix but two American cars have finished with place.

"This same car won the Illinois trophy race at Elgin and made the big 'cleanup' at the Rockingham Park races."

"A REAL AUTOMOBILE."

The Difference Between a Locomobile and an Automobile.

O. E. McCarthy, of Neate & McCarthy, tells a good one about a man, a seven-year-old boy and a Locomobile. The lad was standing by his dad's new Loco. After inquiring of him who owned the car and its make, a man asked him this question.

"Well, son, what's the difference between a Locomobile and an automobile?"

The youngster turned the question over in his mind several times before venturing a reply. Then he sprang this:

"The difference," he said slowly, "between a Locomobile and an automobile is this: 'A Locomobile is a real automobile and an automobile is just one of the ordinary kind.'"

BUY FIRE APPARATUS.

93 Cities and Towns Purchase $684,000 Worth.

Ninety-three American municipalities, in thirty States, bought 11 pieces of motor fire apparatus at a cost of $684,000 during the month of October, according to statistics compiled by the Power Wagon, of Chicago.

Pennsylvania leads the list in the number of machines purchased, the number of cities buying, and the total investment. Thirteen municipalities in the Keystone State bought fourteen fire motors valued at $84,000 during the past thirty days.

Little Massachusetts was a worthy second, with nine cities, thirteen machines, and $78,000 investment.

Portland, Ore., was the largest single purchaser among the cities, with a total outlay of $68,300 for ten machines. These varied in cost from $5,800 to $12,500 each, the latter price being paid for a motor aerial ladder truck, which, incidentally, was the most expensive piece of motor fire apparatus sold during October.

The average investment of each of the ninety-three cities in fire motors was $7,358. Each machine averaged $6,000 in price.

New Tire Manager.

W. T. Walker, who is well known in the automobile trade in most any part of the country, has been appointed New England branch manager of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company, with headquarters in Boston. Manager Walker is best known as "Hap." He was formerly with the Oldsmobile and Matheson companies and has travelled extensively for other automobile concerns. He has a big following in New England, and his friends feel sure that the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company's sales will be greatly increased under Mr. Walker's management.

HOW TO LOCATE LEAK.

Use Soapy Water and Apply It to Joints.

If the acetylene lamps burn with a yellowish tinge, it is probable that there is a leak in the pipe line. Examine the connections of the line and see that they are tight. Use soapy water, applied to the joints while looking for bubbles.

ARREST FOR SLOW DRIVING.

Chicago Traffic Laws Work Both Ways.

Chicago speed laws seem to work both ways, and to have both maximum and minimum limits. Arthur Rothenberg, a motor truck driver, found this out recently, and it cost him $5 and costs to make the discovery. He was arrested for driving too slowly.

GERMANY FIGHTS YANKEE INVASION

Have Not Learned That Quantity of Auto Production Means Low Cost.

"Hoch der Kaiser," the national "God Save the King" of Germany, is not one whit more popular among the automobile manufacturers of the fatherland than is "Down with American Motor Cars." Like several other European countries, notably England, Germany has taken up the fight against the ever-menacing "American invasion," and automobiles manufactured in this country are far from popular with manufacturers there, according to H. B. Harper, export manager for the Willys-Overland Company of Toledo, Ohio, who lately returned from a trip of several months abroad.

"American made automobiles are to be discredited at any cost in Germany, if the manufacturers of that country have their way," says Mr. Harper. "Newspapers are devoting both news and editorial columns [illegible] attention to the "Yankee" [illegible] makers are devoting almost as much energy toward keeping out the foreign products as they are to the development of their own cars.

[illegible] is as fully determined to oust the American car as is England, but the [illegible] is even more virulent [illegible] British Isles, says the Overland [illegible].

"The Germans have not yet learned the [illegible] American manufacturers [illegible] that quantity [illegible] of the highest [illegible]. They cannot conceive [illegible] cars in a season. Prosperity
Yours—or the Other Fellow's?

THE dawn of a new prosperity rises today on America. The election is over. Bumper crops have come from the fields. The farmers' bins are bulging. The railroads are buying. The steel mills are running full blast again. Many believe the American people are beginning the most prosperous era of their history.

On the crest of the prosperity wave will ride only those alert, far sighted houses which project themselves into the future and prepare for it. Here is a big and interesting problem for them: how are all these products, this grain, these cottons, these textiles, this steel and this machinery going to be carried to the ultimate consumer?

The railroads will take care of their share as usual. But the railroads do not carry the goods to the ultimate consumer. For every piece of goods that is hauled by railroad 100 miles, is hauled over street or roads 5 miles by horse or automobile. The extent of road transportation is today way beyond the belief of the average man.

Wheat, for instance, is hauled to the railroad by horse or automobile. The railroad hauls it to the mill and then on to the city. The horse or automobile hauls it to the grocer and from him to the ultimate consumer. Thus the story goes. Are your horses able to take care of the increased business?

Have you enough horses to take care of the increased business?

Don't buy more horses. Buy motor trucks. They can work twenty-four hours a day if necessary. They can haul three times the load. They can cover a greater area of territory. They reach out and get new business.

ALCO
Motor Trucks
6½ ton 5 ton 3½ ton 2 ton

They never tire. They travel as fast at the end of the day as at the beginning. They do not die suddenly. They do not consume on Sunday.

Motor trucks are increasing at the rate of about 100 per cent per year. They are being used now in every line of business. Nearly every house that has bought one motor truck has bought more motor trucks. Sixty-two per cent of the Alco trucks we have built were purchased on reorders. That is the evidence. The testimony of nearly a thousand Alco owners is against the horse.

Within a year Alco trucks have risen from sixth to a commanding position. They have behind them a company with a capital of $50,000,000,—a company of 77 years' accumulative transportation experience.

And bear this in mind: sixty five per cent of all Alco owners are rated by Bradstreet and Dun at $1,000,000 or over. Big business houses are shrewd buyers. They seldom purchase mistakes. Nearly every one of these big business houses has bought more Alco trucks. This is a good guide for the smaller business house, for it can avoid the danger of an unwise purchase if it, too, selects the Alco.

We sell the Alco truck on a scientific basis. We are not so much interested in the immediate future as in the ultimate business. Therefore, a year ago, we established the Transportation Cost Bureau.

This Bureau will determine for you just how much your horses are actually costing you, will blue print your horse delivery system, reroute your hauls, estimate if you can employ motor trucks to advantage, determine how many you need, the size, the type of body, and will show you what the automobile equipment will save over the horse equivalent. The saving runs from 15 to 40 per cent, depending on the type of business. The service rendered by this Bureau is without charge to you.

COMFORT AND BEAUTY IN 1913 ALCO CARS

Changes This Year Chiefly in Way of Refinement of Body Design.

The new [illegible] 60 horse-power [illegible] fitted with four types [illegible] five and seven passenger [illegible] the Colonial limousine [illegible].

Changes [illegible] chiefly in the [illegible] in the body design [illegible] of making the car [illegible] comfortable. The [illegible] 1912 Alco is [illegible] been made [illegible] more attractive.

The rear [illegible] is three inches wider than last year. [illegible] has been made deeper [illegible] inches in the open car [illegible] inches in the closed car. Doors also are wider and are the efforts of [illegible] of careful study by the [illegible].

Clean and [illegible] lines are secured by [illegible] box which is underneath the running board near the forward [illegible] below the apron. The entrance [illegible] the tool box is by merely turning a knob on the apron.

On the gasoline tank there is a tell tale gauge which indicates whether the tank is full, three-quarters full, one-half full or nearly empty.

The windshield on the Alco is of extremely simple design and mounted on the cowl of the dash, no [illegible] rods being used to support it. The shield is movable both forward and back of the car and is noted for its strength and security.

Electrically Lighted.

The 1913 Alco is electrically lighted by means of [illegible] & Davis dynamo driven by the pump shaft of the motor. There are nine electric lights on the open cars and eleven on the closed cars. Both the open and the closed cars have a searchlight seven inches in diameter attached to the cowl on the dash mounted on a universal joint [illegible] forward, backward or sideways.

In 1913 we will make 40,000 cars

From 400 cars in 1908 to 40,000 cars in 1913

UNDER the present ownership and management the Overland has been before the public just six years. These have been the most trying and bitter years of the industry. The last six years have given birth, growth and expansion to the modern automobile as you see it today, and have determined which cars were to survive the fierce struggle and become permanently established.

During this historical constructive period, the Overland has progressed more rapidly than any other car of its type made. This is important and significant.

In six years we have jumped from 400 cars a year to 40,000 cars a year. This is an increase of nearly 10,000 per cent. This growth is greater than that of any other single concern in the industry. This growth is greater than the growth of the combined factories of the world. In ten years the entire industry has shown an increase of 8000 per cent. The United States alone shows an increase of 5270 per cent; Germany an increase of 1281 per cent; Italy an increase of 683 per cent; United Kingdom an increase of 321 per cent; France an increase of 160 per cent. But our individual increase in six short years has been nearly 10,000 per cent.

In round numbers we made 400 cars in 1908; 4,000 in 1909; 15,000 in 1910; 15,000 in 1911; 25,000 in 1912; and we will make 40,000 cars in 1913. The grand total is almost 100,000 cars, which translated into American money means that the American people have had faith enough to invest over $100,000,000.00 of their money in this car.

The Overland, by virtue of this unusual act of imolicit confidence, warm appreciation, and exceptional recognition, is today the most prominent, permanent, and popular car of its type produced.

We give these amazing figures to prove the indisputable evidence of our production skill, strength, and economical manufacturing ability. We have done what others could have done—if they had possessed the foresight to realize an opportunity. There are those who are now manufacturing cars, that started five or ten years before we did. They had our opportunity—but failed utterly. Six years ago we knew the secret of automobile success was quantity production. For increased production in any line of business is bound to decrease the selling price.

Big production, growing each year has made it possible for us to increase our car value, and in consequence decrease our retail selling price which accounts for and explains our phenomenal progress. By sheer force of huge production, which was our original conception of capturing the automobile markets of the world, we were able to give each succeeding year more actual car for less actual money than any one else in the business. This big, broad manufacturing policy resulted in our rapid and remarkable growth.

Take our present $985 car as a specific case. This car upset the entire industry. When announced abroad the trade stubbornly refused to believe such a car—at such a price—was possible. Jealous European competitors made every possible endeavor to pull it apart in a frantic effort to pick a flaw. But not one could be found, and the result is—we have more European orders alone than we will be able to fill. Of the demand for this car in America we need hardly say much, except to mention the fact that we are over 3,000 cars behind immediate orders, and have been for over three months.

If you are in the market for a car see this Model 69 Overland. If you will compare it with others you will be convinced, you will save considerable money. It is a self starting, thirty horse-power, five passenger touring car, magnificently finished, modernly appointed, and completely equipped with every necessary essential. No other maker can give you its equal for a cent less than $1,200.

CITY CAMPAIGN FAILS TO ROUSE PARTY MEN

Principal Interest Centers in Contest to Fill School Board Vacancy.

Apathy has been the marked feature of the city campaign to date. Democratic leaders are showing little or no interest in the outcome of the vote on January 14 and the Republican organization in Boston does not propose to take an active part in the city election.

The principal interest in the election centres in the choice to fill one vacancy on the School Board created by the retirement of Chairman David A. Ellis. It is practically settled that Isaac Harris will have the support of the Democratic city machine as against Miss Frances Curtis who has been endorsed by the Public School Association and the Citizens Municipal League.

John D. Marks, a Dorchester attorney, and John F. Duffy, another lawyer from that district, are anxious for the support of the Democratic machine but as Mayor Fitzgerald has already declared for Harris, his influence is expected to be as good as an endorsement.

In the City Council contest Councillors Walter L. Collins and John J. Attridge [illegible] it is assured that the Democratic machine will give them its endorsement. The Democrats, however, will not accept Ex-Representative Lewis J. Hewitt of Brighton for third place. Instead of endorsing Hewitt the organization may give its support to James A. Watson of Roxbury who is endorsed and supported by Senator Timilty.

Shriners' Charity Concert.

The members of Aleppo Temple, Mystic Shrine, which includes in its jurisdiction all those in Massachusetts is now organizing a charity fund which shall be ready for instant use, and to help it along it is planned to give a concert in Mechanics building this evening. The attraction will be one that will appeal to the music lover, for on this occasion Sousa and his band will come to Boston for the first appearance of the season. The famous leader has always had a large following hereabouts, and there will be lively interest in hearing the new marches which he will give for the first time in Boston this evening.

Methods of Exterminating Bedbugs.

There are various methods recommended to exterminate bedbugs, some of which are exceedingly dangerous. The most common methods call for the use of corrosive sublimate and other high-powered poisons, and others call for poisonous gases and explosive compounds.

These methods belong to the age of the wooden plow when compared to the safe and easy methods rapidly taking their place.

The bedbug being such a cunning pest and concealing himself in the cracks and crevices of the walls, beds, ceilings, closets, etc., the temptation to use liquid preparations of poisonous character is strong, because to the inexperienced the idea of pouring the liquid into the cracks and thus killing the bugs looks good. But as it is necessary for the bug to get some of the preparation into its system, it oftentimes walks away covered with the poison and doesn't absorb it.

When this poison-laden insect bites somebody there is liable to be serious results. On the other hand, by using Martin's Bedbug Powder, which is practically harmless to human beings, there is no danger to anyone but the bug. And as the bugs are attracted to it and eat it, it soon despatches them. It also kills the nits.

Sold by druggists and department stores everywhere for 50c to $1.00; 5c and 10c extra by mail. Eleven different powders for other pests; name kind when ordering.

The assertion that business today is in the hands of young men doesn't exactly explain how B. F. Dutton continues to be at the commercial helm at the age of eighty-one.

It is figured by Mr. Dutton's friends that either he doesn't know he is over four-score, or that he is one of those exceptions that prove the rule.

Anyhow, Mr. Dutton is an indisputable fact, sitting there at his desk every day and giving orders to other men, the orders being obeyed as quickly as is physically and commercially possible.

Mr. Dutton admires people of quick, decisive action. Naturally, the men closest to him, who receive his direct orders and suggestions, do not lose any time in putting those orders through.

These statements about and by Mr. Dutton are apropos of the fact that the house of Houghton & Dutton has just celebrated its fortieth anniversary the past week. The business is nearly half the age of President Dutton, its executive head.

Mr. Dutton was asked if a young man really has as good a chance to advance in business today as he did fifty years ago. Mr. Dutton believes the young man has a first-rate chance. He had no hesitancy in saying that the chances for a young man to succeed are a great deal better now. He believes that our country has grown so fast that the opportunities are more than one can calculate.

Mr. Dutton has some rigid ideas about the ethics of advertising. He holds that an advertisement should tell the truth—and nothing but the truth—as well as draw trade. He has a profound conviction that a deceiving advertisement only reacts on the merchant.

Mr. Dutton was asked to give a few rules of life and business as he had found them. He said that quick action has been his motto through life. He believes in thinking things over as he works and then working them out later in a decisive manner. His success in business, he says, has been due unquestionably to truthfulness and fair dealing. He believes in being fair to himself and to others. He always takes the public into his confidence.

Mr. Dutton made it a practice early in life never to allow an employe to say anything but the truth when dealing with customers. That policy has been kept up, and today a customer may rest assured that a question will be truthfully answered.

He makes it a practice to read all the advertisements prepared for the newspapers. If he finds a word that is not truthful concerning his business, it is stricken out.

That is how he worked to make his business career a success. Coupled with this, he set a rule of conduct. He is a firm believer in religion. He practices the great truths. He believes in and practices the old adage, "Early to bed and early to rise."

Mr. Dutton gives four rules of life thought out by himself. They are:

First—Be strictly honest.
Second—Be willing to work.
Third—Be modest.
Fourth—Be tactful and diplomatic.

A BEAUTIFUL, NEW, UP-TO-DATE PIANO

Where the Frederick Piano Was Made

Every part of this piano, from frame to finished mahogany case, was made in the factory of JACOB DOLL & SONS, NEW YORK, one of the largest and best-reputed manufacturers in the United States, whose factory covers a whole New York block, and is sold with their 10-year guarantee as well as our own. No better workmanship could be had. Look them up in the Piano Purchasers Guide, the official book of the trade, and see for yourself.

For the Unheard-of Price of $175.00

What the Frederick Piano Looks Like

Handsome case with distinctive individuality, double veneered throughout; finest figured mahogany, trusses, pilasters, mouldings carved in natural wood; top panel an art piece in itself highly polished; 7 1-3 octaves; 3 pedals, muffler attachment; bushed tuning pins; latest improved repeating action; ivory keys; hammers finest imported felt; extra heavy composite bell-metal plate; hardwood back frame; height 4 feet 7 inches, width 5 feet 2 inches, depth 2 feet 2 inches.

We Take Great Pride in Offering You

This beautiful new Piano, "The Frederick," up to date and in every way a credit to the piano art, at the remarkably low price of $175.00. We were the first house in New England to break the tremendous high prices of pianos, and now we claim the distinction of being the first to offer you one as good as the best at a price you can afford. We are probably the only house, for many reasons, that could do it. This piano would be sold for $300.00 anywhere else.

You Cannot Afford to Miss This Offer

Here is a chance to buy a piano that will be a credit to your home and add dignity to it. No longer need you envy your neighbor; no longer need your children miss what belongs to them. The greatest opportunity of your lifetime is yours. Grasp it and enjoy the pleasures of life. And on our terms it will be paid for and never missed. And if it is not as we represent it after 60 days' trial, bring it back and get your money back. That's part of our guarantee.

5.00 Down — The Frederick Piano — 1.00 A Week

What We Give You AND How We Help You

A $300 Piano for $175.00.
Choice of three styles of cases to select from.
A beautiful scarf and stool free.
Credit and allow you to pay us on easy terms.
Free delivery anywhere in New England.
We agree to keep piano tuned for two years.
Our own and maker's ten-year guarantee.
Money back after 60 days' trial if not satisfactory.
Your old Piano, Organ, Phonograph, Typewriter, Furniture, Desks, Jewelry or anything else of value taken as part payment.
If after three years' use you decide you want to exchange for any other make in stock (and we have them all), full value allowed.
Could you ask more?

We Invite You to Come

And see this Frederick Piano—the greatest value in the history of the piano business. You don't have to buy—but you probably won't be able to resist doing so. It's a darling. You'll have the place all picked out for it in your mind the minute you see it. The price is only $175 — a little down, a little each week. If you can't come, write us and inclose first payment and let us send you one—all expenses paid. We have no salesmen out. To our "many friends" in Lowell and vicinity we announce the opening of our "Lowell Branch" on the first day of October where you can see "The Frederick" and all our other bargains. Look us up at 227 Central St., Lowell, Mass. "In the Heart of the City."

POVERTY HANDICAP TO 'DAKOTA'S' WILL FIGHT

Claimant Has No Funds with Which to Employ Stenographers or Attorneys.

"If Dakota Dan loses this fight for his rightful inheritance, it will be because he is penniless and can't put up a proper legal fight."

This statement was made in the corridors of the East Cambridge Court House, where the remarkable Russell inheritance fight is in progress before Master Gilbert A. A. Pevey, appointed by the Supreme Court to hear the evidence.

Many people of Melrose think that Dakota Dan is Daniel Blake Russell, in spite of his repudiation by William C. Russell, and the acceptance of him as his brother of a little brown man known as Fresno Blake.

But things have gone decidedly bad for the Dakotan since he began his fight three and a half years ago.

Dakota Dan had plenty of money at his first trial, apparently, and good lawyers. But somehow they lost the chance of presenting several of his witnesses on the ground that they would be called in rebuttal, while Judge Lawton held, when the attempt was made, that they could not be so called.

Dakota Dan lost the case. He carried it to the Supreme Court. Mr. Pevey was appointed to hear the case and report to the Court on it. Mr Pevey has the position of a judge and will decide the question whether or not Dakota Dan is Daniel Blake Russell.

The claimant thought he would have Senator Leslie Simpson of North Dakota to make this fight, but Simpson, because he was running for Congress and pressure only because Dakota Dan had no money, said he could not take the case. For two or three days Dakota Dan hung around with no lawyer.

William R. Scharton, knowing that all there could be in it for him if he lost was a little publicity, took the case. His, Joseph McNally and Arthur McVey, all of the same office, have done what they could for Dakota Dan.

But any one knows, who has watched the progress of the case, that because of lack of money to get proper evidence to offset that presented so far, and to be presented later, by the Russell estate, if such evidence is obtainable, of course, that Dakota Dan is not having anything like an equal chance with those fighting him.

Scharton has been unable to attend the trial at the most crucial moments because he is obliged to earn a living attending to business for which he is paid. A few days ago Mr. McNaily was compelled to stop the case because he had no witnesses.

Davis's 50th Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Davis of Rockland celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary yesterday at their home in Rockland. They have lived in the same house throughout their married life. Both are seventy-six years of age. Mr. Davis is a native of Palmyra, Me., and his wife was Miss Rutha Studley of Rockland.

LADIES—What Do You Know About Feathers?

As Importers and Wholesalers of fine feathers, doing business in Boston for many years and with a trade that comes all over the Eastern and Western States, we feel that the Women of New England will place confidence in what we have to say regarding Ostrich Feathers—owing to the fact that the ostrich feather has been in style for years and always will be, and owing to the fact that it takes somewhat of an expert to tell the difference between the different grades and quality of ostrich feathers—owing to these facts we say, a great many unreliable people have gone into the feather business, relying upon the public's lack of knowledge regarding feathers—these people find it easy to deceive purchasers of feathers, and have done so to an alarming extent. They handle only domestic feathers from ostriches raised in California, where the birds can never be sufficiently acclimated to produce a feather that can compare with the imported feathers from the ostriches of South Africa, the only place in the world that can produce a perfect feather, because South Africa is the home of the ostrich. The finest birds in the world are raised there—always have been and always will be. We warn the Public against Domestic Feathers masquerading as Imported—Don't be deceived.

ABOUT OURSELVES

For many years we have handled only Imported feathers from the South African male bird. Nothing else has the quality, style, wear and satisfaction—nothing else lasts as long. It is the only feather that can be properly made and remade, dyed and redyed, curled and recurled indefinitely and hold its shape, lustre and style. We make and sell special selections for the best houses all over the country, numbering as our customers such houses as R. H. Macy Co., N. Y.; Bloomingdals Bros., N. Y.; Carson, Pieris Scott Co., Chicago; "The World," Chicago; Emporium Millinery, Chicago; Lloyd's Millinery Co., Chicago; Strouse, Frank Mercantile Co., St. Louis; Tredtke Bros., Toledo, Ohio; Siegal Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., and many other big houses. We also sell the big stores and Best Millinery Establishments in Boston and New England, who are our best references—We sell the individual at wholesale prices. We will send you at the same prices that we would charge your milliner or your retail department store. We make no distinction. All treated alike. It's our policy.

40 ARE POISONED BY EATING TURKEY

GLOUCESTER, Nov. 16.—Cold storage turkey sent here from Boston is believed to have been responsible for forty cases of poisoning among members of the First Baptist Church, following a church supper given by the ladies of the church. The pastor, the Reverend Benton J. Nelly, who was the most seriously ill, is expected to be out today. An investigation is being conducted by members of the church to definitely fix the blame.

PLAN NEW SITE FOR STATUE OF LINCOLN

There is talk of shifting Lincoln's monument from Park square about a block downstreet to the triangle formed by the new streets laid out on the site of the old Boston & Providence Railroad station.

The present location of the statue and railed mountings is so close to the head of Eliot street and makes such a sharp turn there where traffic is heavy, that the suggestion as to a change of site was prompted.

It is contended by street experts and by owners and dealers in automobiles that danger would be greatly reduced if Park square were to be made entirely open at the turn near Eliot street. The new triangle formed by the junction of Providence street, St. James street and the Arlington street extension is looked upon as a most desirable place for the bronze likeness of the Civil War President.

The agitation about the moving of the statue directs attention to the work on the extension of Arlington street, which is almost finished. Pedestrians have been able for days to walk through from Boylston street to Columbus avenue. It changes the topography of that entire section. It affords a panoramic glimpse of the Public Garden from the windows of the First Corps Cadets armory.

Three brick buildings, of the narrow, old-fashioned type, had to be removed on the South side of Arlington street, which is a case of punching a hole right through the busy down front on Boylston street and clear into the open expanse which for years had remained idle.

The "Blue Hog" Has Arrived Down in Peabody

◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ No, Boys, This is NOT the Name of a New Musical Comedy ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆ ◆◆◆

It's a "Pigs Is Pigs" Yarn That's Really True

They Are Gentle Little Things and Very Affectionate, Says Mr. Griffiths, Who, in a Manner of Speaking, Is a Sort of Luther Burbank Where Pigs Are Concerned.

It was enough to send anybody looking for the Blue Hogs of Essex County.

You'd have gone, your own self.

Yes to one, after you read what Griffith said about the new animal, you'd have struck out for Peabody humming:

O, you beautiful Hog
"You great big blue-ti-ful hog."

Because, look what had been written by the press agent of the new Blue Hog:

"The facial expression and general mien and bearing of the animals even at full maturity is sprightly and vivacious and prepossessing, in contrast to the dull, heavy, lumpy appearance and general repulsiveness of adults of the older breeds.

"The animals are quiet and gentle, bordering in certain cases on a display of affection for the keepers."

To specify exactly wherein the Blue Hog is "different"

Its color is blue.

It is more "leggy" than the old breeds.

Its litters run so large that some of the little piggies have to be boarded out with foster-mothers.

It is blocky built, with heavier hams and quarters.

All of which led to a Sunday AMERICAN investigation of the Blue Hog—a rich bluish grey in color—and the inch-thick discovery of a wealthy young Southerner, who has added to his wealth by going into the wholesale pig business in New England, and who wonders when in time sits the Young Man of these parts that makes him overlook so many Opportunities.

A Harvard Grad.

George C. Griffith is willing to talk about his Blue Hogs, but he is quite as willing to discuss the lack of ambition in the Modern Young Man.

Griffith is a one-time Harvard student, graduate of the Boston University Law School, and member of the Suffolk County bar, with a regular office at No. 84 State street in Boston. He comes from West Virginia. He is about thirty-four years old. And he has the honor to stand before the stock raisers of this country today as the man who invented, discovered, or lutherburbanized the Blue Hog!

Harvard man, member of the Bar and all that, George C. Griffith is today the proud owner of 2,500 hogs, on a 265-acre farm situated one hour out, by trolley, from Scollay Square.

And he says himself that "if there is any young man in New England who can not make $10,000 a year, it is the fault of the young man!"

"I chose the pig business," young Mr Griffith says, "and I am just as much ashamed of it as a man ought to be who is doing something useful and honorable and who can look out of the window of his farm bungalow and see the dollars growing and fattening all round him

The Blue Hog's Fame.

"It never requires a force of from fifteen to twenty men to look after the business we have about as many horses, we maintain a engineering force of our own and I find the merchants of Salem, Peabody and Lynn have great and growing [illegible] whose combined population is [illegible] of 150,000—ready to take the live-stock we can deliver to them. What the business is worth it hardly lies in the power to say, for the thing grows and it's [illegible], but you can safely say that in my opinion any young man in New England can [illegible] a year every year if he has the pocket-book and the notions of pride and [illegible]

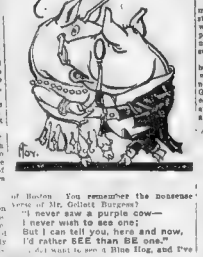
It was the Blue Hog yarn that I [illegible] as reporter for the Sunday AMERICAN, as the whisper of the farm of the New England Live Stock Company.

[illegible] out from Salem, on a [illegible] year period toward Lynn [illegible] [illegible] a Wild Western ranch [illegible]

And "so it" is the word for it.

If it were not for the big sign over entrance, one would see nothing [illegible] a farm. At first sight, one would suppose that here was all the [illegible] of Essex County and all the [illegible] dog from the original old farms of old New England.

A series of great knolls conceals the farm from view. A three-minute drive brings you to the buildings.



And you find there three or four big buildings devoted to the hogs, two bunkhouses for the men, a cook house, with a French chef presiding at the range—his name is Francois and he tells you proudly that he comes from Versailles—an office building, a storehouse, a private lake, a great stable, and on the brow of a little rolling hill, overlooking all the activity, the bungalow of Mr Griffith of West Virginia and the State street law office.

And let it known that there is "no mire."

The bungalow is not the kind you see pictured in "How to Build an Exquisite Country Home From $3,000 Up"

The Griffith bungalow cost probably less than three [illegible]

Griffith first saw the farm in the month of January in 1908. It's predecessor was raising cattle, sons Griffith decided on hogs. Which, naturally, brought up the question of the Blue Hog.

"I had always wanted to see a Blue Hog," Mr. Griffith said, "wherein, it is true, I differ, in part with a famous son of Boston. You remember the nonsense verse of Mr. Gellett Burgess?

"I never saw a purple cow—
I never wish to see one!
But I can tell you, here and now,
I'd rather SEE than BE one."

[illegible] you can see [illegible] Blue Hog, and I've [illegible] to date

Such Attractive Creatures

[illegible] of West Virginia, the col[illegible] every year in taking a fortune [illegible] and altogether in[illegible] hogs and prop[illegible] Hog Island [illegible] faith to see the "blue sea[illegible] hog business [illegible] the south [illegible] not yet the black, with white mark[illegible] Breskable.

"CHERRY VALLEY RAIDERS" TERRORIZE THOUSANDS IN BLUE HILL AVE. DISTRICT

An organized gang of young men and boys, known as the "Cherry Valley Raiders," has been terrorizing the Blue Hill avenue section of Roxbury for months.

These hoodlums have become so troublesome and defiant that many residents in the section are afraid to walk certain streets after dark. They say they make long detours to escape the corner rowdies. Merchants say they don't feel safe in their stores.

Scores of dwellers and many shopkeepers say they are afraid to make complaints through dread of being singled out as targets for gang vengeance. Policemen who have been too aggressive have been pelted.

Affairs have reached such a state that members of the Jewish population have decided to hold a meeting of protest the coming week, either at the Blue Hill Avenue Synagogue or at the Bandbox Club of the Young Men's Hebrew Association.

To Draft Resolutions.

They intend to draft resolutions asking Mayor Fitzgerald and Police Commissioner O'Meara to relieve conditions and to see that the neighborhood gets better police protection. Last night the plan was to invite Mayor Fitzgerald to attend the meeting.

Jewish people have been particularly harassed and mistreated, according to facts related to the Sunday AMERICAN.

Investigation by a reporter revealed an unusual state of affairs in the areas bounded by Blue Hill avenue, Quincy street, Columbia road and Grove Hall, and the storekeepers and residents on Warren street have been tormented also. Across the line in Dorchester is a gang known as the "Lastrat avenue savagery" equally obnoxious.

The remonstrants do not find fault so much with the police as they do with the size of the force assigned to that section which has had a mushroom growth of population in a very few years. Business men assert that a new police station or sub-station be located near Grove Hall.

That section of Roxbury and Dorchester between Warren street and Columbia road, with Blue Hill avenue as the centre is now by far the largest Jewish colony in Greater Boston. It is estimated by real estate men that there are between 12,000 and 20,000 of the faith congregated within a mile radius.

Captain Herbert W. Goodwin is in charge of that division. He said:

What Police Captain Says:

I am ready and willing to do anything in my power to rid my division of gang lawlessness. I have racked my brain for a solution of the situation. I have sent up special details and plain clothes men. But as soon as they see an officer they scatter only to collect a block away to indulge in some new prank.

But as soon as you take the extra men off they do it here and there.

The real trouble is we haven't got enough officers for the district. It is [illegible] in our present force. Outsiders perhaps don't realize that we have a territory [illegible] thickly [illegible] section in Blue Hill avenue [illegible]

[illegible] requires as many officers as [illegible] North End does, but few know [illegible] more officers to [illegible]

My present force of [illegible] men is inadequate.

If I had any more men I [illegible] have accommodations for them in the station. What is needed is a new police division to be located near Grove Hall or near Franklin Park. It is sorely needed. I realize that and have realized it for a long time.

The pranks of the "Raiders" range all the way from sidewalk pranks and petty thefts to assaults, breaking and entering, crap shooting, the raising of streets during business hours and the interruption of motion picture shows.

Cries of fire a few weeks ago in one of the motion picture houses on Blue Hill avenue, near Grove Hall, followed by the smashing of electric bulbs and the plunging of the auditorium into darkness resulted in a stampede.

So much worse has this become that the management had to send for a doctor. The disturbance had been carefully engineered, the climax appears to have been reached last Sunday evening when Nathaniel and Louis Nadleman, brothers, who live at No. 187 Quincy street, were beaten by a crowd of twenty or thirty youths in the presence of scores of passersby on Blue Hill avenue, near the Shawmut Theatre.

Nathaniel's Story.

Let Nathaniel Nadleman tell his own story:

I am a law student and never look for trouble. My brother Louis is studying civil engineering. We both spend all day at our lessons and in the evening decided to go to the Shawmut Theatre for a little recreation. We got our tickets early and started to take a short walk until it was time for the performance to begin.

On a corner were a number of the Cherry Valley gang. One put out his foot and tripped up my brother. Then the same fellow wanted to know what he meant by stumbling over him. The next minute they were all on Louis. Realizing the odds and the mistake of that crowd I saw we couldn't do anything, but I went to my brother's aid. I couldn't stand by and see him killed.

Then I got set terribly and nobody gave a hand. I was kicked unconscious and carried to a drug store. All the time there was no officer.

REDUCTION SALE

BEGINS TOMORROW, DOORS OPEN AT 8.30 A. M.

Every Dollar's Worth of Merchandise High Grade Only and Absolutely the Season's Newest

A condition which has resulted from long continued, business-retarding warm weather on the one hand, and heavy purchases of fine apparel on the other, demands that merchandise in every section of the store be

Immediately Sacrificed

In order to reduce stocks to a minimum.

The Story: On September 11th last this store opened with moderate stocks—every dollar's worth of which was brand new and of a higher grade throughout than was ever attempted in the history of the old store. Absolutely the best apparel for Women, Misses, Girls, Boys and Infants that could be procured from the world's best markets was provided. Seasonable weather, the one remaining requisite to success. This, like other great stores, expected a tremendous Fall business—The score of Butler's buyers bought heavily. Great cases of the finest merchandise arrived daily. Seasonable weather was expected from day to day, but failed to materialize, and as a consequence the goods failed to move as anticipated. The necessary sacrifice begins tomorrow.

We Prove to You This Week That Certain Types of American-Made Gloves Are Better Than French, German or Italian Gloves

(Europe, of course, has no rival in light weight kid gloves, and even for our Cape and Mocha gloves we have to import most of the skins. But here in Johnstown, Gloversville, N. Y., we beat the world in the making of Cape and Mocha gloves within the price reach of the great majority.)

The Greatest Sale of Them All!

A Special Sale of 300 Beautiful Dresses.

$15.00 to $30.00 Afternoon and Evening Dresses at $9.85

Paris Fashions at $9.85—Think of It!

They are the work of one of the cleverest designers and makers in New York city—who goes abroad twice a year, keeping in constant touch with every fashion change.

Our only reason for getting these 300 Dresses was simply on account of the manufacturer planning too liberally, compelling him to lower stocks at once at a tremendous price sacrifice

We Have Never Offered Better Values And Don't Expect to Again This Season.

$9.85 $9.85 $9.85 $9.85 $9.85 $9.85

The Materials Are of the finest silk messalines, changeable taffetas, satins, colienne, velvets chiffons, corduroys and serges—all daintily and most effectively trimmed, in a manner that no dressmaker, however expert, would undertake for three times the actual cost of the dresses, regardless of the material. We cannot give sufficient space to describe each model, but advise your early selection Monday, as there are in many cases only two or three alike. On Sale 2nd Floor at 8:30 A. M.

ARE YOU MAKING YOUR DECISION? The critical moment in a young man's life comes when he decides on his trade or business. That moment may settle the success or failure of his whole life. The U. S. Navy will help you decide on a successful career. It offers over 50 different trades and kinds of work besides seamanship. If you have your trade, you probably can use it in the Navy and enter at higher pay. If you learn a trade, the Navy will help you select one and teach you. You can have four years to make up your mind on your life work—four pleasant years in which you'll be seeing the world, meeting fine fellows and making and saving money. If you are between 17 and 25, call at Navy Recruiting Station, 140 Tremont st., Boston, Mass., and find out about pay, hours, promotion, trades, training, etc., and whether you are suited for the Navy. Or send for a copy of the famous book "The Making of a Man O'Warsman," which tells in simple language and interesting pictures every detail of daily life in the Navy. Free. Read it and show it to your parents. You won't forget to send, if you'll send today. Address BUREAU OF NAVIGATION, Box 10, Navy Dept., Washington, D. C.

Sale of Used Pianos

Sale of used Upright Pianos "for beginners." If you are considering the purchase of a piano for your child to start taking lessons, and do not wish to purchase a new piano, we have inaugurated a sale of used pianos for beginners at very low prices. These pianos are all uprights, in good condition, taken in exchange for Kranich & Bach and Autopianos. We will exchange these pianos within five years and allow full amount paid towards the purchase of any new piano in stock.

Huntington	$135	Kranich & Bach	$1[illegible]

Vose & Sons, Chickering, Henry F. Miller $25. Other makes of square pianos from $10 to $50.

Autopiano

Mary Young Praises the Autopiano

MARY YOUNG

Chas. S. Norris, 181 Tremont st., Boston.

Gentlemen—I love my Autopiano. I wish that all my friends could have one. After a thorough investigation of the different Player Pianos I decided on an Autopiano for my home, on account of its exquisitely beautiful tone and its wonderful expression. Sincerely, Mary Young, Castle Sq. Theatre.

MARY YOUNG, CELEBRATED ACTRESS, [illegible] HER AUTOPIANO.

A great many people have in their home what is practically a "dead piano." No one knows how to play it—son and daughter who used to play and entertain the family have married and the piano is now merely an expensive ornament. Now is the time to get an Autopiano—put in the music roll, start it—That's all you have to do.

Will play for you (without any knowledge of music or playing on your part) the world's greatest music, new and old. All opera and popular music prepared for the Autopiano as soon as published.

WE WILL TAKE YOUR PIANO IN EXCHANGE AND ALLOW YOU FULL VALUE

Chas. S. Norris Co.

Gentlemen: Please mail me today full information and particulars about your piano exchange plan and send me free illustrated Book about Autopianos. Also tell me about the American Plan to secure any make piano on credit.

BULL AND BEAR FACTORS BEING SO EVENLY DIVIDED MAKE MARKET TWO-SIDED

STATE STREET, Nov. 16.—During the past week we have had what is known on the street as a trader's market, that is, prices are up one day and down the next. The market is very sensitive and moves either way on the receipt of any news, up if it's good news and down if it's unfavorable, notwithstanding the strong fundamental condition of the market. Traders, as a rule, are inclined to be bearish, and on Friday the bear side was slightly helped by the issuing of a "warning" by Boston's well known stock market prophet.

The bear element have many important factors, political, foreign, monetary and industrial, arrayed on their side and, likewise, the bulls have many important ones in their favor, thus preventing the market from having any decided trend, but making it two-sided. It is very probable that the market will continue in this condition for some little time, or until some important factor on either side should change and thus cause a decided movement in its newly pointed direction.

AN EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS.

As all indications lately pointed to the probability of the assembling of an extraordinary session of Congress in the Spring to act on the question of tariff revision, it was no surprise when the official announcement was made that Congress would assemble, and it is better for business to know the worst as soon as possible than to be held in suspense indefinitely. Scarcely anybody believes that there will be a very radical change in the tariff, or that tariff tinkering will cause any such depression as occurred after the last Democratic tariff bill was passed, but any substantial change in the tariff means a change in the basis of doing a considerable amount of the business of this country.

Of course our enormous crops and unprecedented prosperity at the present time would act as a sort of a bumper, and the effect of tariff revision should be considerably minimized, but it would at least cause a temporary unsettlement of business and thereby stock prices.

Money Market Tight.

Foreign and domestic monetary conditions are not as good as people on the constructive side of the market would like to see. Recent New York bank statements have shown that a considerable amount of our business is being done on borrowed capital, as the loans of the New York city banks greatly exceeded the deposits. This is a condition that invariably precedes liquidation.

Germany is in the same condition, which is one reason that that country has remained so quiet during the Balkan trouble. If Germany was to make any extraordinary preparations for war, or in any way cause the feeling to exist that a general European conflict was probable, it would mean a tremendous calling of loans and thereby check the wonderful industrial growth and prosperity now prevalent in that country. During the past week the Banks of Germany, Bengal and Austro-Hungary have increased their minimum rate of discount. The present rate of 6 per cent. of the Bank of Germany is the highest level attained since March 7, 1908. Even the Moroccan crisis of last year, when the Berlin market was strained by the precipitate withdrawal of French funds, did not lift the rate above 5 per cent. At the latest reports from the seat of war have been more reassuring, foreign rates are liable to ease off slightly although rates are apt to remain firm until after the end of the year's disbursements.

Copper Metal Situation.

Although the demand for copper, the metal, has fallen off appreciably during the past few weeks, large producers have held firmly to their asking price of 17⅝ cents for electrolytic. The Balkan trouble caused foreign buying to become practically nil, while domestic consumers have been buying from hand to mouth. The larger producing interests seem to feel convinced that the foreign stock of the metal is extremely small and that European consumers will be forced to replenish their stocks very shortly.

Hardly had the lull in foreign hostilities been announced before inquiries had been received regarding the purchase of several million pounds by German consumers alone. Domestic users have been able to fill their immediate wants from small dealers, as low as 17½ cents a pound, but the latter will be practically eliminated as factors when the European buying movement commences, particularly as they cannot deliver the huge tonnages desired.

One very prominent copper authority says that he believes the metal will be selling nearer 19 cents than 18 cents a pound before the first of the new month. All in all, the strong copper metal market seems to be the brightest spot on the financial horizon. For although our crops were enormous, they have been considerably discounted notwithstanding the greatly improved railway earnings, the long-awaited report of the Board of Arbitration —which has the demands of the railroad engineers under consideration—and the Supreme Court decisions retard any large upward movement in the rails.

Important Decisions Expected.

The railroad engineers' board of arbitration held its final meeting Saturday, and its decision will undoubtedly be announced shortly. The announcement made by the Supreme Court that it would adjourn from November 18 to December 2 makes it appear likely that a verdict in at least one of the cases considered important by Wall Street interests will be handed down tomorrow. Until these verdicts are rendered the market will very probably mark time.

Isle Royale Developments.

Isle Royale is driving two more crosscuts from No. 2 shaft to the Portage Lake lode recently opened, which showed sixteen feet of fine copper ground next to the footwall. The opening of the Portage Lake lode on Isle Royale is a matter of extreme importance, as it is indicative of the adding of an immense tonnage of ore to the Isle Royale Company's reserves, which can be easily minable.

Panama Canal Rates.

Toll on vessels through the Panama canal of $1.20 per net ton furnished no surprise in shipping or railroad circles. It had been expected the rate would be approximately $1.25 a net ton, as the canal act provides that "when based upon net registered tonnage for ships of commerce, tolls shall not exceed $1.25 per net registered ton, nor be less, other than for vessels of the United States and its citizens, than estimated proportionate cost of actual maintenance and operation of the canal," etc.

Though the proclamation does not say so, vessels engaged in coastwise trade are exempt, for the act says: "No tolls shall be levied upon vessels engaged in coastwise trade of the United States." Coastwise trade is still, as before passage of the canal act, reserved exclusively to vessels of American registry, built in the United States. Act provides for admission under certain conditions of foreign-built vessels to American registry, but only for employment in foreign trade. Neither these nor American-built vessels actually engaged in foreign trade are exempt from tolls, though question has arisen whether the clause, "No tolls shall be levied upon vessels engaged in coastwise trade of the United States," operates to exempt only vessels engaged exclusively in coastwise carrying both coastwise and foreign freight on same voyage. The proclamation does not indicate whether the government will allow any vessels exemption on any part of their cargo, but it directs the Secretary of the Treasury to frame further regulations for administration of canal affairs.

Bethlehem Steel.

From sources usually well informed regarding affairs of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation the information is received that when the directors meet in January or February to consider the question of dividends they will, if present tentative plans are carried out, order a disbursement at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum on the preferred. There is a possibility that a 5 per cent. annual rate will be ordered, but it is said that the directors will not even consider making a disbursement at a 7 per cent. annual rate.

Disbursements at a 4 per cent. or 5 per cent. rate is additional evidence of the conservatism of the management. In 1910 Bethlehem Steel earned $17.92 per share of preferred, in 1911 $18.20, and earnings available for dividends have shown a further increase this year. Plants are operating at near maximum capacity and the outlook for business is considered exceptionally good.

Express Stocks Decline.

The slow and steady crumbling in the prices of the leading express company stocks is one of the dismal features of the stock market. Hardly a day passes that new low records for the year are not made. The liquidation is in small lots and so is all the more significant in that it indicates that the realization that the future of the express companies has been radically unsettled is spreading.

At present, Adams and American Express are selling at the lowest prices since the 1907 panic; Wells-Fargo is lower than at any time since 1898, and the "weak sister," United States, is at the lowest level since 1901. Not one of the "big four" has been able to resist the selling pressure despite the varied controls. The United States and Wells-Fargo are both Harriman properties, the American, Vanderbilt and the Adams is of course Morgan.

Compared with the high points of their careers made for the most part in recent years: viz.: by American in 1909, Wells Fargo in 1910, Adams in 1907, and United States in 1903, declines have been severely drastic. It was less than three years ago that Wells-Fargo, just before the famous 300 per cent. melon, sold up to $670, while today it is down to $116¾. Adams Express is off 165¼ points, American has dropped $138 and United States has melted away 90 points under the vicissitudes of poor management and suspended dividends.

These wholesale declines have put the express stocks on an income basis which is beginning to discount present and future adversity. American Express, paying 12 per cent., sells to yield 6.5 per cent., Adams paying 12 per cent., 7.2 per cent., and Wells-Fargo, paying 10 per cent., nets 8.5 per cent. These yields have been large enough for some time to point the "handwriting on the wall."

The causes for the breaks in the express company stocks are the proposed reduction in rates averaging 25 per cent., the inauguration of the parcels post the first of the year and the persistent decline in profits. For the recent fiscal year Adams' surplus after dividends was more than halved, American's cut in thirds and United States showed a deficit. Wells-Fargo had to do over $7,300,000 more business to earn about the same money. Under these conditions the stocks have inevitably dropped away.

Southern Pacific Suit.

Suit has been started in the Supreme Court of the United States against Southern Pacific Railroad Company, for title to $500,000,000 oil lands in Southern California.

The brief charges the road attempted to control the mineral development of California through a dummy corporation.

BOSTON STOPS RAID IN WALL STREET

Bears Hammer Prices, but State Street Covers First With Order for 10,000 Steel.

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Traders attempted to break stocks today because of the announcement of an extra session of Congress. They were permitted to sell the market down more than a point and had things going at a lively pace, when suddenly they discovered that the big banking interests were taking their stocks. Boston began to cover first, sending an order for 10,000 shares of Steel, to be "reported quick." The last half-hour saw a vigorous advance that left the list from one to two points from the low price. Steel, Reading, Union Pacific and Cotton Oil were features of the advance.

Contrary to general expectations the banks made an excellent statement, showing an increase of the surplus reserves. The net shortage of railroad cars showed a small increase.

On Monday decisions are expected from the Supreme Court in the Minnesota rate cases, the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific merger and the anthracite cases. The commission may also render a finding on the question of advancing the wages of the locomotive firemen.

Brokers' Views

F. L. Milliken & Co.—Cautiousness characterizes the security markets, a condition easy of explanation with the present outlook. The big interests are generally credited with still holding stocks and supporting the market.

Prices show no definite tendency. Stock seems to be offered on any advance and yet not so continuous as to force any severe break. A see-saw market results.

The election has passed and it was hoped that [illegible]. The iron and steel industry which is [illegible] indicative of general trade is operating practically to capacity. Railroad earnings throughout the whole country with the exception of the Southwest show tremendous gains in both total revenues and net earnings. The way would seem to be open for a substantial upward movement in the stock market.

Hayden, Stone & Co.—Summing the situation up we should say that the factors on either side were so evenly balanced as to make it likely that for the near future, this will be reflected in a two-sided market. If any of the important factors on either side should change, it would upset the balance and probably lead to quite a decided movement in either direction. We are rather inclined to think that some liquidation is not at all unlikely and that it is a time to make commitments with a good deal of care, but we do not for a minute suppose that we are approaching anything resembling a panic, but on the contrary we expect before many months to resume the [illegible] position to which we are naturally entitled and on which all large fortunes are built by the positive and constructive side.

[illegible] & [illegible].—The European situation seems to be [illegible] and the undertone of the market [illegible] commensurate strength, yet we feel that the [illegible] of money for the moment prohibits much [illegible] advance. There should be a good trading market, however, and purchases on weak [illegible] of the copper stocks, ought to be [illegible], for with the prospect of dividend increases many of these stocks are likely to work considerably higher.

J. M. Taylor & Co.—We believe that at the moment a cautious attitude is advisable and we discountenance hasty commitments on either position. At the same time, with the outlook clearly for a preponderance of market-shaping factors of a constructive character, we think that purchases on recessions of the coppers, standard rails and [illegible], eschewing for the moment the tariff [illegible] moves.

Thompson, Towle & Co.—The price movement continues to be dominated by developments in the European diplomatic situation and the changing political aspect on this side. The market [illegible] and has been fluctuating within a wide range. The undertone has been good, however and there appears to be excellent buying on all recessions.

Our fundamental position certainly is exceptionally sound, money is fairly abundant considering the season of the year, and fears of a [illegible] stringency have practically vanished. The [illegible] we believe, [illegible] for a very material [illegible] judicious purchases of investment issues [illegible] be made at or around the current level of quotations.

[illegible] & Co.—If an amicable agreement between foreign powers is reached in the near future and the Italian disturbance is peacefully settled, which seems more probable at the moment than at any time since the opening of hostilities, the situation in this country will be relieved of one of the two major retarding influences which now overshadow financial circles.

There will then be left as practically the sole deterrent fear, and in the hands of speculators, the uncertainty attaching to the tariff revision program of the Democrats. Opinions as to the probability of a special session of Congress are many and varied, although it is generally felt that the pressure which will be brought to bear by Democratic interests in favor of an extra session will be widespread and insistent. The possibility of these efforts bearing fruit and the progress which could be made with the tariff revision at a short session are entirely problematical. There are those who believe that fully a year will elapse before the Democratic machine can be organized and new tariff legislation turned out. To those fully conversant with the routine of legislative routine a year seems a most conservative estimate for the adjustment and application of an entirely new system of tariff schedules, always one of the knottiest of legislative problems.

Charles A. Day & Co.—Tariff reduction will become an important factor soon after the inauguration of the new administration, but this will not disturb business to the extent predicted, because the present administration has been committed to tariff reduction and because the Democratic party is unlikely to take any drastic action along this line. Reasonable reduction of rates will not create any uneasiness among business interests or in the stock market.

Present indications are that the country will experience a year of marked prosperity in 1913 and the prosperity is likely to continue [illegible] as a reaction from the prolonged period of [illegible] has been recently ended.

R. C. Pratt & Co.—Not since a year ago has there been such a good trading market as now. Swings are wide and easy to catch. There has been good trading and quick profits on both sides of the market since election. This is likely to continue for some weeks, unless the market makers see their way clear to advancing prices immediately under the leadership of the rails and coppers. We are inclined to believe that indications point towards an immediate rise in the copper shares.

This is not a time to neglect commitments after making them. The market should be watched more closely than for some time, as changes come frequently and more rapidly than they used to. That is one of the features which makes it a good trading market. There is no lack of action. Each day presents opportunities for buying or selling.

There is no use in denying that there will unquestionably be an extra session of Congress called in the Spring to revise the tariff downward. But the stock market will go on just the same. To the trader who gets into the market right, this means an unusual opportunity for building up a tremendous profit. Nothing like it has been presented for twenty years.

GRAND TRUNK AND MORSE.

An interesting contribution to the current discussion relative to the affairs of the Grand Trunk comes to light today in a report that Charles W. Morse, who is now in London, has gone there to interest capital in a plan to start a steamship line between New York and San Francisco through the Panama Canal, a plan which he had been considering with the Grand Trunk officials up to the time when the curtailment of their New England operations was announced.

The story goes that Mr. Morse had been negotiating for several months for the development of New England terminals in connection with a coastwise steamship line which was to be financed by the Grand Trunk. Options had been obtained on a number of steamships which were to be turned over to the Grand Trunk, but when this stage had been reached the suspension order was issued, together with the announcement regarding the negotiations for a traffic agreement between the Grand Trunk and the New Haven, and Mr. Morse quickly turned to London for support of his project.

Cables received yesterday say that Mr. Morse is receiving considerable encouragement, but his negotiations are in the most tentative form. Mr. Morse went to London, it is said, because of opposition to this plan by American banking interests allied with the trans-continental railroads.

Extent of Copper Sales.

Purchases of copper during the week have run between 10,000,000 and 15,000,000 pounds. This tonnage was all contracted for on a 17¾-cent basis and was chiefly for export account.

Following a fortnight's "nibbling" consumers actually started buying on Thursday and increased their commitments on Friday. It was the inevitable result of running plants from stocks in foreign warehouses that finally forced the European manufacturers to enter the American market.

Some November copper is yet to be purchased, but current demand has been mostly for December and January. Underestimating their year-end requirements at the time they were last in the market, domestic consumers have been picking up some of the cheap copper offered during the past month, but it was not sufficient in volume to meet full requirements.

CONTROL OF ST. PAUL PASSES TO ARMOUR

Western Interests Now Hold Majority of Stock and Can Control Road.

By BOERSIANER.

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—The control of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad has passed from the East to the West. J. Ogden Armour is now by far the largest stockholder, and other Western men have added heavily to their holdings in the last eighteen months. This is a return to original proprietorship. The St. Paul was conserved and built by what was known as the "Scotch syndicate of Milwaukee," a coterie consisting of the Mitchells, the Plankintons and of P. D. Armour, who at that time resided in Milwaukee.

BOERSIANER.

The mutilations of time and fortune made for a change in stockholdings from Milwaukee to New York, with the exception of the Armour stock, which remained in the family and which has been supplemented from time to time by the purchases of J. Ogden Armour, who always has regarded the certificates as his heirloom.

When, over a year ago, an Eastern interest started to liquidate his St. Paul shares—on the foreknowledge of a reduced dividend that comes from the confidence of the ability to reduce the rate—the Western interest bought. The buying began at 155 and was never daunted though the stock recorded a price a fraction under par. From under par these acquisitions were continued on the upward course, so that today the West, if it wishes, can command a majority of the shares by simply showing stockholders at large the amount of the capital stock tied in Chicago and Milwaukee against the now comparatively paltry holdings of New Yorkers. The shockingly unfavorable monthly reports that preceded the dividend reduction, the fact of the dividend reduction itself, the despairing statement of the future signed by the chairman of the board of directors, the confident predictions—or threats—from New York of a further dividend cut—these did not for a moment intimidate the Western interests.

The bad earnings were known to have been "corrected" in the East to conform with the exigencies of the market position of the Easterners.

This was confirmed much later by the company's yearly report which acknowledged operating charges of 75 per cent.—an appalling percentage. The dark proclamation of the chairman was not believed. The dividend reduction was recognized as unjustified. The threats of still another curtailment of the semi-yearly payments were seen to be a final stratagem to break the stock renewedly.

St. Paul shares were acquired from week to week. Other values were sold by Westerners in order to add to their St. Paul holdings. The sharp decline in National Biscuit stocks some time ago was due to liquidation by a prominent Chicagoan who put the proceeds in his favorite issue, St. Paul.

Moreover, to Western people is due the credit of interesting European investors in St. Paul. An emissary was sent to Europe to explain the situation to English, German, French and Belgic capitalists. The latest buying, which has forwarded the stock from under 110 to the present price—has been chiefly from [illegible]

And the West has been justified in its course. After all, their confidence and perspicacity were not extraordinary. St. Paul's record to the time of the Eastern coup had been brilliant. The preferred had paid 7 per cent. uninterruptedly. The common had disbursed the same amount for a decade. It had—and has—a startlingly huge surplus. For those, therefore, who had been close to the property for a generation it was not difficult to stand fast. One may easily understand why a large block of Biscuit stocks should have been relinquished for the benefit of St. Paul.

The predominance of the West in proprietorship means that the property will not be subjected to the gross manipulation of 1911. The trick of tampering with dividends to facilitate stock jobbing operations cannot be repeated. If it is attempted the West has the power to eliminate the East from every position in the company—executive and otherwise.

The increase of some $3,000,000 in net earnings in the first three months of the fiscal year at once demonstrates the earning capacity of the system and veracious bookkeeping.

The St. Paul has ceased to be a William Rockefeller road—it is an Armour road.

COTTON MARKET SHOWS DECLINE

Good Weather and Heavy Receipts Help Shape Price Sentiment.

By EDWARD LOW RANLETT.

The cotton market displayed a declining tendency during the past week. In the contract division a mere speculative situation developed on Monday which found prices at the highest levels previously recorded for the crop being marketed—that is to say, since September 1. Speculation had run its course, and the spot markets, after having responded with a fair degree of strength, refused the advance and showed a halting tendency. This situation was taken advantage of by prominent operators working for a decline, with heavy selling operations which carried prices sharply up on that day and finally resulted in a break of nearly 60 points throughout the entire contract list.

Good weather and heavy receipts played a part in shaping sentiment. The Balkan war situation, which became more favorable at the week end, seemed only to influence foreign markets and continental selling, perhaps against previous accumulations of low-grade cotton from last year's crop. It was not, however, until late in the week that spot market prices reflected decided pressure, and on Friday contracts sold at their lowest prices for the week under review.

On that day the Government issued a report of supply and consumption of American cotton for the United States. This report showed that 511,000 bales had been actually consumed by American mills during the month of October. At this rate it would require over 6,000,000 bales of American cotton to satisfy the home spinners for a period of twelve months.

Europe continues to take cotton in nearly the same volume as last year, and for this reason ultimately higher prices might reasonably be expected, but the fact remains that actual cotton is now selling at over $10 a bale under the figures that were realized during the early days of November, 1911. This makes a difference, and it remains to be seen whether the spinners' requirements will enforce a more active demand for the actual staple and a corresponding recovery in futures.

In the cotton goods division of the dry goods trade there has been no recent change indicating a falling off in the demand. Goods for nearby delivery continues scarce and spinners are not willing to make future commitments except at full prices and based on quotations for raw material at that time.

Trade in Europe has been in some degree influenced by the Balkan war. This has, however, been limited to holding back shipments from Germany and England to that section, and the close of the week finds the war situation favorable to an early peace.

That the market has a declining tendency is admitted, but the next ginners' report possibly may suggest a decided falling off in the farm movement from Texas and no corresponding increase from the farms of Georgia and the Carolinas.

CHARLES C. DASEY NEW BOSTON CONSUL

Charles C Dasey of the firm of C. V Dasey & Son, No. 8 Broad street, has just received a commission from Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, appointing him Consul for the Netherlands in Boston.

Mr. Dasey is the young-at member of the consular corps in this city. Next to that of England and Germany, the consulate of Holland is the most important in Boston because of the existence of regular steamship services to this city from the Dutch flag.

Charles V Dasey, one of the best known of the older steamship men in Boston, represented Holland here for sixteen years. He resigned about a year and a half ago and Charles A Dasey was appointed acting consul. Mr Dasey's promotion to the consulate follows his activity in the relief work of several men charged with embezzlement by the Dutch government, who were found in Boston

Harvard Man with Brilliant Record Tells Some of His Dreams.

JOHN HORNICEK, one of the poorest men at Harvard, financially, says that, if he were to get the sixty-five million dollars which his classmate, Vincent Astor, inherited last week, he would use it to benefit the masses.

Hornicek also admits he would indulge in "some of the luxuries of the rich" "I should have an automobile and things like that," he says

JOHN HORNICEK, WHO WOULD AID POOR

Exploding his idea about benefiting the masses, Hornicek mentions such items as:

Providing places of amusement, especially for children.

Public lectures (not blue-stocking" ones, either).

Aid promising Harvard men.

Encourage student traveling.

Enable needy students to make trips home.

Advocate a Children's Bureau.

Promote international peace.

For himself—Manage his own property, study social ethics and economics, travel the country and the world.

For fun—Mountain tramping and camping.

Through lack of money Hornicek has been forced to work his way through Harvard. He is now in his senior year. He is one of the cleverest debaters and has succeeded in making one of the best academic records ever achieved by a man paying his own way so he went

Born in Bohemia, Hornicek went through the public school and came to America three years before he entered Harvard. He went to the Mount Herman preparatory school and came to college with a high average.

Hornicek was asked what he would do if he had all Vincent Astor's wealth. How the possibility of practically unlimited financial power struck him is shown in his thoughtful statement, as follows:

"If I were endowed with a fortune like that, my first thought would be to benefit the masses. I would endeavor to manage the property myself. I should study in preparation for social ethics and economics, so that I could keep in touch with the times. I should plan to find, either by myself or through some counsellors, where the need was greatest, and there endeavor to bring a portion of the enormous monetary power to bear.

One of the greatest needs, as I happen to know, is that of places of amusement, particularly for children. And side by side with libraries which should instruct and elevate the people, there should be innocent and healthful means for recreation. This is too often overlooked, and it is only lately that the real needs in this direction have become known. I would provide for lectures—not blue-stocking lectures but popular affairs along the line in which the people are most interested. Not as abstract as the lectures in the Boston Public Library, which, while uplifting, are nevertheless not vital to most of the people, but lectures, the primary object of which would be to interest and so entertain as well as to instruct.

I should endeavor to encourage travelling. The time has come when travel is a necessity to eliminate the prejudices of many American students. That travel might be here or abroad. A liberal education may be acquired by travelling in America as easily as by travelling abroad. At present, travelling is a luxury of the rich. It should be opened to all. Students especially need to travel. Both by reform of a transportation system, which is vicious, and by judicious scholarships and travelling fellowships, I should undertake to encourage this sort of education.

Travel abroad is desirable should have the students who travel write for a prize for the best appreciation of what they saw—this not compulsory, you understand, but so arranged as to bring out the opinions of the largest number of men. This would bring Europe closer to America, would instil some of our practicality into Europe, and some of their ideals into us.

Would Encourage Arts.

Rather as a secondary matter, I should undertake to encourage, as far as possible, the fine arts and sciences. I say secondary, because it has been pretty well established that there is only a comparatively small proportion of the people who appreciate and enjoy the fine art of our museums and the like.

One of the most important things I should do would be to educate needy students to go home once in a while—those who came from far away. Take the case of many of my friends. Some of us have not been home for four years. We cannot afford it. We must pay our bills and we must earn extra money if we are to go. There is a man who lives in California who was once in Harvard. His parents have not seen him in four years. He cannot pay the fare out and back. There ought to be a fund for that purpose, and you may be sure I should establish one if I were a plutocrat for a while.

Another proposition which appeals to me is that of the children's bureau. It is time that we took as much interest in children as we now take in hogs or cattle. International peace, the dream of many men, would be a part of my program.

I should plan to follow the Nobel idea, of prizes for the best piece of literature advancing the cause of peace, but I should include the provision that these should be translated into as many languages as possible.

For my amusement, I should travel a great deal. In traveling I should see as much as possible keep in touch with the people of the country wherever I was, as a means of broadening my point of view. I think it is safe to say I should indulge in some of the luxuries of the rich—I should have an automobile, and things like that. But they would be minor matters. Much more fun would be to tramp through the mountains, pitching camp where the night overtook me. It is an inspiring life, that open-air existence.

That is a summary of what I can think of in a few moments. It is fearful, I know, and it is much more easy to say than to do things. While I can lay down a blameless existence which ought to be followed, it would probably be much more difficult to do in practice. I should never draw away from the masses, I think.

Ziegler May Go Around World in Boston Yacht

"Thirty Million Dollar Boy" Getting the Very Latest Built Here.

William Ziegler, Jr, the "thirty million dollar boy," who recently attained his majority and came into the net income of the immense fortune left him by his father, the late baking powder magnate, is to have a Boston built steam yacht next season. During the past six and a half years, while at school, he has received from $150,000, or about $25,000 a year (of course he could not support a steam yacht on that. But now that he receives nearly a million a year things look different.

When he became of age one of his first acts was to consult a yacht designer and have plans made for a 600-ton steel steam yacht. It is to be the very latest, staunch and strong in build and graceful in design, swift in steaming and equipped with every luxury that money can buy. It will be 165 feet long and will burn oil, instead of coal, under her boilers. Her fuel tanks will be of sufficient capacity to give her a wide steaming radius, and she will be able to make a trip around the world if her young millionaire owner takes such a notion. In fact it has been whispered that he is thinking of doing just that, the benefit of his children as we now take in hogs or cattle. International peace, the dream of many men, would be a part of my program. I should plan to follow the Nobel idea, of prizes for the best piece of literature advancing the cause of peace, but I should include the provision that these should be translated into as many languages as possible.

For my amusement, I should travel a great deal. In traveling I should see as much as possible keep in touch with the people of the country wherever I was, as a means of broadening my point of view. I think it is safe to say I should indulge in some of the luxuries of the rich—I should have an automobile, and things like that. But they would be minor matters. Much more fun would be to tramp through the mountains, pitching camp where the night overtook me. It is an inspiring life, that open-air existence.

While I can lay down a blameless existence which ought to be followed, it would probably be much more difficult to do in practice. I should never draw away from the masses, I think.

RUSHING WORK UPON WINTER STREET TUBE

First Section of New Subway to Be Ready January 1, the Contractors Say.

Like thousands of shoppers who pass daily over the boarded surface of Winter street, undoubtedly wonder how and in what manner the tunnel from Park street to the Essex station will be finished and what is going on far beneath them as they hurry on their way.

The sight of laborers at work overalls reaching out of holes, and the scurrying of rumbling machines are constant reminders of the new subway now being built, although invisible from view.

But if the pedestrians could look through the boards they would be amazed at the blinding network of timber supports and steel girders all connected, from the track number 1 subway on Washington street, progressing to the Essex station at the corner of Essex and Washington streets, a distance of 1,200 feet, and then from Essex street to Andrew square, South Boston.

Five Contract Sections.

Five million dollars' worth of subway construction will be carried on by the contractors with regard to building operations in Winter street. It is to be a continuous repetition of the operations from Park street to Essex, and is described briefly as follows:

Section A, the first section, from Park street to Washington street, is practically completed, and the only work to be done is the finishing touches. It will be opened for electric cars very soon.

Section B, which is the contractors' share of Section A. This section runs from the Park street subway to Washington and Summer streets. It is 1,200 feet, of which two-thirds is finished, including 150 feet of the roof. The contract calls for the completion of Section A by January 1, and the contractors say it will be accomplished.

Section C, which are the contractors' share of Section A. This section runs from the Park street subway to Washington and Summer streets. It is 1,200 feet, of which two-thirds is finished, including 150 feet of the roof. The contract calls for the completion of Section A by January 1, and the contractors say it will be accomplished.

Section D, which are the contractors' share of Section A. This section runs from the Park street subway to Washington and Summer streets. It is 1,200 feet, of which two-thirds is finished, including 150 feet of the roof. The contract calls for the completion of Section A by January 1, and the contractors say it will be accomplished.

Section E, which are the contractors' share of Section A. This section runs from the Park street subway to Washington and Summer streets. It is 1,200 feet, of which two-thirds is finished, including 150 feet of the roof. The contract calls for the completion of Section A by January 1, and the contractors say it will be accomplished.

Working Night and Day.

They are working night and day with 150 men on days and 100 on the night shift. Instead of a single tunnel it is to have a dividing wall all the way, making a tube for each car.

The depth ranges from forty to forty-three feet. The "open cut" method of excavation was used with buckets. There will be a total of 1,000 feet, between street surface and the subway roof, which will be two feet or more thick.

When finished the tube arches will be a twelve-foot lobby running the entire length as a passageway. Stairs will have a sustained height of 10 feet and the under flooring will be waterproof felt, thick with pitch.

The propping of the business buildings on the Winter street property, contrary to the plunking of the street surface, is that the storefronts might be kept open for traffic during the work. This was one of the hardest problems. Girders were placed at night to interfere as little as possible with the traffic.

Tedious Work.

All the building supports were satisfactorily constructed. Some idea may illustrate the tediousness and gravity of the work attention is called to the fact that the big office building on the south corner of Tremont and Winter streets had to be carefully propped up a month was required to secure each pier.

Work on Section A began Memorial Day. The fact that there was still one brave saloon station at a point just east of Washington street, under Tremont, will make that section a slow and important one.

MISS EATON TO WED.

Admiral's Daughter to Be Bride of Ralph P. Keyes.

The marriage of Miss June Louise Eaton, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs Joseph Oliver Eaton, U. S. N., to Ralph Proctor Keyes, is to take place at the Hotel Somerset, Tuesday evening, November 26. The ceremony will be followed by a reception at the Algonquin Club.

Close Isrigi Summer Home.

Mrs. Oscar Isaigi of Boston has closed her summer home at Sherbrooke and is spending a few days in New York. Her daughter, Miss Nora Isaigi, is the guest of Miss Crafts at Ridgefield, Ct.

FRAMINGHAM GAS CONSUMERS AROUSED

They See No Reason Why They Should Pay $1.65 When Boston Pays 80 Cents.

FRAMINGHAM Nov. 16.—Consumers who support the Framingham Gas Company have to pay a net rate of $1.65 per thousand cubic feet when small consumers in Natick, four miles away, get gas for $1.50 per thousand.

Already a petition has been filed with the State Gas and Electric Light Commission

Five special committees appointed to represent the Board of Trade and the town generally to urge the war on the company until a more satisfactory rate is fixed.

Within a month the Gas and Electric Light Commission set $1.80 as a fair price for Natick as a result of a petition filed by that town. The Framingham consumers are wondering why they should be compelled to pay more when the cost of distribution is far cheaper and when a much greater volume of gas is used in this town than in Natick.

The gas company's own tariff shows a different state of affairs. It shows that one of its competing coals fifteen cents more per thousand cubic feet than it does miles away. The town's experience may this is reliable enough. Furthermore, there was added expense of laying that special main all the way to Natick, they say.

Under a new schedule which went into effect October 1 the only reduction made was in the small consumers' rate, which was cut from $1.80 to $1.65 in Framingham. Prior to that a ten per cent. reduction was allowed for prompt payment, but that premium has been abolished, and in consequence prompt payers lose by the cut to $1.65.

The latest schedule fixes the net rate of $1.65 per cubic thousand on those who use less than 5,000 cubic feet per month a rate of $1.75 for those who use from 5,000 to 10,000 cubic feet monthly, and $1.45 for those who use more than 10,000 cubic feet.

Gas costs only 80 cents a thousand in Boston

Old Names in the List.

Some fan-ar names appear on the Globe announcement for the coming week. With Barney Furgeson, the little Irish comedian; Arthur Bixby, the minstrel; Zieka, the magician; Irene LaTour and her dog, Zaza; Gus Edwards' surprise, Sihhal and Greenleaf and the Three Brownies the announcement looks more like "Old Time" vaudeville than the popular priced brand. With all three and many others the Globe seems to be a gayish combination. The house is operated on a popular priced basis.

IT'S the greatest value offered by any distiller in America—rich, pure, delicious—guaranteed to please—or your money back.

80¢ FULL QUART

Insist On Bottled-in-Bond

WE know you will want some good, pure whiskey for Thanksgiving—for your own use and to set before your friends. Be particular in your selection—avoid blends and compounds—and remember there is only one way you can be SURE of getting absolutely pure, straight whiskey and that is to insist on BOTTLED-IN-BOND.

That's What We Offer You

Hayner fine, old Private Stock Bottled-in-Bond Whiskey—rich, pure and delightfully pleasing—delivered to any part of the city, in plain sealed package—and all it costs you is 80c for a full quart bottle.

There Is No Question About a Whiskey Like This

You KNOW it is good and pure—the U. S. Government's official Green Stamp over the cork is your protection and it tells you in plain words that this whiskey is Bottled-in-Bond, fully aged, full 100% proof and full measure—as pure and good as it is possible to produce.

Nowhere Else Can You Do So Well

Blends and compounds can be had anywhere and at any price—the papers are full of such offers—but when it comes to BOTTLED-IN-BOND—the kind with Uncle Sam behind it—Hayner Whiskey is positively unequaled anywhere at the price we name.

How Can We Afford To Name So Low a Price?

We are the largest distillers of pure, straight whiskey in America—and the only distillers who sell their entire product direct from Distiller to Consumer—thus saving you all the profits of the middleman and dealer.

Call At Our Store—

Get a quart bottle of this fine old Hayner Private Stock Bottled-in-Bond Whiskey—take it home—try it—and if you don't find it all we claim—the finest whiskey you ever tasted and the greatest value you ever saw—bring it back and we will return your money without a word.

You Take No Chances

Our guarantee is as fair and square as we know how to make it—it means what it says—we MUST make good, we must give you a quality that will strike you as rich, pure, delicious—right in every way—and we will do it.

BIG NEWS COMING IN $40,000 CONTEST

Complete Record of the Vote Standings to Be Published In Next Sunday's American.

By the CONTEST EDITOR.

Big news for candidates.

Next Sunday's AMERICAN will contain three big announcements of vital interest to every candidate in the AMERICAN'S $40,000 Contest.

First—A complete record of the vote standing of each contestant compiled from Saturday, November 16, at 10 P. M.

Second—The announcement of the 130 winners of the $1,545 EXTRA cash prizes.

Third—The Contest Editor will make a special announcement of the very greatest importance to every candidate.

So, my dear friends, that next Sunday will be a red letter day to you.

But while waiting for Sunday, remember that the days are slipping by and that each one of the next six days before these announcements should be made to produce its regular quota of subscriptions.

And when next Sunday's announcement is published you will need subscriptions—every one that you can possibly get in your possession.

One-third of the race is over for the $10,000 prize, for the five $1,000 prizes and for the 1,495 other big rewards.

It is now a matter of only eighty odd days before the final big awards will be distributed.

Just think of it, candidates—in eighty days you can earn $10,000 cash money.

Never again will such a chance, such a golden opportunity present itself to you.

Some one hundred candidates have already earned sums of money ranging from $500 cash, down to $250 cash, to $150 cash and ninety-seven other big cash prizes.

Just this same kind of effort will win the final prizes.

The first vote list next Sunday will tell the story and will show every candidate just where he or she is "at."

There is only one thing to remember this week, and that is not to let up for a second on your subscription-getting campaign. You are going to need all the subscription votes you can get when the important announcements mentioned in this story is made in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

More tomorrow.

CANTON GIRL'S DEBUT.

Miss Ellen Keller Will Play Violin at Scottish Concert.

Miss Ellen Keller of Canton, who has just returned from five years of study with Professor Willy Hess in Berlin, is to make her Boston debut as a violinist at the Scottish concert in Tremont Temple on Thursday evening, November 21.

Miss Keller is pretty and extremely talented. She had great success in Germany and a brilliant future is predicted for her in America. Her program on Thursday will be rather popular in character. She will play Svenn's Humoresque, Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," Van Goens Scherzo, Adagio from Bruch's Scottish fantasia, and Schubert's "Ave Maria."

Miss Evelyn Scotney of the Boston Opera and Mr. Howard White, tenor, will assist at this concert and will give a program of Scottish songs and operatic arias.

Wishes to tell you FREE

How She Stopped Her Husband's Drinking

By all Means Write to Her and Learn how She did it.

For over 20 years James Anderson of 831 Elm Ave., Hillburn, N. Y., was a very hard drinker. His case seemed a hopeless one, but 10 years ago his wife in their own little home, gave him a simple remedy which much to her delight stopped his drinking entirely.

To make sure that the remedy was responsible for this happy result she also tried it on her brother and several of her neighbors. It was successful in every case. None of them has touched a drop of intoxicating liquor since.

She now wishes everyone who has drunkenness in their house to try this simple remedy for she feels sure that it will do as much for others as it has for her. It can be given secretly if desired, and without cost she will gladly and willingly tell you what it is. All you have to do is write her a letter asking her how she cured her husband of drinking and she will reply by return mail in a sealed envelope. As she has nothing to sell do not send her money. Simply send a letter with all confidence to Mrs. Margaret Anderson at the address given above, taking care to write your name and full address plainly.

KEEPS YOU LOOKING YOUNG

P. H. MAGRANE, President — On "The Busiest Corner on Boston's Busiest Street." A New Name for an Old Store with a Good Name. — P. B. MAGRANE, Treasurer

James A. Houston Company

MAGRANE HOUSTON CO.

(EXTRACT FROM THE BOSTON SUNDAY GLOBE, NOV. 3, 1912:)

The word "service" has a unique meaning in the conduct of the Magrane Houston store. This idea is advanced to such a degree that customers are encouraged in making complaints in the slightest case of dissatisfaction; in fact greater attention has been given the matter of courteous treatment to the customer bringing back merchandise with a complaint than to the so-called art of salesmanship. The theory is that this principle is decidedly economical aside from the fact of "a satisfied customer," etc. It means that it is more important to satisfy the customer than to just sell merchandise. The story of this idea of service is clearly told in the short but sufficient words of the guarantee under which are sold Wonderwear Stockings, the registered name for hosiery made on the Magrane Houston Company's specifications. The guarantee says: "You will do us a favor by taking a new pair if these do not fully satisfy—your word is enough."

250 Women's and Misses' 25.00 Suits Reduced to..... $16.50

This announcement is not extraordinary because these suits are reduced before instead of after Thanksgiving (while that is important), nor because of the amount of the reduction itself (even though it is more than a third). But because of this store's reputation for the best $25.00 suits, in which it has fixed a new and higher standard every year—the standard by which $25.00 suits generally are judged.

No suits in this lot are special purchases or job lots, but our own regular $25.00 suits, many being this season's best selling numbers.

BEAUTIFUL DRESSY MODELS AND PLAIN TAILORED MODELS. Noticeable features are vestees and high satin lines, cutaway coats, straight coats, Robespierre collars, practical skirts, finest quality of linings. The majority of this lot are interlined for warmth. Materials: Two-toned diagonals, cheviots, whipcords, rough effects of all kinds and men's wear mixtures. 150 of these suits are navy blue, the rest are gray and brown. 73 Opera and Evening Coats and hardly any two alike. Nearly all are broadcloths in ten light and dark shades, including black. Satin and silk linings help to make these handsome garments desirable, as do also the trimmings of panne velvet and beautiful combinations. The models, for the most part, emanated from the famous style authors of the French capital. There are loose and close-fitting styles, bewitching broad collars, etc., etc.... 16.50

The 15.00 Lot

These are street Coats and represent a surplus lot from one of our favorite coat houses. The materials embrace novelty, imported woolens and chinchillas, the latter in blue and gray and the former in gray and brown mixtures—herringbone and mottled. A lot of chinchillas with velvet collars and cuffs bound on all edges with black braid will be among those you will have to come early for. All at..... 15.00

A Sale of Dresses

The Story

A stylish New York dressmaking house sold us, but a few weeks ago, several lots of new model dresses for fall and winter—and they were worth every cent we paid for them. They attracted no attention in our windows and have enjoyed a goodly demand. Last week the same maker offered limited quantities of the same dresses—same quality and making—to close at better than a third less than we paid. We could not allow any other store to get "our" dresses and sell them for less than our prices. So we took all there were and have jotted them in with what remain of our original purchases, pricing them all at

The Martyrdom of St. Denis, a Recent Painting, by the Great French [illegible]

How the Martyr Walked from Montmartre to St. Denis, Bearing His Severed Head in His Hands

Bones of the Martyred St. Denis

Paris, November 9.

LEGEND and romantic history cluster around the name of St. Denis as about that of no other saint. For over sixteen hundred years he has been revered by pious Frenchmen. He was the patron saint of old French royalty, and the tombs of kings, queens and princes erected during twelve centuries in the splendid abbey of St. Denis, in the suburbs of Paris, make it one of the most interesting places of worship in the world. In the Middle Ages the name of St. Denis formed the warcry of the French kings.

The most remarkable legend about St. Denis, as many people know, relates that after his martyrdom by beheading on Montmartre he walked a distance of three miles to the place now called St. Denis, holding his severed head in his hands. As he walked along in this manner, the ancient chronicler tells us, he surprised the peasants at their work and converted them by this proof of his miraculous powers

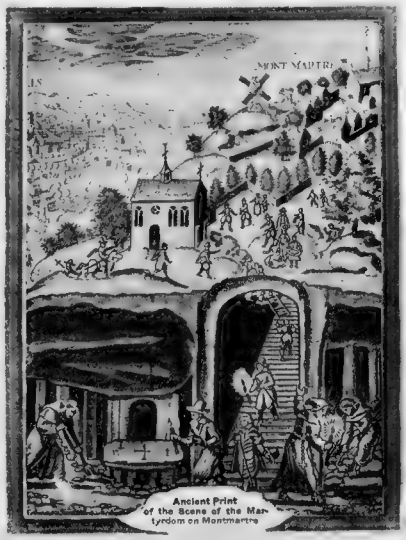
This legend has existed for about sixteen hundred years, and has always had more or less credence. In old days when the town of St. Denis was still separated from Paris by the [illegible] still walked about at night carrying his head in his hands. The [illegible] constantly referred to in French art and literature, and only recently the famous painter, Leon Bonnat has painted a magnificent picture representing St. Denis picking up his head after his execution.

How did this legend originate? Apparently it must have been based upon some extraordinary occurrence. Now work has begun which may throw light upon this mystery, and which in any case is causing the entire history of St. Denis to be discussed.

The French Government is carrying on researches in the Abbey of St. Denis to recover the many interesting relics believed to have been buried when the building was partly dismantled at the Revolution

The principal object of this search is to recover the coffin containing the supposed bones of St. Denis, which undoubtedly was at one time among the most precious possessions of the church.

St. Denis was an early Greek Christian, who in the year 240 was sent by Pope Fabian from Athens to Gaul with other missionary bishops. The Christians in Gaul had suffered terribly under the persecution of the Emperor Decius



Ancient Print of the Scene of the Martyrdom on Montmartre

After securing [illegible] pagan governor and tortured to amuse the worst element of the Parisian [illegible]

According to the legend preserved by early Christian writers he was exposed to the wild beasts, but instead of devouring him they only came and licked his feet. This miracle, far from converting the pagans, only exasperated them to redoubled fury, and they cast him into a fiery furnace, whence, however, he issued unharmed, like Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego.

The enraged heathens then crucified him, but he preached to them from the cross. He was taken down and led back to prison, along with his companions, Rusticus and Eleutherius, his deacon and sub-deacon.

The prisoners were finally executed by beheading on the hill, which has since been called Montmartre—the Martyr's Mount—and is to-day one of the most remarkable sites in Paris.

The ancient chronicler Hilduin then tells us that the body of St. Dionysius got up, took its head in its hands and, accompanied by a choir of angels singing "Alleluia," carried it to the pla[illegible] where now stands the Abbey of St. Denis.

Christianity finally prevailed in Gaul, and the burial place of St. Denis became a famous shrine. Then the Roman Empire fell and [illegible] overran Gaul once more When the French monarchy became Christian the kings made St. Denis their favorite church. About 626 King Dagobert built a new abbey and provided a new tomb for the bones of St. Denis In 886 the monks of St. Denis, owing to a war which raged, left their abbey and took refuge at Reims, carrying with them the bones of their saint

In 1132 the abbey was pulled down and the present splendid building erected. Of thirty-three French kings from the tenth century to the eighteenth, all but three were buried here. Their magnificent tombs occupy a large part of the church floor space.

POVERTY?— THE INTERESTING HOROSCOPE OF LITTLE BABY GERAGHTY —MILLIONS?

PROFESSOR LEO BERNART, the celebrated astrologer, presents on this page his interesting reading of the horoscope of the baby boy lately born to Mr. and Mrs. "Jack" Geraghty. What the stars ordain for the child of this union, so emphatically in conflict with the social code of the rich and powerful, is, of course, bound to be rather out of the ordinary.

The marriage of Miss Julia French, whose family is one of the wealthiest and most influential in the Newport cottage colony, to "Jack" Geraghty, son of a Newport hack-driver, and himself a chauffeur, brought about her complete estrangement from her own people. From a petted society girl and heiress she became a poor mechanic's wife, suddenly transplanted from a palace, where she was surrounded with every luxury, to a cottage where she had to do her own housework. In this cottage the baby was born. What will its future be? Professor Bernart gives the answer which the stars have told him.

"The stars say he will be rich in his own right—but through his own efforts."

The Humble Cotter in W[illegible] P[illegible] Ge[illegible]

"Will he be a poor workingman like his chauffeur father?"

By Prof. Leo Bernart, the Celebrated Astrologer

WILL the baby born of the union of Julia French, the wealthy Newport belle, and "Jack" Geraghty, the penniless chauffeur with whom she eloped about a year ago, be a millionaire or a pauper?

The stars will tell! They alone hold the secret of the life of the boy just ushered into the world. The science of astrology alone can foresee and foretell whether or not the baby who has just seen the light of day will be wealthy or a pauper; a blessing or a curse; whether or not he will be a "rich man's son," and, as such, recognized by Newport "society;" or whether he will remain poor and become a chauffeur or a cab driver—following the profession of his father and his paternal grandfather.

The circumstances surrounding the birth of this child have been dramatic in the extreme. His mother—a girl of eighteen—the daughter of wealthy parents, pampered and petted all her life, suddenly elopes with a penniless chauffeur, "Jack" Geraghty, and marries him before her family can intervene or object to the match. Geraghty's parents had always been poor but respectable residents of Newport—his father driving a cab, which rode, from time to time, the visitors to that famous summer resort. His mother, a typical hausfrau, attending to the daily duties—washing the clothes, scrubbing the floors, mending her husband's socks, and all the rest of it! How could young girl, accustomed as she was to everything which money could buy, expect to fit into these surroundings, and be happy as the wife of their son Jack?

Yet she seems to have done so remarkably well. She certainly showed great pluck and determination in her newly chosen course of life. And when her parents and all her relatives disowned her and left Newport, shutting up their houses in order that they might not see her face, she bravely set to work to make her husband happy and adjust herself to her new surroundings. And now she is a happy mother. For, on the night before Election Day Miss French—now Mrs. "Jack" Geraghty—bore a son, a bouncing boy.

I have worked long and carefully over the horoscope of the Geraghty baby, and I feel sure that what I have to say will prove correct in all its chief essentials.

Leo is the ruling planet under which this child is born; this indicates a strong, fresh, straightforward character, brave and true. Saturn also occupies a prominent place in his house of life—being in the mid-heavens. This is a striking, significant and unusual position, being in exactly the same place as it occupied in the case of Napoleon Bonaparte. His life, therefore, as indicated by this, should be most successful—unusually so. The queer planet Neptune, which also plays a large part in his life, determines friendships, and shows me that there will be many hard feelings aroused in certain quarters on account of havoc and he the cause of a great deal of unhappiness and some of the friendships he will form. Some of these will work misery to himself and to other members of his family. This relates particularly to men friends, because all the indications are that the friendsh ps of women will usually be fortunate.

The position of the planet Mars indicates that there will be a good deal of strife and conflict between the parents and grandparents of the child—not only about the baby, but also about property and other matters. Mars, being a war-like influence indicates this clearly. It might even a guify an ultimate separation of the parents.

The prominent and unusual position of Saturn indicates that this baby, if he grows to the estate of manhood, will be possessed of great ambition; he will crave power and will be determined to get it. He will certainly be successful in this, as all the signs point to the fact that, when he grows up, he will be rich in his own right—quite apart from any money which may be left to him or that may be coming to him from his mother.

Leo and the Sun are the ruling planets which will most dominate his life. These are particularly good. There will be several tragedies in his life, but none of these will be of so crushing a nature but that he can overcome them. They will not crush him. Pride is indicated; and, because of his great ambition, he must be careful that he does not meet his "Waterloo"—like Napoleon—whose signs his horoscope closely resembles in some respects.

I see much intrigue and many cunning plots surrounding his life in all directions. He will meet many strange friends, under a variety of strange and ever weird circumstances.

Two women will figure in his life markedly. They will both influence him, but it will vary in d fferent ways. One of these women will be dark—long black hair, dark eyes, dark skin, and a peculiar suppleness of body which appears almost reptilian. This woman will meet young Geraghty and will influence h m in a way which will be bad for himself and for others. The other woman who will influence him is much lighter—almost blond; blue-gray eyes, fair, slim, willowy and graceful. The forces of these two women will be brought to play upon him at about the same time—one will pull him in one direction, the other in the opposite direction. For a while he will be torn in twain, and will not know which way to turn. Finally, he will yield to the right, and will veer over to h's fairer companion, whose influence has always been good for him and his.

At the time of his marriage the world will be in a state of tumult and uproar. Revolution will be in the air. Injustice will have grown apace. The fair girl that I see written large across the face of the horoscope has great influence over the masses in the East Side. They love and trust her; she is one of them at heart and in sympathy — though it has been her fate to mix with the ultra-rich. Always she is performing some kindly action. It is upon one of these missionary trips that she encounters young Geraghty. Travelling alone one night — almost disguised, like Haroun Al Raschid of the "Arabian Nights"—he has been in the habit of visiting a certain house on the far outskirts of the city on a secret mission connected with the diplomatic arrangements involving two countries. These secret meetings are attended by great danger, and it will devolve upon young Geraghty on every occasion to carry home with him the papers of that secret meeting in his inner breast pocket. Right the blow falls, the terrible thing happens.

I see suspicion arising in the breasts of some of those who are opposed to the plot, which is being hatched. They attack him on his way home. Taken unawares, he is stunned and taken captive before he can realise what has happened. When he recovers consciousness he finds himself gagged and bound, lying in the corner of a dark room. His precious papers have gone!

By the faint glimmer of a candle in one corner of the room he sees the door open. A beautiful girl enters the room, holding her hand to her mouth as a token of silence. It is she! The instant h s eyes rest upon her he knows and realises that she is the girl in all the world for him. In her hand she bears a package—it contains the papers he has lost.

Yes, there in the dim twilight, they hold their whispered and tender conclave. They exchange glances, and, dim as the light is, they each realise that their souls have found and caressed one another; that love has triumphed! The intrigues of the dark woman have been thwarted; the vengeance of the band has been prevented, and the happiness of two has been secured.

They escape! Long is the search for them, but they are never found, till it is safe for them to return. No gorgeous wedding, attended by scores of smiling friends and relatives will be theirs. It will be in secret, almost in darkness, but their love shall form for them a bond more unbreakable than any outward pomp or ceremony could possibly bring to them.

After that I see young Geraghty and his bride sailing away for a time—they glide off, out of sight, as though they sailed away on a dainty aeroplane. A golden halo surrounds them; all has prospered. I see prosperity, and the thanks of governments bestowed upon him. By his own force of character he has risen to a place of power and fame!

Such are a few of the signs of the life of Baby Geraghty — as I read them in the stars. Many more things will happen, but I cannot recount them. What I see most plainly and strongly I have revealed.

Such will be the life of the infant if I read the stars aright.

Look Out for the Man of 40— He's the Only Perfect Lover

AT last the man who is past forty is getting justice at the hands of the opposite sex. Fair ones of various ages who have left him lying on the shelf for so long are taking him down, brushing him off, comparing him with exuberant, arrogant youth of his own sex and declaring him to be, after all, the only "perfect lover."

This belated discovery stands to the credit of Mrs. York Miller, a popular English novelist. She admits, however, that the truth might have been overlooked if the man of forty, or thereabouts, had not "found himself" by cheering up and airing his long-neglected powers of fascination.

"It doesn't matter," remarks Mrs. Miller, "if his hair is tinged with gray and his habits are fixed. He is still more charming than the youth of twenty or the self-satisfied man of thirty. He has few conceits, is very thoughtful and considerate, and, most important of all, knows his proper value in the world."

The chief advantages of the middle-aged man are catalogued by this writer as follows:

(1) He is invariably a good talker. He has usually had a varied experience of life, and he knows what to say and what will interest his companion.

(2) The young lover is usually wrapped up in himself. He gives a woman the impression that he is conferring a favor on her by his presence.

Not so the bachelor of forty. He has grown out of that. He always makes a woman feel that she is conferring a pleasure by seeing him at all.

(3) The lover of forty does all he can to please you. He never neglects any social politeness, as do many young men.

(4) Above all things, he is companionable. He is very seldom moody or low-spirited. Besides, being a lover, he is somebody upon whom a woman can depend.

The most significant advantage possessed by the lover of forty or over lies in the impossibility of "finding him out" after marriage, because he is so obviously himself during the period of courtship. When women marry young, inexperienced men, however, there is always the danger of their finding out afterward, when the sharp edge of love has worn off, that their husbands are not good companions and that they really have little in common.

In such cases the wife becomes a victim of the phenomena described by Karin Michaelis in her book of world-wide celebrity entitled, "The Dangerous Age." Reaching the age of forty, or thereabouts, herself, and suddenly realizing that she has missed in her life all that women hold most dear, she is liable to frantic moments of determination to grasp a few years of happiness at any cost.

But to whom does she turn for the companionship she craves? To another unformed youth of twenty-five? Never! When she holds out her hand in that "dangerous age" it is to the considerate, steadfast man of forty, even fifty.

As such a heroine of a tabloid emotional drama, recently produced at a New York theatre, with the significant title of, "Rainbow Bridges," she says to the man of forty-five in justification of herself and of every other woman in similar plight:

"Oh, you men! How can we expect you to conceive the grief, the terror with which we approach the confines of youth and beauty still unloved? Every wrinkle, every gray hair is another dagger planted in our hearts. Oh, the mounting terror with which we realize the waning of our powers to attract the love we have missed! A clammy hand, with colder, yet fiercer grip, seems to clutch our hearts as we count the years that remain. It is the grim Reaper pronouncing our sentence of doom a thousand times more cruel than death. Five years—four years—three years. The bell of our doom tolls ever louder, more relentlessly. Two years—one year! Then we are frantic, and we seek to cross to the shore of love by the rainbow bridges we have builded!"

All this trouble because she picked a thoughtless youth of twenty-five to marry, instead of the settled and considerate man of forty-five!

In her enthusiasm over her discovery of the valuable and long-neglected qualities of the middle-aged man, Mrs. Miller interviewed women of different ages on the subject, with these results:

"I do not say that the middle-aged man is the most successful lover. But, if women only realized it, they would often do well to accept him in preference to a younger man.

"I know several men on the shady side of thirty-five who are the most charming companions and friends. There is a gentle melancholy about the middle-aged lover that no woman can resist.

"A girl of twenty gave a novel opinion. 'I like middle-aged men because they make me feel I am somebody. They always say nice things. They notice how you are dressed, and compliment you. A young man has no eyes for ribbons or laces.

"'They have amusing views on things, and a soothing effect upon one. Sometimes they quote sweet little pieces of poetry and make you feel it is all about you.

"'Young men have no qualities like that. They seem to have very little in them. They do not always make you feel happy.'

"Probably much of the charm of a bachelor of forty depends upon his bringing up. If he has had a sister to look after him he is probably nice and likable.

"A good many young women nowadays prefer to talk to the middle-aged bachelor in preference to men of their own age. These things are to be noticed in society everywhere. The middle-aged, even the elderly, man is no longer on the shelf."

She Wins the Beauty Prize!

The Judges in the National Beauty Contest Award First Honors to Miss Laura Hill, a New Jersey Girl, and She Will Appear at New York's Winter Garden

THE great national beauty contest, in which thousands of photographs from all parts of the United States were submitted, is closed, and awards have been made to the fortunate winners

Probably never before have judges of beauty undertaken a more formidable task. Not only were there thousands of examples of youthful feminine loveliness to be analyzed and compared and admired through the medium of their photographs, but from among all these one had to be chosen which, better than any other would stand all the recognized tests of beauty

According to the terms of the contest five others had to be selected on their respective merits as the next most beautiful. This was accomplished by the process of the gradual elimination of candidates whose photographs, while indicating the possession of real beauty as nearly all did—were still lacking in some essential feature. In this way the opportunities of winning were reduced to one thousand.

The next step was to place these thousand photographs in the hands of a committee of portrait artists of recognized authority for the further elimination of those which presented essential disqualifications. This work was a task occupying several weeks, and during the closest analysis by admitted experts. The result was between one hundred and one hundred and fifty candidates still in the running

As the ultimate first prize winner was to win by her beauty an exceptional opportunity on the stage, it was proper at this point to hand the contestants over to a committee of recognized judges of stage beauty—that is, men whose professional experience has taught them what types of beauty best bear the ordeal of the footlights. Accordingly, the committee of final award was composed as follows

Ned Wayburn, stage director of the New York Winter Garden

J. C. Huffman, general stage director for Sam and Lee Shubert, Inc

William J. Wilson, general stage director for Shubert productions.

By these different and authoritative means the contest was finally decided. According to the terms of the contest, the winner of the first prize gets an engagement of at least four weeks at the New York Winter Garden at a salary of $250 per week, with all costumes provided. Five other contestants get each a gold medal valued at $100. The winners are

FIRST PRIZE.

Miss Laura Hill, Blairstown, N. J.

GOLD MEDAL WINNERS

Miss Maybelle Beringer, No. 3206 West Eighteenth street, Los Angeles, Cal

Miss Ethel Rehan, No. 566 Beach street, Revere, Mass

Miss Gertrude V. Kelley, P. O. Box 54, Savannah, Ga

Miss Dorothea Bell, No 3695 Mission street, San Francisco, Cal

The winner of the capital prize, Miss Laura Hill, on being notified of her good fortune, presented herself at the offices of Sam and Lee Shubert, Inc., proprietors of the New York Winter Garden, and proved to be even greater beauty than her photograph had promised for her. She is barely twenty-one years old, of the blonde type, and of a figure as symmetrical and graceful as her face is beautiful.

This beauty prize winner has a very modest and unaffected manner—at all the typical stage-struck kind. She has had no stage experience, never having appeared even in amateur theatricals

Here's the Original "Turkey Trot"

IN the discussion which arose throughout the country over the propriety of the fashionable Turkey Trot dance, very little light was shed on its origin

In some quarters it was assumed that it must have originated in "gay Paree," whence everything wicked is supposed to come. In others, the blame was placed on the Barbary Coast of San Francisco

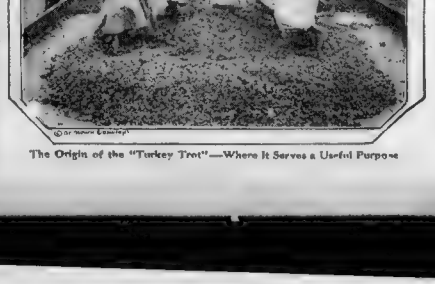
As a matter of fact, however, the much accused dance was born quite legitimately down in the little island of Trinidad, in the British West Indies, where for years it has served a very useful purpose.

Most of the cocoa which goes into our breakfast cups and confectionery is produced in Trinidad. It grows in a large pod which looks somewhat like an egg-plant. The cocoa beans are surrounded by a soft, sticky pulp in this pod, which must be removed before the beans are put on the market, as it hurts their appearance and diminishes their value.

For this reason the cocoa beans are scooped out of the pods and spread on a big flat floor out in the tropic sun to dry. To polish them the Turkey Trot is resorted to. A band of native negroes, men and women, wade into the heap of beans and with their big bare feet "dance out the cocoa," as they call it.

Forming a ring, the dancers sway each other to and fro to the rhythmic waddling motion as they work their way up and down through the beans, varying the dance at times with peculiar figures and body motions which would make our fashionable Turkey Trotters green with envy.

Dancing out the cocoa" is about the only real work the natives enjoy. For years it has been giving us our cocoa, but it was only recently that it provided us with



The Origin of the "Turkey Trot"—Where It Serves a Useful Purpose

Orange Blossoms to Make Surgery Painless

HITHERTO used principally to adorn blushing brides, orange blossoms are now to serve a far more useful purpose. It has been discovered that their essence may be advantageously employed to lessen the dangers and discomfort of surgical operations.

Vaporized orange essence, whose odor is ten times as strong as that of ether, is now used to dull the sense of smell so that ether may be subsequently introduced without the patient being aware of it.

The patient "goes under" without a struggle, possibly imagining himself picking oranges in sunny Florida. More important still, however, is the fact that the patient comes out of his stupor without any of the nausea usually experienced where ether is administered alone; in short, both the "before" and "after" effects of the deadening drug are entirely eliminated.

Dr. James T. Gwathmey, assistant surgeon at St. Bartholomew's and of the Skin and Cancer Hospitals, New York and Dr. W. C. Woolsey, of Brooklyn, discovered the new [illegible] Dr. Gwathmey has been working with the orange essence for about four months and has applied it to nearly two hundred cases with [illegible]. It is the only anesthetic, and now that the essence so readily disguises objectionable features, it is to be desired.

[illegible] nitrous oxide, which is employed in many cases where the patient's constitution is not in a condition to withstand the deadly ether, does not require the addition of orange essence, simply because it has scarcely any odor and its after effects are mild. However, nitrous oxide will hereafter be little used, for "orange essence vapor anaesthesia" is much cheaper, much simpler, and productive of even better results.

The apparatus invented by Dr. Gwathmey for administering his compound consists of three uniform glass bottles, about seven inches in height, with a stopcock on the ether bottle [illegible] flow of the anesthetic [illegible] hardly manipulated [illegible] and a special [illegible] fitting face mask [illegible]

The three bottles contain, in order, chloroform, ether and one ounce of essential oil of orange dissolved in three ounces of hot water, warmed [illegible]

The [illegible] anesthetic uses a small foot pump to force the vaporized anaesthetic through the heated water and orange essence [illegible] tobacco smoke bubbles through the bowl of a Turkish hookah. [illegible] the patient's mouth and nose is a peculiarly shaped mask whose rim is a perforated tube through which the anaesthetic [illegible] pumped. The vaporized liquid is discharged into a rubber bag about the size of a football, which also regulates the force of the flow.

At first nothing is noticed except the fragrance of the essence of orange. Then, when the olfactory [illegible] about the size of a ten-cent piece is thoroughly saturated with the [illegible] solution is allowed to [illegible] rubber bag. The strength of the ether is slowly increased until the patient is receiving it to the limit of his capacity. If he shows a tendency to nausea or excitement, which is not at all likely, the flow of ether is immediately lessened and the orange vapor increased. Chloroform, which is seven times as strong as ether, is seldom used. The only cases necessary for its application are prolonged operations, where there is danger of the patient coming out of the ether before the work is completed. Thus it is merely a guarantor, or a forthfier, of unconsciousness.

Thanks largely to the absence of any resistance on the part of the patient, the time consumed in anaesthetizing the subject is diminished by half, and more important still, the amount of ether required to keep the patient under its influence is reduced amazingly. By the new method the amount of ether necessary to continue anaesthesia grows [illegible]

The five operations were for appendicitis (abscess type), double inguinal hernia (counting as two), and hemorrhoids. The schedule of anaesthesia is very interesting, especially to the medical profession. In the first case, the ether was applied at 9:40 o'clock. Seven minutes later the patient was sufficiently anaesthetized for the doctors to begin work, about half as long as the process generally takes. At 10:14 o'clock the ether was removed and at 10:17 o'clock the patient was able to talk. Two and a half ounces of ether were used.

The second application was begun at 10:28 o'clock. The patient was known to be a heavy drinker, and this was reflected in the fact that it took seven minutes for the ether to get in its work. In the third case the thing was reduced to six minutes, and in the last to five minutes

Man's Conscience and Will Stimulated by Chemicals?

By Leonard Keene Hirschberg,
A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

PROFESSOR JACQUES LOEB, M. D., Ph. D., Sc. D. and member of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, has applied scientific methods of the biological laboratory to throw light upon the great problem of morals and free will. His researches are startling, to say the least. Like the recent prophesy of Professor A. S. Schafer, the great English physiologist, his report calls for the serious consideration of all creeds and churches upon his work dstripped of its scientific terms and stated broadly, Professor Loeb's astonishing experiments point to the conclusion that man's conscience and will is stimulated by chemical changes. The distinguished Professor Loeb, after a lifetime of research, asserts that it is possible that great religious enthusiasm, great moral ideas and the sacrifices of the early Christian martyrs may be explained by chemical changes within the brain, which, perhaps, may sooner or later be produced artificially.

The professor, concerning the possible application of these discoveries, says that the investigations of the conditions which produce them may be of importance for the study of insanity in man. If we call forth in an animal otherwise indifferent to light by means of an acid an effect which drives it irresistibly into a flame: if the same thing can be brought about by means of an extract of the reproductive glands he believes a group of facts has been given within which the analogies necessary for a study of insanity can be called forth experimentally and can then be investigated. Says Professor Loeb:

"These experiments may also attain a similar value for morality and ethics. The highest manifestation of ethics, namely, the condition that human beings are willing to sacrifice their lives for an idea is comprehensible neither from the utilitarian standpoint nor from that of the categorical imperative or the 'still small voice.' It might be possible that under the influence of certain ideas chemical changes, for instance, internal secretions within the body are produced which increase the sensitiveness to certain stimuli to such an unusual degree that such people become slaves to certain stimuli just as the crabs become slaves to the light when carbon dioxide is added to the water. Since Pawlow and his pupils have succeeded in causing the secretion of saliva in the dog by means of optic and acoustic signals, it no longer seems strange to us that what the philosopher terms an 'idea' is a process which can cause chemical changes in the body."

Although most of us will not at this time agree with Professor Loeb, at this moment we lack the laboratory and experimental data to deny Dr. Loeb's conclusions. Therefore, in a perfectly fair spirit, without agreeing with or disputing his discovery I shall present here with all technical matters omitted, the mass of newly exposed facts, opened up to the world by the genius of this great savant.

Perhaps not since Loewoenhoeck first observed the cell, since Jenner gave us a means of preventing smallpox, Koch and Pasteur proved bacteria to be concerned with diseases, Sir A. E. Wright exposed the mechanism of vaccination, and Ross with Manson proved the mosquito guilty of transmitting malaria, has there been such a startling announcement from the laboratories of the experimental sciences as this one of Dr Loeb. All the problems of sociology, commerce, creeds, religions, ethical practice, finance and community effort hinge upon the verification or refutation of the professor s discovery

Through the writings of Schopenhauer he became interested in the problem of will. When as a student he read Munk's investigations on the brain he believed that they might serve as a starting point for an experimental analysis of will. Munk stated that he had succeeded in proving that every memory image in a dog's brain is localized in a particular cell or group of cells and that any one of these memory images can be extirpated at desire. Five years of experiments with sections of the cortex of brain, proved to him without doubt that Munk had become the victim of an error and that the method of brain operations may give data concerning the path of nerves in the central nervous system, but that it teaches little about the activities of brain processes.

A better opportunity seemed to offer itself in the study of the comparative psychology of the lower animals, in which the machinery for memory is developed but slightly, or not at all. It seemed to him that some day it must become possible to discover the physico-chemical laws underlying the apparently random movements of such animals; and that the word "animal will" was only the expression of our ignorance of the forces which prescribe to animals the direction of their apparently spontaneous movements, just as, without doubt, gravity prescribes the movements of the planets.

The scientific solution of the problem of will seemed then to consist in finding the forces which determine the movements of animals, and in discovering the laws according to which these forces act. Experimentally, the solution of the problem of will must take the form of forcing any number of individuals of a given kind of animals to move in a definite direction by means of their locomotor apparatus. Only if we succeed in this have we the right to assume that we know the force which under certain conditions seems to everybody to be the will of the animal. But if one part only of the animal moves in this direction and the other does not, we have not succeeded in finding the force which determines the direction of the creature's movement.

Some experiments on winged plant lice may serve as an introduction to the methods of prescribing to animals the direction of their forward movements.

In order to obtain the material, potted rose bushes infested with plant lice are brought into a room and placed in front of a closed window. If the plants are allowed to dry out, the plant lice, previously wingless change into winged insects. After this change the animals leave the plants, fly to the window and there creep upward on the glass. They can then easily be collected by holding a glass underneath and touching one animal at a time from above with a pen or pencil which causes the animals to drop into the glass. With these animals it may be shown that the direction of their movement toward the light is definitely determined—provided that the animals are healthy and that the light is not too weak. The experiment is so arranged that only a single source of light, that is, artificial light, is used.

The animals place themselves with their heads toward the source of light and move toward it in as straight a line as the imperfection of their locomotor apparatus allows, approaching as near to the source of light as their nature, meaning the grass, permits. When they reach the end of the glass, which is directed toward the source of light, they remain there, perfectly still, in a closely crowded mass. If the glass is turned 180 degrees the animals again go straight toward the source of light until the interference of the glass stops their further progressive movements. It can be demonstrated in these animals that the direction of their forward movement is just as much governed by the source of light as the direction of the movement of the planets is determined by the force of gravity. The influence of light on the conduct of insects or animals is called "heliotropism."

Many animals show no "heliotropism" or light influence at all; many show only a slight response to light while others show it in a degree as pronounced as do the winged plant lice. The problem, therefore, presented itself to Professor Loeb of producing "heliotropism," or response of a creature, to the influence of light artificially in animals, which, under natural conditions, show no "heliotropism."

If small crabs of a fresh water pond or lake are taken with a net at noontime or in the afternoon and placed in an aquarium which is illuminated from one side only, it is often found that these animals move about in the vessel pretty much at random and distribute themselves irregularly. Some seem to go more toward the source of light, others in the opposite direction, and the majority perhaps pay no attention to the light.

This condition changes instantly if we add to the water some acid, preferably carbonic acid, which easily penetrates the cells of the animals. All the individuals become active and approach the light. They move in as straight a line as the imperfection of their swimming movements permits, toward the source of light, and remain there closely crowded together on the illuminated side of the vessel. If the vessel is reversed they go directly back again to the lighted side of the vessel. Every other acid acts like carbonic acid and alcohol acts in the same manner, only more weakly and much more slowly. Animals which were previously indifferent to light become, under carbonic acid treatment, complete slaves to light.

The acid acts as a sensitiser. The light produces chemical changes—for instance, oxidation—on the surface of the animal, especially in the eye. The mass of substance which is acted upon by the light is often relatively small, so that even when the light strikes the crab on one side only the difference in the chemical changes on the two sides of the body remains still too small to call for that difference in tension or action in the muscles of the two sides of the body sufficient to turn the animal toward the source of light. But if an acid is added this could act, increasing the active parts of the substance, which undergoes a chemical change. Thus the acid makes the animal more strongly attracted toward the light by increasing the active mass of the sensitive substance on its body.

It is a well-known fact that during maturity special substances are formed which influence various organs. For instance, Professor Loeb has found that the substances which are set free by the bursting of an egg cause special sensitiveness in the non-pregnant animal

It is a common phenomenon that animals in certain larval stages are positively attracted by light, while in others they are not sensitive to light or are even negatively repelled by it. This change in the heliotropic sensitiveness produced by certain chemical products in the animal body is of great biological significance.

The fact that ants and bees become positively attracted to a source of illumination at certain periods plays an important role in the vital economy of these creatures. As is well known, the mating of these insects takes place during the so-called nuptial flight. The professor found that among the male and female ants of a nest the sensitiveness to light increases steadily up to the time of the nuptial flight, and that the direction of their flight follows the direction of the rays of the sun. He gained the impression that this nuptial flight is merely the consequence of a very highly developed "heliotropic" or light sensitiveness. The following is an experiment which shows that the case is similar among the bees

The bees were ready to swarm out of the opening of the box used for the experiment when the dark covering of the box was removed so that the light entered it from above. The sensitiveness to light of the animals was so great that they crept upward within the box, following the direction of the light rays, and were not able to make the nuptial flight. Thus, according to these observations the bees at the time of the nuptial flight are "positively heliotropic" machines

These facts may suffice to explain his point of view. To him it was a question of making the fact of psychology accessible to analysis by means of physical chemistry. In this way it is already possible to reduce a set of movements, namely the influence of light, to simple mechanical relations. Many animals, because their body structure is not only anatomically but also chemically symmetrical, are obliged to direct their bodies in a certain way in relation to certain centers of force, as, for instance, the course of light, an electric current, the centre of gravity of the earth or some chemical substances. This direction is automatically regulated according to the law of size and shape. The application of this law to this set of influences is thus made possible. Professor Loeb considers it unnecessary to give up the term "comparative psychology," but is of the opinion that the facts and discoveries of animal psychology will under the influence of his and other experiments be different from the contents of speculative psychology. But he also believes that the further development of this subject will fall more to the lot of biologists trained in physical chemistry than to the specialists in psychology or zoology, for it is in general hardly to be expected that zoologists and psychologists who lack a physico-chemical training will feel attracted to the subject of the influence of light and other external things in an animal's surroundings and a study of their effects.

Is it possible that the day will come when, like the crab that turns to the light under the influence of a few drops of carbonic acid, the brain of man, under the influence of some chemical, will turn from selfishness, greed and cruelty to the nobler impulses?

Working to Create Life fro

THE assertion of Dr. E. A. Schafer, president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, that the production of life from chemicals may be successfully accomplished at any time has stimulated the research laboratories in Europe and America to still greater efforts in this direction.

Dr Schafer, who is one of the foremost scientists of the world, asserted that the elements composing life substances are few and well known—carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen and phosphorus

These chemical elements are in every scientific laboratory and a combination of them into a colloidal or jelly-like compound is recognized to be the chemical basis of life When this chemical compound is mixed in exactly the right proportions, Dr. Schafer asserts that life will spring from this jelly-like mass and we will have produced under our own eyes in the laboratory life in the same form in which it began on this earth thousands of years ago.

Dr. Schafer declared that we must set aside as devoid of scientific foundation the idea of immediate supernatural or divine intervention in the first production of life. I in the first place sprang from a combina of chemicals, and from this early spark jelly-like life slowly developed all life, cluding the birds, the beasts, the trees human beings

Going a step further, Dr. Schafer asser that there was no reason to believe that th was any specially favorable condition on earth in remote ages for this first prod tion of life He believes that life is be evolved to day from lifeless chemicals just it has been in the past.

Undoubtedly the most striking experime in the direction of creating life artificia have been performed by Professor Stepha Leduc, of the Medical School of Nant France. His experiments were referred by President Schafer, of the British assoc tion

Professor Leduc has created not mer elementary single celled forms of life, b things having the appearance of musse corals, starfish and other comparatively a vanced creatures animals and vegetables and placed them in a nutritive medium. The result was a growth resembling a natural development, although the outcome was in some cases very fantastic.

For instance, he made a germ consisting of one part sugar and two parts copper sulphate, the latter forming the covering membrane. This he placed in a solution of gelatine, yellow blood alkali, chloro-natrium and silica salts. The latter salts were put in to furnish the shells and bones, which in sea creatures are found to consist largely of silicates.

The germ burst its membrane, greedily swallowed up the nutriment in the surrounding fluid, developed a body and head and threw out tentacles suggesting the form of an octopus. One of the tentacles, by some mysterious chance, grew enormously beyond the others until it seemed like a great snake.

Different combinations of the same substance produced other copies of living sea creatures. When the blood was omitted from the nutritive medium, vegetable forms were obtained.

The criticism was made that Professor Ledue's creations were not truly alive, because they did not have the power of reproducing themselves.

Professor J. Butler Burke, of Cambridge University, England, reports that he has produced living from nonliving matter with the aid of that wonderful substance, radium.

Professor Burke placed radium in a test tube, containing sterilized bouillon and got from the mixture microscopic growths resembling at first sight what is seen when bacteria are cultivated in tubes of bouillon. But under the microscope these cultures were found to differ from any known form of micro-organism. They moved constantly in a right-hand direction and hastened their movements under influence of light.

All possibility of the invasion of living germs had been eliminated, and yet these minute rounded objects seemed to be very much alive. They exhibited the characteristics of living protoplasm, at least so far that they subdivided, grew and multiplied. In this they differed from Professor Ledue's creations, which never showed any capacity to reproduce themselves.

To these cultures Professor Burke gave the name "radiobes." It was shown that they possessed nuclei, which are characteristic of unmistakable living matter and differentiate it from crystals.

President Schafer in his address stated that crystals grew and multiplied, and that no one could draw a line which marked them off from living matter. Many scientists have been observing the growth of crystals with the object of discovering a point at which they pass into recognisable living matter.

Professor Charles Powell White, of Manchester University, in his experiments, found that crystals had the power of growth, movement and reproduction, a combination of faculties formerly believed to belong only to living matter. He found that a crystal of sodium chlorids (common salt) increased by forming new molecules from a nutritive medium, in much the same way that a fish would sustain itself.

The crystals multiplied by fission in the same way that the lower single-celled forms of life do. When there was not sufficient nutritive material in the surrounding medium, the crystal showed the power of moving away in search of more food. While the crystals do not possess nuclei which are characteristic of the higher forms of life, they nevertheless have certain powers which are identical with those of living creatures and may be regarded as the beginning of life.

Does the Soul Die When the Heart Stops Beating?

By Professor Max Verworn, of the University of Bonn.

THAT the human soul can be immortal in the old-fashioned sense is now proved by science to be an impossibility.

Our body is made up of billions of little cells, and all our life, physical and mental, is the result of the activity of these cells. One type of cell makes the heart tissue, another the bone tissue, and so on. What we call the soul is a result of the activities of the nerve and brain cells. When the blood stream fails the hour for all cells has struck. When the brain cells die the soul ceases to exist.

The maintenance of the cell depends upon the food supply. The conditions are such that the constituents of the food can never completely balance the constituents of the living substance. The life process represents at every moment a compromise between these two sets of conditions. It is an entire illusion to hope ever artificially to make a cell immortal by establishing a nutritive medium in which the components would always meet the requirements of the cell. There is left to every cell only the two possibilities of either dying or growing. The period at which death appears can, under certain circumstances, be greatly delayed, but a cell that does not grow must inevitably perish.

Certain cells do appear in a partial sense to enjoy immortality. Single-celled organisms, such as the amoeba, look forward to further innumerable generations when they transmit their life by continued cell illusion. Among the cells of the cell community, such as man, however, this hope of immortality is allowed to only a few cells. These are the reproductive cells, and here many indeed are called, but few are chosen. The great mass of our body cells inevitably harbor within themselves the seeds of death.

But even single-celled organisms and human reproductive cells are not, properly speaking, immortal. In every act of cell division the old cell ceases to live as such, for the daughters are not identical with it. The living substance that is transferred in the act of reproduction cannot be called immortal, for all living substance is continually dying. In every cell certain molecules disintegrate, while new ones appear. Every particle of living substance, even the most minute, is ordained for death, and the duration of its life is strictly limited.

All living substances must have a beginning and an end. Just as living substance was once able to appear upon the earth, and, indeed, was forced to appear when all its conditions came together, so, also, it must pass away from the earth as soon as its conditions cease. And wherever and whenever upon any heavenly body in the universe the conditions of life cease, then, also, living substance returns to lifeless forms.

To return to what we call the soul. Every act of consciousness is intimately dependent upon the vital processes in certain cells of the cortex, or outer layer of the brain. Innumerable facts testify to this. The phenomenon of human consciousness ceases with the life of the brain cells. The life of these cells is extraordinarily frail. Even a stoppage of the blood for a few seconds suffices to paralyze them, and completely to inhibit consciousness. These facts have been experimentally confirmed upon men. Hence our individual soul is no more immortal than our individual body.

If man possessed a soul apart from his known physical consciousness, would it be paralyzed by a trifling blow on the head?

If, with the silencing of the heart, consciousness passes away, and the happiness and the sorrow of the world cease, then living man is relieved of the fear, the feeling of uncertainty which a mournful faith in a future reward for good and evil must awaken in every man. Hell and purgatory and other inventions of a gloomy fancy ought to give place to more noble incentives in modern culture.

The thought of dying will not arouse feelings of fear in the future, when it is not accompanied by pain and suffering. Reacting to pain and feeling fear in the face of suffering are indeed wholly physiological properties. They are provisions developed in the struggle for existence as important means for maintaining the life of the organism. But as man learns to subject his life to the control of thought, the necessity of these things disappears and science helps to overcome them.

We should endeavor by every means to free mankind from the paralyzing fear of death. Here the education of the child can accomplish much. It is fundamentally wrong, by the mien, the fears and the the lamentations of mourners to picture death before children as something full of anguish and mystery and horror. We should rather accustom ourselves to the think of it as something self-evident. Then the anguish of death would disappear. He who has no fear of death can accomplish much that the coward never can.

The knowledge that although consciousness is extinguished, our life's labor is not lost, but reaches beyond death, into eternity, gives us a powerful incitement so to direct our efforts that long after our death they are still able to serve the aims which we ourselves recognized as right.

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, presenting all that is newest and best in styles for well dressed women.

Lady Duff-Gordon's new Paris establishment brings her into close touch with that centre of fashion

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

VELVET is, after all, the one fabric that every woman knows she must have to be happy. Other fabrics may be as expensive, but nothing else will satisfy the feminine heart because on a reception gown but velvet and the more silky it is the better.

I have created several unusual demi toilettes of this material that are very beautiful and yet exceedingly simple in design. I am showing you this week a gray velvet costume that, while quite dressy enough to wear to any afternoon affair. The shade of gray, by the way, is one of those clear grays that have nothing of the mole in them.

The skirt, as you will see, has the new front opening. It is circular in form, and the right side is fastened over on the left with large gray buttons. The deep tuck just below the hip, is one of the little touches that marks the latest gowns.

I particularly like the coat. Its front edges are shaped to match the front of the skirt. This gives the fashionable cutaway effect. The collar and cuffs are of blue gray blue velvet.

The hat is shown in the first picture. It is of velvet and sealskin. The turned-back brim is about six inches deep. The only trimming is the bunch of green and brown quills on the tip of the brim. This gives a very dashing effect, and is appropriate becoming to most women.

But to lay aside hats and gowns for the moment, let me tell you of some of the blouses and small things that take so important a place in every well groomed woman's wardrobe, and incidentally make a large hole in her pocketbook. I want to urge my clients to wear more net blouses, rather than chiffons and silks.

For personally, as I have always tried to make quite clear to you in my articles, I attach the greatest possible importance to the "little things" of the toilette, and even and, indeed, especially—when a woman is wearing a severely plain tailor suit would wish her to introduce in blouse or underskirt or belt or tie some entirely and allurinal feminine touch, so that in the very contrast there will be added piquancy for both. Imagine, for example, a blue serge coat and skirt, perfectly plain—and also, let us hope, perfectly cut—worn with a shirt blouse of white lawn; as fine as a handkerchief, with a crepe de chine scarf also deeply but rather more brightly hued, loosely knotted beneath the polo collar, while for the rest it is just as plain as a man's shirt. But here, as it is a woman's—and a fashionable woman's at that—its plain transparence is softened with the faintest possible plush from the inner cache corset of flesh pink chiffon, with its bonderings and in sertions of Valenciennes lace, and its wide encircling banding, just beneath the bust of soft rosette satin ribbon with a high-looped bow tied over the heart. Or, perhaps, instead of the ribbon, the little bodice will be nothing but a softness of the faintly pink ninon and the ivory white lace, the fastening being arranged—and carefully hidden—at the back so that the front is innocent for the undisturbed adornment of half a dozen tiny bows of folded ninon. But both bodices will—if you take my advice—be alike in the one important respect of being made with short kimono sleeves. Inside which the preservers can be attached so that, however flimsy the blouse itself may be, these necessary, but not at all decorative additions may never give a hint of their presence. And, as you must know, it only too often happens that their outline, every inch of it, is immediately and unmistakably and hideously obvious.

I love, too, the delicate contrast of pale blue satin ribbon as threaded through the laces of a still more elusively pink ninon or charmeuse, but I only use and recommend this when an entire underrobe is being arranged, as then, in addition, to the ribbon banding on the corsage, another threading can be introduced—with delightful effect—on the skirt just beneath the hips and again above the transparent bordering of lace at the hem.

But such a contrast demands rejection as a person for its first introduction and so for an under bodice alone keep to pink ribbon on a pink background, or else if white be used, you can either have blue or pink—whichever you prefer.

As a matter of fact—and as proving the new importance of this particular and once private item of attire—some of the latest and loveliest blouses are being made with the petticoat of lace corsets as a permanent section. And as the idea is a distinctly good one, I will give on such details as will possibly help you to achieve something of the effect—without all the expense of the original and somewhat costly Paris model. First of all then, the blouse itself as presented to the public—and admiring—view is a dainty affair of white chiffon, closely clustered tucks forming the yoke and shoulder pieces and being enclosed within pipings of white satin, while also of the softest satin is the deeply down turned collar, which ends its career in front at either side of a central band of tuckings studded with tiny satin buttons and edged with cuffings of Valenciennes lace. There are a certain number of tucks, too, at each side to get a becoming suggestion of fullness; while then the oversleeves are bordered at the elbow with encircling tucks, but so that that that part of the arm which is ordinarily, also; not the prettiest, may be softened into an appearance of charm. There are longer semi-transparent undersleeves of plain chiffon, piped with satin. So far—emphatically so good—don't you think so?—but there is more and still better to follow, for a complete lining of white chiffon is added and made beautiful by many insertion stripes of lace, while inside that again fall three flimy fabrics being united in the one waist band) there comes the aforementioned lace corset which is made entirely of cleverly shaped insertions and borderings of lace

No. 201--How to Liven a Dead Skin

YOUR skin should be one of the livest things in your entire makeup, yet it is that part of you which oftenest looks lifeless. A "dead" skin, as specialists know it, is pale and withered looking. It is seamed with fine lines and looks absolutely devoid of moisture.

There are many methods of remedying this regrettable appearance, which adds many years to a woman's apparent age, and which must, by some means, be avoided.

The fundamental remedy is a change of diet. A father's advice in a recent play, "Eat two apples and drink a glass of water before going to bed" was laughed at as old-fashioned, yet there is no better beauty rule, having the skin in mind. It gives mature prompt and powerful aid in cleansing the interior of our bodies, and without this unclogged interior there can be no clear, live skin. A mottled, pimpled skin is an infallible sign of an unclean interior.

But the apples eaten at night are not enough. Drink lemon juice slightly diluted with water in the morning. The juice of an entire lemon pressed into the glass and diluted with the same quantity of water will cleanse the stomach and aid in clearing the skin.

A remedy for a dead looking mottled skin is a teaspoonful of grape juice with the same quantity of olive oil night and morning.

A French remedy for a faded skin is to eat a small plateful of water cress with salt every day. The beauties of the harems of Constantinople rely upon any green salad eaten at breakfast with much salt for the same purpose.

Sometimes these internal remedies must be supplemented by external aids. One of the best is to moisten coarse cornmeal with milk and, filling the hands with it, scrub the face gently yet with vigor. The friction opens the pores and relieves the muddy looking skin of the poison which has choked them.

A woman whose skin at fifty is as fresh as a girl's told me that she would as lief retire without saying her prayers as without ironing her face with ice. This causes the blood to flow to the surface, refreshing and feeding the skin.

Cold cream is needful for all complexions that are extremely oily. A good test of your needs is to pat cold cream into the skin and note whether it quickly absorbs it. If so the skin is hungry and requires daily feeding.

Cocoanut oil, if secured in its purest state is an admirable skin food. Olive oil feeds the skin well but there is a deep rooted objection to its too frequent use because it is charged with making the skin yellow. The owner of one of the best complexions I know, a lovely French woman, feeds her skin by nightly baths of the following:

Olive oil ..... 3 ozs
Almond oil ..... ½ oz
Benzoin ..... ½ oz.

In this case the olive oil's tendency to make the skin yellow, if such a tendency lies in this greatly remedial oil, is neutralised by the presence of the benzoin, which is a whitener, and has another office useful to those whose skins have become flabby. It is an astringent drawing the relaxed skin up into the desired tightness.

Beauty Questions Answered by Mme. Lina Cavalieri

M. C. says: "I think a great deal of all you write and throw myself upon your generosity for advice on several points. Please let me know if anything will remove moth patches or liver spots. Please let me know also if I can do anything to bring back the natural color of my hair. Years ago I used a hair dye that was supposed to be harmless. It turned my hair from black to a reddish brown. Is there anything on earth that will bring it back to its natural color?"

You have my sympathy, M. C., but I fear I can give you no help as to the hair. I have written against hair dyes for four years. I shall continue to do so as long as I write lectures on beauty.

As I have before written, chloasma or "liver spots" are usually the result of anemia, which means an impoverished condition of the blood. Nourishing diet, plenty of sleep and rest and more attention to deep breathing, should correct the anemia, and with the restoration of proper tone to the system should come a fading of the spots. For applications to the spots this has been successful, when applied, with absorbent cotton, to the spots two or three times a day:

Distilled water, 6 ounces.
Chloride of ammonia, 1 dram.
Bichloride of mercury, 1 grain.

From J. C. comes this: "Won't you tell me how to clear my complexion? It is flecked with red spots."

The skin is the mirror that reflects the condition of the blood. If the life stream be muddy it will deposit stains in the face. Clear the blood by eating no rich, greasy nor indigestible foods. Shun candy and pastry as you would a mortal enemy. Eat little or no meat and many vegetables and fruits. Drink water freely, the ten glasses a day that I have so often prescribed to keep the internal canals clear. Exercise much in the open air and be sure there is a good current of fresh air through your sleeping apartment.

Training A Baby to Live 100 Years

OBVIOUSLY, very few of us will live to see the dawn of the twenty-first century.

Margaret Terry Hudson Grant, of Minneapolis, however, is expected to live until 2010!

To do that she will have to live a hundred years, for she is two now, but that she will, her father, Dr. Richard Grant, coach of track athletics at the University of Minnesota, is quite confident. Since Margaret was three weeks old he has been training her to live to be a hundred!

Dr. Grant was a track star at Yale, but for the last ten years he has been connected with the University of Minnesota, where he has produced practically all the champion athletes that institution has turned out during that period.

He has always been interested in the subject of longevity and the means for attaining it. When his child was born, two years ago, he determined to watch and train her as he had trained the athletes of Minnesota and as he himself was trained at Yale, but with the specific object of adding thirty years to the Biblically allotted span of three score and ten.

Dr. Grant did not wait long after the birth of Margaret to begin his experiment. When the infant was three weeks old he began. He taught her to reach for his fingers when he passed them over her and then to hold to them. She learned quickly. At this age [illegible] Dr. Grant's daughter surprised him. In the bathtub of her home the young [illegible] began to take strokes in the water. It was not long after that she would "duck" under water, and soon she was paddling the length of the tub.

Now, at the age of two years, Miss Grant's father claims her to be physically perfect.

"Every part of her little body is perfectly formed.

There is no such thing as fat and her muscles can plainly be seen working as she exercises with her father.

Her normal chest measurement is 19 inches, and upon expansion it measures 20¾ inches.

Her weight is 26 pounds, and the child is rapidly gaining.

She could swim when she was eight months old, and at her present age she swims as long as her father allows her, for he will not tire her.

She walked at the age of ten months, and was taught to bow [illegible] which, Dr. Grant claims, has prevented bow-legs.

Her running propensities are such that her mother declares she hers [illegible] is kept in good physical shape running after her young one and striving [illegible] down her home. The young [illegible] climbs three flights of stairs and descends them without showing fatigue.

All these things, besides a regular system of exercising keep Margaret going toward the goal of her [illegible] ambition.

Dr. Grant [illegible] coach [illegible] of the University of Minnesota Armory and [illegible] coach [illegible] athletics. When he starts [illegible] the training quarters for the institution of [illegible] medium is here. The running [illegible] the shuffleboard and [illegible] parallels used in making [illegible] Minnesota [illegible] such success in this line. In these surroundings Margaret has her playground.

"I early began giving Margaret a series of exercises," explains Dr. Grant. "As time passed on I added to these and by [illegible] enabled to become [illegible] the work lessens. [illegible] changes here in the nursery [illegible] the same interest in their physical exercises as this child does [illegible] Minnesota's teams would do wonders.

One of the principal features of the work is that I never allow her to tire. We go through the exercises together, and only she turned the word 'stop.' She would say 'Stop and I have never made her use a muscle after she uttered it. I watch her closely and do not believe she has ever become fatigued.

"Her exercises are varied. Each has some [illegible] to perform to strengthen some part of her body. She is beginning to use dumbbells now, but since she was old enough to hold herself up she has used a wand with which to drill. It has done much to develop her chest and strengthen her arm muscles.

"Before the child could walk she would hang on to my fingers and allow me to carry her around. When she was seven months old she could hang on to my fingers long enough so I could carry her around a room. And soon, holding me in that manner, she could indulge her play while I ran from the swimming tub on the ground floor up two flights of winding stairs to my office. She did not tire even at that.

"When she was about nine months old I taught her to balance herself on her hands and walk [illegible] ahead. At fifteen months she would stand on my hand and I would carry her the same distance I carried her dangling from my fingers. I could run up the stairs and she would lean forward to balance herself and maintain her equilibrium. Her strong little legs would hold her surprisingly steady.

"At thirteen months I put her in the swimming tank. She had never set foot to free the water in the bath tub and it was a great asset for her in the tank. I allowed her to swim at will and now and then swam with her under. Of course I would [illegible] low her to swim much [illegible] or twelve strokes, but for a child of that age you will find that [illegible] been equalled many times.

"Her horizontal bar, which she used [illegible] is set out of her crib is a smooth, round stick I [illegible] my hands. As a [illegible] would hang on to this and I would lift her up. She could always hang to the bar until I forced her to let go for fear of lifting her. Soon [illegible] swinging herself and now she can chin herself. All this had a tendency to develop muscles that will undoubtedly bring her to the physical state that I wish.

"Body exercises were brought into use early. As soon as she could stand, she was a little over [illegible] months old then, I taught her to raise her hands above her head and [illegible] them down. She soon learned the swimming motion and [illegible] ing of her body. She can easily touch the floor with her hands without bending the knees. Her back muscles were strengthened by [illegible] ing her on the floor on her back and letting her raise herself. At first I had to hold her feet down, but now, for long, for she soon found out that the muscles of her body were [illegible] on her. I perform this stunt by [illegible] self.

Her neck has always [illegible] on

Just what [illegible] mother did during the physical [illegible] period, just those exercises [illegible] should teach her. Advertising—Light of Business and Economy

Have You Thought What Advertising Means to the Life of America? Do You Understand that it is a Guarantee of Quality, and the Agent of Economy? Do You Realize that if You Are to Succeed in Any Business or Any Profession, ADVERTISING WILL HELP YOU? Advertising is the LANGUAGE of Business. It is the Bright Light by Which Commerce and Industry Find their Way Throughout the Nation

YESTERDAY was the day set in Chicago for laying the corner stone of the first great building devoted exclusively to the SCIENCE AND LITERATURE of advertising.

Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, showed his understanding of the important event, interesting himself in the laying of the corner stone and in all of the proceedings, and from all over the United States men earnest and able in the work of promoting business and multiplying possibilities accepted the invitation to attend.

Not alone business men, merchants, advertising men or editors are interested in advertising.

The whole country, every citizen, every woman, every child, derives benefit from the advertising art, which has been developed within the present generation.

Every schoolboy knows how the human race has begun its mental development since language was discovered. Before men could speak they could not tell each other their ideas or help each other.

What language is to the human race, ADVERTISING IS TO BUSINESS, INDUSTRY, COMMERCE, MANUFACTURING AND ECONOMY.

Advertising is the language of trade, the language of energy, the language of prosperity, the language of the man of to-day determined to do in his life what in former years could not be done in fewer than half a dozen generations.

Advertising, as the word indicates, is GIVING INFORMATION.

Literally translated, the word means, "to turn to," from the Latin of ad—to—and verto —turn.

The advertisements turns the public to the thing wanted.

Advertising, the voice of commerce, tells the work that the thinkers, fighters and inventors of industry are doing.

Very old, indeed, is advertising. The rainbow in the clouds, according to the Scriptures, was one of the early advertisements. It promised that men should not be destroyed with a flood again. In that advertisement, brilliant in color, magnificent in size, supreme power announced the fact that that particular flood was to be the last flood.

Caesar used the advertisement when, fighting the patricians and using the bulk of the people against his enemies in the Senate, he caused the proceedings of the Senate to be advertised on the walls of Rome. That was the first semi-modern advertising.

The object of men that create is to make their creations known.

And the task that advertising accomplishes, and that nothing else CAN accomplish, is to make known to all the efforts, the results, the inducements of the individual.

Many and ingenious have been the advertising methods of men since the beginning.

It was Soloman's advertising of his wisdom —in various very respectable ways—that brought the Queen of Sheba to see him.

It was advertising, undoubtedly, when young Cleopatra, hoping to get the Roman power behind her weak kingdom, had herself wrapped up in a rug and, thus wrapped up, delivered in Caesar's private apartment. She was disappointed in the result of that advertisement, for, although she became the mother of Little Cesarion, Caesar's son, she was not able to influence or control him. And when she took Antony as second best, she failed and died.

It was good advertising when Canonicus, the Indian chief, intending to frighten the little group of New Englanders, filled a snake skin with arrows and sent it to Governor Bradford. And it was still better advertising when that same Governor filled the snake skin with powder and bullets and sent it back to Canonicus. This Indian gentlemen looked at the white man's advertisement in the snake skin thoughtfully and decided to put off the fight indefinitely.

It was excellent advertising of her courage, and of woman's power to fight, when Hannah Dustin, of Haverhill, Mass., being captured by the Indians who murdered her baby, and being led away to be tortured, returned on foot bringing with her the scalps of ten Indians that she had killed in their sleep.

It was good advertising, although not meant as such, when Agassiz, the great naturalist, said, "I have not time to make money."

It was good advertising when Marc Antony pointed out the holes that the daggers made in Caesar's clothing—and even better advertising when he mentioned with pretended reluctance how much of his money and property Caesar had left to the howling mob.

The history of the world has been a history of advertising, conscious or unconscious.

This generation of ours is the first that sees advertising as a science and an art.

And even this generation does not realize the importance of advertising, the dignity of the advertising profession, the extraordinary part that advertising is destined to play in the industry, the commerce, and especially in the economy of the country.

The advertisement is to the industry and business of the nation what the bright electric light is to the big engine producing the power. The little electric bulb tells what the engine is doing. The brilliantly worded advertisement tells what industry, commerce, manufacturers are doing.

In the olden days everything was slow. A man with great difficulty managed to place his little store on a street where many passed. The people only could know what he was doing if they PASSED HIS store.

Now a man puts his factory in a distant town, nobody has seen it, nobody knows perhaps where it is. But that man puts his name, his purposes, his accomplishments, IN THE HANDS OF TENS OF MILLIONS OF HUMAN BEINGS. He does not wait for the man to pass his door. He goes through the door of the house in which the man lives, and in this monthly, or that weekly, or in many dailies, presents to the man the story that he has to tell.

Therein lies the power of advertising. You can work to-day and to-morrow you can tell the whole world what you have done.

You can have a new idea this week, and next year that idea can be in the minds of fifty millions of human beings.

You are not bound by your location, limited by the strength of your voice. Your voice is the voice of the printing press.

No man need waste a day if he has the right idea and the energy, and knows how to talk for publication.

It is important that the public know what advertising means.

Especially important is the fact that plenty of advertising almost invariably means AN EXCELLENT AND HONEST PRODUCT.

If you read that a man had invested a million dollars in a factory of brick, stone and iron, you would not need to be told that he would refrain from setting fire to that factory—especially if it were not insured.

There are many business men that have put not one million, but five millions, and ten millions into an advertising reputation.

They have put their millions into words and have created by them a reputation as solid as any brick or any iron. That reputation IS THEIR FORTUNE. That reputation is their life work. It is not insured, it cannot be insured.

For the man who has put his millions into advertising, to lower the quality o fhis goods, to deceive the public, would be like setting fire to his millions without any insurance.

The man who advertises gives hostages to the public, and proves that it is his intention to succeed by giving value, by living up to that which he has promised.

There are, of course, fraudulent advertisers, although they are constantly becoming fewer. And they are becoming fewer, thanks TO THE POWER OF ADVERTISING ITSELF.

For the advertising of honest men and of honest goods has made the work of deceitful advertising more and more difficult, less and less remunerative.

There is one gentleman in this country who formerly made a fortune by advertising shotguns for sale, "like this picture," and then sending a gun made of wood that would shoot nothing. He is now engaged in business in a reputable way—and, by the way, is a prominent Bull Mooser.

There was a great concern that first advertised a complete set of parlor furniture, "exactly like illustration." And when the farmer, having sent in his money and having gone to the station with a two-horse team, applied for the goods, he found a little set of toy furniture which he could have taken back in his overcoat pocket.

But that concern, now in the control of an honest and intelligent man, is doing a business of almost one hundred millions a year, and doing a business absolutely honorable, a business managed so economically that it saves millions annually to the farmers of this country—it is one of the greatest mail order houses in the world.

Advertising is no longer used to sell wooden nutmegs, or to sell "a fine steel engraving of George Washington for fifty cents," which turns out to be a United States two-cent stamp with George Washington's face upon it.

Advertising builds up the honest man and kills off the dishonest man. There is more profit in building a great grocery business and selling the best of nutmegs at a fair small profit than there could possibly be in selling wooden nutmegs.

Advertising has ceased to be misrepresentation, and it has become the honest voice of commerce, the agent of economy—AND THE ECONOMY MUST BE CLEAR TO ALL—it can be made clear in a very few words.

You have a merchant who does not advertise. He pays a clerk two dollars a day. And the clerk sells ten dollars worth of goods,

Naturally, that merchant must first pay the clerk his two dollars out of the ten dollars that you pay for the goods. That means twenty per cent profit, to start with, for the clerk alone.

And then the store, which represents high rent, must take its part of your purchase money for rent, for heat, for taxes, insurance.

And the proprietor must take his part

Where the man who does not advertise pays two dollars to the clerk and two dollars for rent and a dollar for insurance and delivery and sells ten dollars worth of goods, HE MUST TAKE FIVE DOLLARS FOR EXPENSES AND AT LEAST THREE DOLLARS FOR HIMSELF—AND YOU GET TWO DOLLARS WORTH OF GOODS.

A man with the same clerk and the same store, ADVERTISING, can sell one hundred dollars worth of goods, so that out of one hundred dollars he can pay the clerk and the rent and the taxes and the overhead, and take the profit that he wants—and the whole thing amounts to less than one-tenth of the amount taken in.

ADVERTISING DOUBLES THE EFFICIENCY OF THE CLERK, THE VALUE OF THE STORE, THE POWER OF THE MERCHANT'S ORGANIZATION.

Only a child under five years of age could fail to see that the man who advertises persistently, intelligently and truthfully is saving the money of those that purchase from him—inasmuch as he is making it possible for the SAME organization, the same equipment, to do many times the amount of business that it would do without advertising. And he can take for himself three or four or five per cent profit on his sales—instead of forty per cent, as the non-advertiser must do—and with his small percentage of profit he can become an infinitely richer man.

Nothing is more foolish than the fast-disappearing belief of the ignorant that when they buy goods, "they pay for the advertising." They do nothing of the kind. The advertising pays for part of the goods and makes it possible to deliver the goods cheaper.

If we had the room to do so, it would be interesting here to emphasize the importance of the really able advertising man, advertising agent, or advertising writer.

The business man who grudges a commission to an advertising agent who thinks "he can do it himself" is usually about as intelligent as he would be if he grudged the commission of the architect and decided to build his store for himself.

He would save the commission of the architect, but ruin the store.

This is the age in which one man DOES ONE THING. You can run your BUSINESS. Find a man who can RUN YOUR ADVERTISING.

And the advertising agent, able to get and manage and place business, is foolish if he underestimates the man that can WRITE ADVERTISING. To write an advertisement is more difficult than to write anything else, for he who writes an advertisement competes with thousands of writers, and he is trying to do the most difficult thing, which is TO INTEREST ANOTHER MAN IN THAT WHICH INTERESTS YOU.

The writer of an editorial, the writer of fiction, the writer of jokes, has a task that is easy. He amuses the reader; it is easy to get such a reader.

The advertiser, the man who prepares the advertising, is THE CLERK WHO TALKS TO ALL OF THE CUSTOMERS. And the merchant especially should remember this.

If any merchant had a clerk who talked to every customer before that customer came to the store, the merchant would consider no price too great to pay for efficient service of that kind.

How many merchants and other business men fail to remember that the advertising man IS THE CLERK THAT TALKS TO ALL? More than that, he is the man who forms public opinion as to the policy of the merchant or the other business which he represents.

He is the voice—the man who represents not merely the bargains, the cash inducements, BUT THE CONSCIENCE OF THE BUSINESS.

It would be possible to write many pages concerning the difficulties of the art of preparing advertising.

For to-day, it is sufficient to indicate the four great points in advertisement writing.

First, Your advertisements must be seen. If it is not looked at, it is lost. Make it CONSPICUOUS.

Second, Your advertisement must be read If it is not read, it is wasted. Make it SIMPLE.

Third, Your advertisement must be understood. If it is not understood, it is again wasted. Make it PLAIN.

And, fourth, WHAT YOU WRITE MUST BE BELIEVED. The power of convincing is the greatest power. He who can make others believe and who is sincere and believes himself, first of all, is the successful man in every line.

The Fight to Free Turkey's Women from the Slavery of the Harem

A Leader of the Turkish Feminine Movement Tells How She Won Her Own Freedom, and How She Converted Her Husband to the Cause.

By Mrs. ASRA HASSAN,
A Leader of the Oriental Feminine Movement.

WHILE in the West the harem has been considered as an institution of romanticism and mystery due to the influence of the stories of "A Thousand and One Nights," yet in reality it is nothing but a domestic institution of feminine slavery. It is true, the harem is not such an immoral place as the puritanic opinion of foreigners mostly depicts it, nevertheless it is a curse of the followers of the Islam. I am going to explain it concisely, since I have found no authentic pictures of it abroad.

This is very natural, for those few of the men or women writers who have written about the harem have done it from their fragmentary observations, while I was born and spent most of my life behind the walls of that deplorable institution of this civilized age.

Only five years ago I started my propaganda of a feminine movement among the women of the Mohammedan nations, but now I am proud to make the statement that with the war of the Christian States on the Balkan Peninsula against Turkey, the Turkish women have also declared a war against the antiquated harem-system.

To my mind the feminine movement of this country and Christian Europe is too exaggerated, as compared with the reasons that have caused us in the East to uprise. Here a woman is the life-companion of her husband, but with us she is a born slave, as far as her affection and sentiments are concerned. I do not sympathize with the militant suffragettes of the West and think that they are doing things more for their personal notoriety than for any cause. I truly think an American woman is a goddess in her way, and should not mix in politics. It is very unaesthetic for a woman to play the masculine role, and deprives her of every feminine grace and fascination. But, I really agree that legally she ought to be equal with the man. I was rather startled at the reply of a famous English suffragette when I asked her why she acted in such an extravagant way. She said:

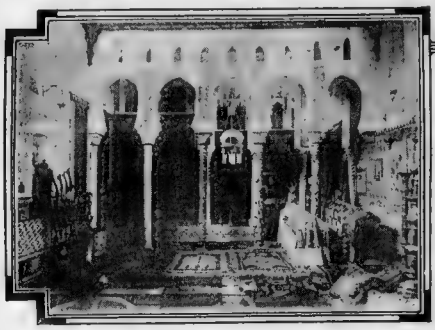
"Why, if I should drop this method, I would be nothing—no paper would mention my name and nobody would know of me. But now I am an important personage. The English papers all talk about me, and that's worth all the trouble."

As the daughter of a wealthy and conservative Turkish family at Constantinople, my father being a noted merchant and municipal functionary, I was raised in strict Mohammedan traditions. The only exception was the fact that, besides a Mohammedan teacher, I had a French governess who taught me German and French and gave me piano lessons. Up to the age of twelve I went with my governess unveiled and played with other children on the street. I went freely to my father's apartment and did not feel any of the oppression of the harem. But after that everything changed. My mother gave me veils and arranged a suite of rooms in the haremlyk, saying:

"Although Mademoiselle Houlet (the name of the governess) will remain with thee, yet thou must not leave thy room without having covered thy face, for the curse of Allah rests on her who shows her uncovered lips to a man."

She told me further that I was to take care of my physical self so that I would have an attractive figure and a pretty face—which amounted to more than any dowry I would get. I was given to understand that I was of the age to be prepared for marriage.

On this occasion I must say that in spite of the fact that the Islam law allows a man to marry as many as four wives, an average Turkish household is not composed—as it is generally believed in the West—of a large number of wives. My father was a strict monogamist, and I did not know any one among our acquaintances who had more than one wife. Even if one reads the biographies of eminent poets and statesmen who flourished in the palmy days of the Ottoman Empire, one will find that all of them were satisfied with one wife. A second wife meant an extra suite of apartments and an extra train of slaves. Besides, there is no great abundance of women among the Mohammedans.



Interior of a Palatial Home in Constantinople.

Mrs. Asra Hassan in Her Harem.

The husband of a harem-wife possesses great privileges in the matter of divorce, for he can merely say to his wife: "Take thy things and go," and the separation is effected. The only safeguard the women have is a regulation of Mohammed, who said: "The curse of Allah shall pursue him who, without just cause, repudiates his wife." A divorce is granted by the local functionary and the husband has to pay the amount that he agreed to pay before the marriage.

After having lived four years the life of a solitary prisoner, my mother told me one day that Hassan Bey, an officer of the Sultan's bodyguard, had been inquiring about me secretly and was considering a proposal for me. "Now, who was that Hassan Bey? What kind of a man was he? How would he treat me?" Such questions began to worry me day and night, yet what could I say? If he liked me and proposed and if my parents accepted, I had naturally to give my consent. Of love and sentiment nothing was to be said. Yet how my heart fluttered!

Although Mohammed said: "When the servant of Allah marries he perfects half of his religion," yet, according to the law in existence, marriage is not a religious but a civil contract, the validity of which consists in its being attested by at least two witnesses. I was told that Hassan Bey had decided to marry me and a day was fixed when he should be the guest of my father and draw a marriage contract in presence of the Imam (a local functionary of the government). My mother told me to be dressed and wait behind the door of the haremlyk, which led into the selamlyk, and I did so. She also told me that the bridegroom had to announce thrice his desire to marry me, whereafter my father would come to the door, behind which I and my friends were assembled, and ask thrice if I was willing to wed Hassan Bey. I could object only in case the bridegroom had any bad habits of which I had absolute proofs. Otherwise I was obliged to say yes.

Think of all the excitement I had in giving my consent of marriage to a man whom I had never seen and who had never seen me! It was the harder for me as I had already received a half-European education, and knew what love meant in marriage

When I had answered thrice the fatal questions, the contract was signed and witnessed and we were legally man and wife. But even now I could not see or meet my husband, for, according to the Islam tradition, before the married parties may see each other social sanction has to be given in the wedding ceremony, called dughun. Thus for two weeks I remained still waiting in the harem before the dughun took place. The wedding dress with all its accessories was furnished by the bridegroom, while the rest of the trousseau was provided by my parents.

I met him first on the afternoon of my wedding day when my father brought him into the harem and introduced him to me. For a moment I was naturally dazed and did not know how to speak to my husband, whom I now met for the first time in my life. We were both confused. I think he asked me first:

"Sweetheart, dost thou like the wedding dress that I bought thee?"

As I did not care for it, although it was very gorgeous in appearance, but rather freakish, I stammered:

"Oh, it is like moonshine. I thank thee, my Lord."

"Oh, how pretty thou art, Asra! Let me kiss thy hand," he said, kissing my hands.

"What flowers dost thou like most?" he asked after a caressing pause

"I like thee, my Lord, most of all," I replied, bashfully. "Thou art the flower of flowers, the lion of Hona."

He smiled and was apparently flattered. Then I asked his permission to play him something on the piano. He was rather surprised that I could play the piano, as hardly any Turkish woman plays. Fortunately he was fond of music and appreciated especially the songs and piano pieces by Anton Rubinstein and Tschaikovsky, and asked me if I could play something by his favorite composers. I did play him two charming nocturns by Rubinstein and one song by Tschaikovsky. That really impressed him so that he asked me not to call him any more my Lord, but simply Ismail, as was his name.

The wedding lasted three days, after which I went to the harem that had been made ready for me by my husband. After having been courteously received in the selamlyk by the friends of my husband, he conducted me to the courtyard gate of the haremlyk. This was opened to us by an old Nubian woman who conducted us up a staircase to a wide balcony on which all the principal rooms opened. Over the doors hung the carpet portieres, so common in Turkish houses. Raising one of these she held it back, while we entered the divan khane—sitting-room.

A pretty young woman with blue eyes and black hair hanging below her waist in two thick plaits, uncurled herself from the divan and salaamed low in acknowledgment to our greeting and my husband introduced me to her as his sister. She was dressed in trailing intaries, worn under a short cloth jacket lined with embroideries. This was now to become my new home — a new prison with far more rigid rules than that I had known at home. The house itself with its projecting upper stories and irregular outlines, bright coloring and verdant setting had a most picturesque appearance.

The harem's daily life became monotonous, for my husband returned home only late in the evening. It is erroneous to imagine that an Osmanli woman has no duties and that she passes her days reclining on a divan, eating sweets and playing with her jewels. She not only takes care of the education of her children, but supervises all the housekeeping and tries to please her husband in serving him even hi: meat in her haremlyk. Like all Orientals, the Turkish woman is an early riser, and after drinking a cup of coffee and smoking a cigarette, she is ready to wait upon her husband. She pours out his coffee brought in by a slave and looks after his clothes so that they are always nice and clean.

"If thou think'st I am wrong as thy wife, I shall leave thee this very moment."

"Asra," he said, "thou hast taught me to love and admire thee during the three years we have been married, and I will be thy life-companion in thy fight, regardless of what may come. I will be a fighter with thee and shout: 'Down with the harem!'"

Upon that very day a new life opened to me. As orthodox Mohammedan society began to ostracize us, we took the challenge calmly. I founded two societies of Turkish haremless women in Constantinople and many more throughout Asiatic Turkey. In less than a year the membership of the Constantinople societies grew to over two hundred. But only recently it has reached the number of a thousand.

The trouble with our movement is that it is not a fight against an antiquated legal issue but a serious religious question. The law of the country stands always below the law of the church in the Orient, and there it is where the Turkish feminine movement comes into conflict with a far more serious issue than that which faces their Western sisters. Be it as it is with the present Turkish territorial war, the war of their women marks the first step of civilization of the Mohammedan Orient. If we succeed in abolishing the harem, we will have achieved more than

Although my husband, like most of the Turkish husbands, was tyrannic, yet I impressed him with my knowledge of languages, gift of music and my general European education. I began to read French, German and Russian novels. The stories of Tolstoy and Balzac especially made such an impression upon me that I said one day to my husband that I would not wear my veil any longer and I would not stay in the harem, as the harem-system was wholly barbaric. He looked at me utterly shocked and stammered:

"So thou art going to preach against Islam?"

"Yes, in that point," I replied firmly, the biggest military victory that can be imagined.

As to my views and predictions of the Balkan war, they are very pessimistic I feel that Turkey is not only going to lose every foothold in Europe, but that the last hour of the Ottoman Empire has come. Not that the small Balkan States which have started the war will get any big share, but the great Powers, especially Russia, Austria and England.

In the war the Turkish woman takes little interest, as she is absolutely ignorant of politics. For her it is just the same whether her husband is a subject of a Christian or a Mohammedan tyrant.

MAIDEN
Now have I fully fixed upon my part.
Good-by to dreams; for me a life of art!
Beloved art! Oh, realm serene and fair,
Above the mean and sordid world of care.
Art! art! the very word my soul inspires!
From foolish memories it sets me free
Not what has been, but that which is to be Absorbs me now. Adieu to vain regret!
The bow is tensely drawn—the target set.
(A knock at the door.)
MAID (aside):
The night is dark and chill; the hour is late.
(Aloud)
Who knocks upon my door?
(A Voice Outside):
"'Tis I, your fate!"
MAID:
Then dost deceive, not me, but thine own self.
My fate is not a wandering, vagrant elf.
My fate is here, within this throbbing heart
That beats alone for e ery, age for art.
(Another knock at the door.)
VOICE:
Pray, let me in; I am so faint and cold.
(Door is pushed ajar. Enter Cupid, who approaches the fire with outstretched hands.)
MAID (indignantly):
Methinks thou art not faint, however cold.
But rather too courageous, and most bold;
Surprisingly ill-mannered, sir, and rude.
Without an invitation to intrude
Into my very presence.
CUPID (warming his hands):
But you see,
Girls never mind a little chap like me.
They're always watching for me on the sly,
And hoping I will, call.
MAID (haughtily):
Indeed, not I!
My heart has listened to a sweeter voice,
A clarion call that gives command—not choice.
And I have answered to that call, "I come";
To other voices shal. my ears be dumb
To Art alone I consecrate my life—
Art is my spouse, and I his willing wife.
CUPID (slowly, gazing in the grate):
Art is a Sultan, and you must divide
His love with many another i l-fed bride.
Now I know one who worships you alone.
MAID (impatiently):
I will not listen! for the die is thrown
And Art has won me. On my brow some day
Shall rest the laurel wreath——
CUPID (sitting down and looking at fire critically):
Just let me say
I think sweet orange blossoms under lace
Are better suited to your type of face
MAID (ignoring interruption):
I yet shall stand before an audience
That listens as one mind, absorbed, intense,
And with my genius I shall rouse its cheers,
Still it to silence, soften it to tears,
Or wake its laughter. Oh, the play! the play!
The p a y's the thing! My boy, the play!
CUPID (suddenly clapping his hands):
Oh, say!
I know a splendid role for you to take,
And one that always keeps the house awake—
And calls for pretty dressing. Oh, it's great!
MAID (excitedly):
Well, well, what is it? Wherefore make me wait?
CUPID (tapping his brow thoughtfully):
How is it those lines run—oh, now I know,
You make a stately entrance—measured—slow—
To stirring music; then you kneel and say
Something about—to honor and obey—
For better and for worse—till death do part.
MAID (angrily):
Be still, you foolish boy; that is not art.
CUPID (seriously):
She needs great skill who takes the role of wife
In God's stupendous drama, human life
MAID (suddenly becoming serious):
So once I thought! Oh, once my very soul
Was filled and thrilled with dreaming of that role.
Life seemed so wonderful; it held for me
No purpose, no ambition, but to be Loving and loved. My highest thoughts of fame
Was some day bearing my dear lover's name.
Alone, I oftimes uttered it aloud.
Or wrote it down, half timid, and all proud
To see myself lost utterly in him,
As some small star might joy in growing dim
When sinking in the sun; or as the dew,
Forgetting the brief litt e life it knew
In space, might on the ocean's bosom fall
And ask for nothing—only to give all.
CUPID (aside):
Now, that's the talk—It's music to my ear
After that stuff on "art" and a "career."
I hope she'll keep it up.
MAID (continuing her reverie):
Again my dream
Shaped into changing pictures. I would seem
To see myself in beautiful array
Move down the aisle upon my wedding day;
And then I saw the modest living room
With lighted lamp, and fragrant plants in bloom,
And books and sewing scattered all about,
And just we two alone
CUPID (in glee, aside)
There is no doubt
I'll land her yet!
MAIDEN:
My dream kaleidoscope
Changed still again, and framed love's dearest hope—
The trinity of home; and life was good
And all its deepest meaning understood.
(It is lost in a dream. Behind scenes a voice sings a lullaby, "Beautiful Land of Nod." Cupid in ecstasy lip-reads about and claps his hands in delight.)
Another scene! A matron in her prime,
I saw myself glide peacefully with time
Into the quiet middle years, content
With simple joys the dear home circle lent.
My sons and daughters make my diadem;
I saw my happy youth renewed in them.
The pain of growing old lost al. its sting.
For Love stood near—in Winter, as in Spring.
(Cupid tiptoes to door and makes a signal. Maiden starts up dramatically.)
'Twas but a dream! I woke all suddenly.
The world had changed! And now life seems to me
My art—the stage—excitement and the crowd—
The g are of many footlights—and the loud
Applause of men, as I cry in rage,
"Give me the dagger!" or creep down the side
In that sleep-walking scene Oh, art like mine
Will send the chills down every listener's spine!
And when I choose, sa t tears shall freely flow
As in the moonlight I cry, "Romeo! Romeo!
Oh, wherefore art thou, Romeo?"
Ay, 'tis done
My dream of home life
CUPID:
It is but begun.
MAIDEN:
The heart but once can dream a dream so fair.
And so henceforth love thoughts I do forswear;
Since faith in love has crumbled to the dust,
In fame alone, I put my hope and trust.
(Cupid, at the door, beckons excitedly. Enter lover with outstretched arms.)
CUPID:
Here's one who will explain yourself to you
And make that old sweet dream of love come true
Fix up your foolish quarrel; time is brief—
So waste no more of it in doubt and grief.
(The lovers meet and embrace.)
CUPID (to doorway):
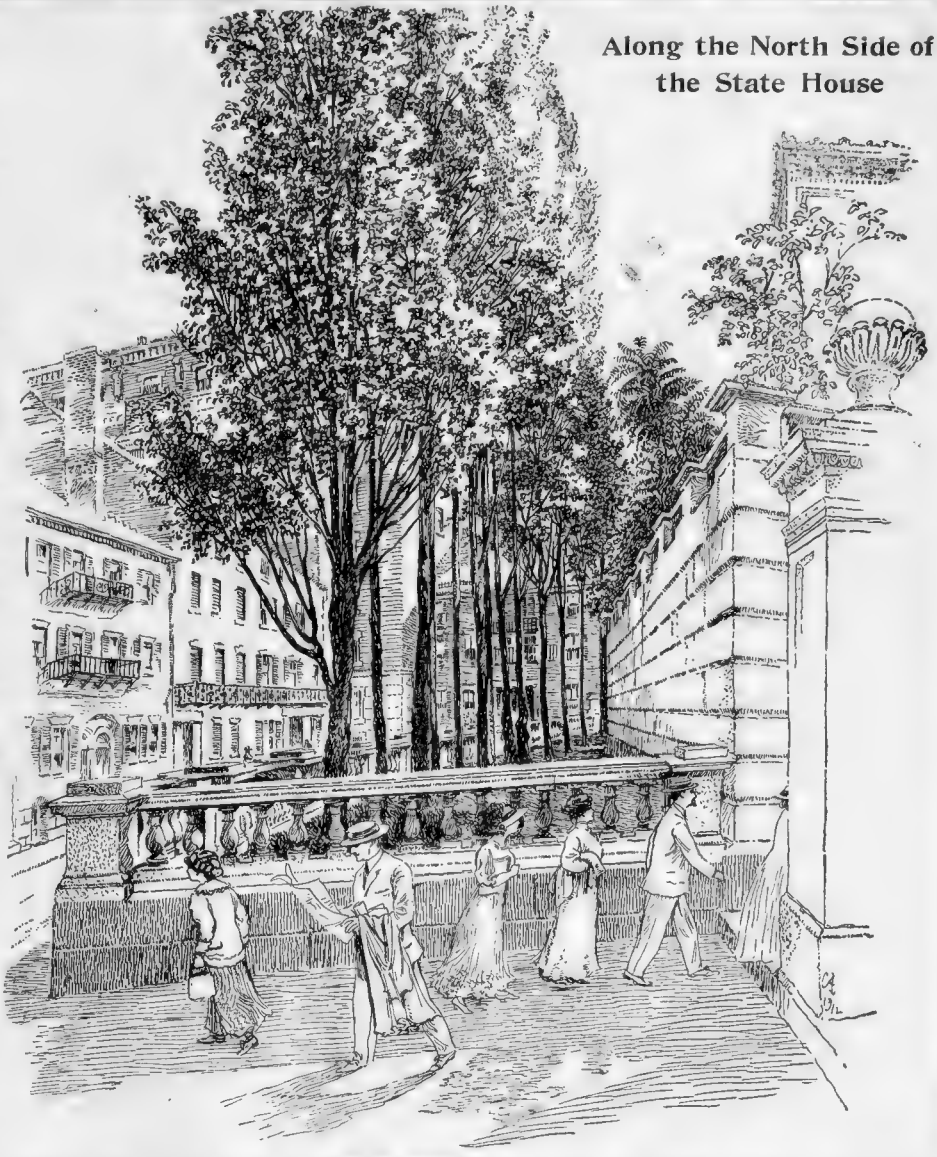
Warm lip to lip, and heart to beating heart,
The cast is made—My Lady has her part.
(CURTAIN.)

HISTORIC SPOTS ON BEACON HILL

By DR. SAMUEL ABBOTT GREEN.

Ex-Mayor of Boston and Librarian of the Massachusetts Historical Society

Along the North Side of the State House



TO walk around the environs of our State House is to travel over ground almost every foot of which is consecrated to the most delightful association.

From Beacon street to Joy street and around by Mt. Vernon and Chestnut streets, through Walnut and Somerset and Pinckney streets and Louisburg square and all the other good old thoroughfares of this respected section of the city, one may walk in leisure for more than one hour on any Spring or Autumn afternoon and find almost upon every corner and in nearly every house, something to fill one's mind with respectful thoughts for the men and women and the times of which those places are memorials.

In this neighborhood is the birthplace of Wendell Phillips. Our great orator was born at the corner of Walnut and Beacon streets. His father was Boston's first Mayor.

The Copley estate was a familiar feature of early Boston. It lay between the Common, Walnut street, Louisburg square, Pinckney street and what is now Charles street, extending down to the waterfront.

John Singleton Copley had a son who, although he was born here in 1772, grew up in London and became Lord Chancellor. When he died, in 1863, he was the senior of the then peerage.

Harrison Gray Otis, Prescott, the historian; Richard H. Dana, author of that boys' delight, "Two Years Before the Mast"; Francis Parkman, John C. Ropes, the famous military writer; Margaret Deland, Sarah Orne Jewett, Edwin Booth, the tragedian, all lived in this locality.

Indeed to attempt to name all our eminent citizens who resided here would be to write a list of those who constituted the culture and distinction of the city.

The gilded dome of the State House is a great Boston landmark. It was our own Oliver Wendell Holmes who said:

"A man can see further from the top of Boston State House and see more that is worth seeing than from all the pyramids and turrets and steeples in all the places in the world."

Even the narrow, hilly streets which lead down from the rear of the State House towards the well-known business thoroughfares of the West End are, each of them, interesting, presenting to our American eyes just a little bit of old-fashioned Europe.

As one stands on the State House steps which appear in this picture it is possible on a clear day to get a splendid view of the upper harbor and of the country which lies beyond the Charlestown district. All around are to be observed signs of the city's great development and activity, and rising silently above the roar of business traffic one can observe Bunker Hill Monument, telling to all generations the story of the great part played by Massachusetts in the American revolution.

HOW NEW ENGLAND WOMEN EARN MONEY AT HOME

I HAVE had a great many letters—some of them I am giving you below—by women who have added to their incomes by taking into their own homes, to be playmates of their little ones, and children to them in all but name, some of the little charges of the State—tiny children who had never known a mother's care, or had lost it when they were too young to know their grief.

There is a valuable suggestion here, but it is one that must be greatly qualified. Children are obtained to board either from the State Board of Charities or in some cases from private orphan asylums, usually under denominational control. In no case, however, will a child be given out without strictest investigation

It goes without saying that the children must be cared for as your own, kept in proper surroundings, well dressed and fed—and loved. Most institutions will have them visited frequently, and all will send someone to see you before considering your application.

If you are willing to comply with these conditions, and if you are childless, or your children are grown, or your blessed principle is "the more the merrier," then here is a way to earn quite a little income, and at the same time to do a real act of kindness to those who sorely need it.

Here is what those have to say who have tried it Takes Little Boarder.

I AM sending this letter to tell how I make a little extra money. I have three children of my own. But I take care of another little girl, six years old. She stays with me all the time, so I really seem like one of my own, and her board is quite a help, as my husband makes small pa;

Earns $10 a Month.

I HAVE a way in which I learn $10 a month I care for a little boy, which I think is a very nice way to earn a little extra money and be able to stay at home. We have no children, and it makes us happy and cheerful, makes the house so much more pleasant. I don't mind the care of him as much as I enjoy his company. This is a nice way to earn some money and also makes a home for a child.

The Care of Babies.

I am a widow and a grandmother of five. My way of earning money for myself is taking babies to board from the baby hospital, and as I love children it is a pleasure to work and care for them, and my check comes every month. I live with my son, or rather he lives with me and pays the rent and running expenses for the home, and with the money which I receive I buy my clothes and pay the expenses of the babies which is mostly the extra milk which I get for them. I tried crocheting for a knitting firm and also made lace curtains, but they were too confining and not enough money for the time consumed in making them. I think if more women would take these babies and give them good care, even if they have children of their own, it would be better and more profitable than sewing for shops and spoiling their eyes.

Makes Home Happier.

MY husband works hard, and as the cost of living is very high I try to help, as I am boarding a dear little baby girl at $4 per week. I do not care much for tramping the streets for pleasure, so I work at home. It is much more pleasure and profits. I have the dear little baby and she loves me. It is so nice to be a mother. I am the mother of three but I still long for more Brings Real Sunshine.

I TAKE children to board, having no children of my own. I thought I would like to make a home for some of the many hundreds of children who are in need of a mother's care. I have four of them. I would not part with them for anything. I get quite a little in, me and I also feel that I am doing a good work of charity. I hope this letter will be of some help to some women who are ambitious to put their time to advantage

Cares for Little Ones.

I HAVE been an admirer of the Boston AMERICAN for some time, it gives me great pleasure to read what women are doing at home. I have four little girls to care for which takes all my time, but I do want to tell you what a friend of mine has done to keep out the earnings of a sickly husband. She was a lover of children but had none of her own. She had a very beautiful home, and took State children to board. She preferred young children under three years of age and of course, there was money in taking them. I have known her to have seven at one time. She found a girl who had no parents and wanted a home. She was fourteen years old, when I knew her first, and a girl who certainly did appreciate a good home. She boarded and clothed her and gave her one dollar a week besides a good many presents.

This girl was a good little worker and loved my friend dearly. After children were all bathed and dressed in the morning there was the very large room which was used as a nursery. The girl would amuse the children there while my friend did their washing and tidied her house, which was always immaculately clean. She had a beautiful backyard and in the Summer the children played a there. In the Winter afternoons the ones that were large enough were taken for a walk. My friend took as much interest in those children as if she was their own mother. When they needed clothes she bought the goods and made them up, of course she was paid by the state, and as she was a graduate nurse they were very glad to place the children in her care. She had one that was found on a door step when it was about two weeks old, and it was certainly wonderful the way this little one thrived under her care. Being a good dietitian she took pleasure in bringing sunshine into many lives and besides earned quite a penny for herself. I think she was paid $2.50 a week for all under three years and she did not have any more than. Hoping this will be a help for some other reader. JENNIE B. NIXON

Help the Friendless

PREVIOUS to my marriage I did dressmaking, but now as I have three children I cannot go out to work by the day, and as I have no one to leave them with I cannot do anything for them. I am very fond of children and would like to have some to keep. I live in a small house of my own and have a nice home for them. I am a widow and have been for the past three years. I have a boy and girl of my own, with an own child I find I have room for no more. I am quite a lover of children and would like to have some to keep. I have a boy and girl of my own, with an own child I find I have room for no more. I am quite a lover of children and would like to have some to keep.

The little ones can be obtained by writing to the State Board of Charities, State House. If they cannot all your application they will direct you to some other institution that may. Hoping my suggestions may aid those in their own home

The Mark of the Maker

By OLIVER MITCHELL, Esq., of the Boston Bar.

Mr. Mitchell is one of the leading authorities on trade marks, trade names and unfair competition. This is the first of a series of articles by Mr. Mitchell explaining the use and misuse of trade marks and labels.

THE people of the United States have within the past few years made a great investment in the establishment of pure food laws, compelling manufacturers to label their goods and to state upon the label the essential facts, which will enable a purchaser to protect himself against doubtful articles. It has cost much to achieve this result, and now the Department of Agriculture is conducting a campaign of education to induce buyers to read the labels and thus make use of the protection the law provides as a guaranty of healthy.

There is another matter connected with labels and packages as to which a little educational effort seems worth while, namely, the matter of labels, marks and other identifying means upon the goods we purchase daily as a guaranty of quality and value and incidentally a little exposition of some of the ways and means of the substitutor—the villain of the piece.

Substitutors are retail dealers who practice the gentle art of giving their customers something other than that asked for, for a consideration in most cases of extra profit, and in most cases it is certainly true that the extra profit is made at the expense of the customer in the matter of quality and money's worth and at the expense of some manufacturer in the matter of lost trade.

The evil is widespread and the success of the substitutor is largely due to two facts: Either the customer has not taken the trouble to familiarize himself with the marks and identity of the goods he wants or, being familiar, he is deceived by an article made to imitate the genuine goods so closely that only a strict examination could detect the difference. Either way it would seem as if the customer was bound to get the short end. But it is only a seeming Evil of Substitution.

Given a purchaser who knows the goods he wants by sight, he may rest assured that he won't be fooled many times by a cheap imitation before the manufacturer, backed up by the law, will stop the graft at the fountain head, i. e., the manufacturer who puts the imitation into the substituting dealer's hands. All that quality protection calls for is that the buyer use his eyes when he buys.

To check this evil of substitution, manufacturing concerns, makers of standard goods and quality, take very simple, but efficient steps, to make substitution as difficult, risky and unprofitable as may be, by applying marks and other identifying means to their goods, visible at a glance, which the customer may learn to know and may rely on, and imitation of which gives the manufacturer a sure hold on the imitator and those who handle the imitation product. It is a fact, as the Department of Agriculture has discovered, that few buyers trouble themselves to read labels.

What is a trade mark and how is it acquired? A trade mark is a word, sign or symbol placed upon goods on sale in the market to serve as a means of identification to the purchaser and as a guaranty of genuineness; a thing easily seen and recognized when the goods are shown or delivered to the purchaser.

As Judge Duer said in a leading American case: "The manufacturer's trade mark is an assurance to the public of the quality of his goods, and a pledge of his own integrity in their manufacture." Judge Taft in a later case compared a manufacturer's trade mark to his "sign manual" to guarantee that the article is of his manufacture, while the Supreme Court of the United States says that a trade mark is equivalent to the signature of the merchant that the article possesses a certain degree of excellence.

Consider this view of a trade mark as an identifying means and for the customer, a guaranty. It is obviously an important matter for both ends of the transaction. No manufacturer of a poor article cares to mark it for easy recognition for, if he does, the poor quality of the article will soon make itself known and the mark identifying it, instead of creating confidence and showing purchasers what to buy, will serve, on sight, as a warning and direction what not to buy.

And for this reason, inferior goods are commonly either dressed to imitate some well-liked article of their kind or else marketed in some style not distinctive enough to be noted.

This being so, it would seem that every manufacturer who puts out an article of quality owes it to himself and to his customers to identify it and guarantee it by some easily recognizable indicia and that goods which are put out without any distinctive mark may reasonably be regarded by the consumer with suspicion as goods which the maker is disinclined to guarantee.

Protects Customers.

In the English speaking countries the acquirement of trade mark rights depends upon nothing more difficult than the mere act of adoption of a proper mark and its use in trade for a reasonable time. Obviously, when a trade mark has been acquired by adoption and use it is advisable to register it in the patent office, but this registration does not confer the right, it merely records it and is an easy means of record proof of the existence of the trade mark, giving a prima facie title.

The manufacturers will note that the acquirement of a valid trade mark right by adoption and use is conditioned upon its being a proper mark, that is, the mark must not be so like one already in use upon the same class of goods as to be likely to be mistaken therefor, nor must it be a mere description of the article, which others have, obviously, a right also to use as a description.

A manufacturer of prints and calicoes, for example, might gain trade mark rights in a certain word, notwithstanding that word was already in use as trade mark for medicine or in some other line of business, absolutely distinct from prints and calicoes, but the manufacturer of calicoes cannot adopt as a trade mark a word already in use for cotton cloth.

The two things are too much alike. On the other hand, such a mark as "Dessicated Codfish" upon an article which it absolutely describes should not be protected as the exclusive right of one person since others may have an honest necessity to use the words in labelling and marketing such goods.

But, given a proper trade mark adopted, a manufacturer's rights and the customer's protection begin just as soon as the mark is used upon goods, so that there is no vestige of excuse for any manufacturer who is willing to guarantee for not distinctively marking his goods either by the ordinary trade mark work or symbol, or by other matters connected with the article, by which buyers may identify it, such as the shape, arrangement and color of labels and the color scheme of wrappers and other extrinsic appearances, which often are more potent in the eyes of purchasers than the ordinary trade mark.

RARE RECIPES FOR MINCE PIES IN PRIZE CONTEST

$25.00 IN PRIZES FOR BEST RECIPES FOR MINCE PIES

The Sunday AMERICAN offers $25 in cash prizes to New England women for their mince pie recipes.

The prizes are

First prize $10.

Fifteen prizes of $1 each.

The only conditions to this contest are that you write plainly on one side of paper only and address carefully to

PURE FOOD EDITOR,
Boston Sunday American,
80 Summer St., Boston, [redacted]

The contest closes next Saturday at noon and the prize winners will be announced in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

DID anybody in England, or anywhere else, for that matter, ever hear of an honest-to-goodness Thanksgiving dinner that didn't have a nice, juicy mince pie?

Naturally, with the approach of the great day of days, mince pies and recipes for their making are of prime interest, and the Boston AMERICAN is being flooded with recipes since the offer of prizes totalling $25 for the best.

The winning recipes will be printed in the Sunday AMERICAN of Sunday, November 24th, and the winners will have their prizes in time for the holiday.

So if you have a good recipe send it along—you may win the prize—anyway, everybody's doing it, and you can't afford to be out of the running. Write your best recipe on one side of the paper only and address plainly to Pure Food Editor, Boston Sunday AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

Here are some of the recipes received to date

Mrs. Whittier Uses Corned Beef.

Here is the way I make my mince pies: I take corned beef, boiled; chop up my beef after it is done, then chop my apples. Take two cups of chopped apples to one of meat, then put on stove to cook. Put in vinegar, raisins, salt and cinnamon—of course use your own judgment, according to how much you make. I keep tasting it as it cooks to get the right flavor. I put part molasses and part sugar. When I put it in the pie crust I put a little nutmeg on—just sprinkle it on. Now the pie crust: I take to 1 quart of flour 5 even tablespoons lard, ½ teaspoon soda. Mix with hands to get it all together. Then use about 1½ tumblers water—have it little soft. Then flour board and roll. If you could taste of mine you would say they were good. A dyspeptic can eat them.

MRS. E. O. WHITTIER,
No. 478 Chatham street, Lynn.

Just Imagine! Cranberries.

Boston Sunday AMERICAN.

Here is my recipe for mince pie: Four pounds fresh beef, boiled tender, when cold chop fine, ½ pound beef suet chopped fine, 5 pounds sour apples chopped fine, 1 pound seeded raisins, 1 pound currants, ½ pound citron chopped fine, 1 quart cranberries, 2 cups of meat liquor, 1 pint of cider vinegar, 1 pint of molasses, 2 pounds brown sugar, a little salt, 1 level tablespoon each allspices, cinnamon and cloves, 1 nutmeg grated; seal all together, put it away in a covered jar in a cool place.

Pie crust—Two cups flour, ½ cup lard, ½ cup butter cut through the flour, ½ teaspoon salt and a little sugar and just a little baking powder, mix with cold water, just stiff enough to roll on board; enough for two pies.

Dr. Wiley Doesn't Approve of Coffee.

Six bowls chopped apple, 3 bowls chopped cooked meat, 3 bowls sugar, 1 bowl molasses, 1 bowl boiled cider, 1 bowl strong coffee, all of liquor and fat of meats, 1 dessertspoon each of ginger, cloves, cinnamon, allspice and mace, 1 grated nutmeg, [illegible] of one lemon, 1 bowl currants, 1 bowl raisins, a little candied orange and lemon peel cut fine. Cook slowly till well blended. Grate fresh suet over the pie before placing top crust; brush top crust with milk.

"The Business of Life"

A Romance of Modern Society

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

Illustrated by CHARLES DANA GIBSON

EACH ONE of Robert W. Chambers' stories has been stronger than the one preceding it. Each has dealt more frankly and fearlessly with the real problems of modern society. His steady development is as remarkable as the instantaneous success with which his successive novels have been received by the entire English reading public.

"The Business of Life" will hold you spellbound from the opening chapter. The first scene, between Desboro and the wife of his friend, will make you catch your breath.

And your interest in Desboro's character will deepen, as you read of his meeting with the dainty little daughter of the old curio dealer, and of how he prolonged his business call to the utmost limit of good breeding.

There is no doubt of what will follow: his life and the lives of these two women, of totally different mental, moral and spiritual natures, will soon be intermingled in a tangled skein.

OPERA MEANT TO ENTERTAIN RATHER THAN EDUCATE

W. L. Hubbard Delivers Lecture on Opera That Is Really Interesting.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

THE other day I attended a lecture on opera by W. L. Hubbard, the learned and impressive publicity manager of the Boston Opera. Mr. Hubbard co... to Boston from the musical desk of the Chicago Tribune and ... musical critic is well know...

Now a lecture on opera ... my idea of entertainment, recreation or diversion. I can obtain a goodly portion of enjoyment from a performance, but d liver me from a talk upon its educational value, its technical side, its ... the human race and all that sort of thing.

So I was pleased to discover that Mr. Hubbard doesn't go in for that kind of a lecture at all. He makes it very plain when he begins that he doesn't believe in lectures on opera, but since there is a public that has to approach that form of amusement through a process of uplift, he is accommodating. But his lecture is a separate entertainment. He tells about the composer, narrates some interesting episode of his life and relates the history of the legend or tale upon which the opera is based. Most operas are based on stories that are bearded with age.

He doesn't talk about opera as an educator, at all, and he hasn't discovered that it offers any message to humanity. He has collected a great amount of attractive matter about "Tales of Hoffman," for example, information which could be discovered by lots of us if we delved into biographies and encyclopedias ...

Mr. Hubbard is ... a pianist and an opera singer who illustrate places that cannot be described in talk. If this lecture were well advertised and high prices collected, I think there would be a fortune in it.

... it is free, the attendance is seldom very large and various women's clubs and similar organizations are gobbling it up.

Mr. Hubbard doesn't believe very much in the educational value of opera. Neither do I, but Oscar Hammerstein does. Oscar is now endeavoring to construct a chain of opera houses in forty American cities, and he has circularized such places as Providence, Worcester, Hartford and Bridgeport.

The Hammerstein proclamation is full of educational dope. I will believe it, if Oscar succeeds in establishing permanent opera in Worcester or Hartford, not otherwise.

After All, Opera Is Only an Entertainment.

Actually much harm is done to opera by this educational talk. Opera is primarily amusement. It is high class, and because of the character of the singers is intensely pleasureable.

As an art form it is not to be considered with symphony or even oratorio. It is in process of transition, just now, from what it was to what it is going to be.

Opera may evolve itself back to drama where it started, or it may go on to some perfect product of which we have no suspicion at present.

The best way to interest the general public in grand opera is to impress upon everybody that it is only an entertainment, and that no special training or education is necessary to understand it.

... works in the grand opera repertory are no more high class than the "Merry Widow."

In fact, a music ... will find much more to please him in the score of the "Merry Widow" than in many of the older operas in the repertory.

Take this same "Tales of Hoffman" which is being lectured about by Mr. Hubbard. The composer, Jacques Offenbach, was a man who all his life wrote light opera, the sort of music that we hear at our theatres and don't consider educational at all.

He wrote "The Grand Duchess," "Orpheus aux Enfers," selections from which are played every night in every table d'hote restaurant in Boston, and numerous others. But Offenbach yearned to write a grand opera and before he died he did so. He selected a more serious story: the fantastic tales of the poet Hoffman, and wrote music to it. But Offenbach was a comic opera composer and he could write nothing else. Despite its story, "Tales of Hoffman" is a comic opera, and if it were not that he shrewdly wrote his melodies for the voices in such a way that they were too hard for ordinary comic opera singers, it never would have worked into the grand opera repertory.

Highbrow Critics Much to Blame.

Among the operas which frequently appear upon the grand opera stage are "The Barber of Seville," "The Bohemian Girl," "Martha," "Don Pasquale," "Daughter of the Regiment" and others.

The melodies of some of these are immortal, they are as fresh after a hundred years as upon the day they were written, but judged from the character of their orchestration they compare very unfavorably with "The Merry Widow," "Chocolate Soldier," "The Dollar Princess" and other Viennese importations that have secured the approval of the tired business man.

At present not more than two or three per cent of the total population of an American city attends grand opera. If we wish to increase this proportion we must cease to talk education, assassinate a few highbrow critics who write columns of formidable nonsense about "The Barber of Seville" and sing our operas in English so everybody can understand what they are about.

Marie Gay Now an English Contralto.

Speaking of ... in English, the well known French contralto, Maria Gay, has now become an English contralto. She has carried along with her the celebrated French tenor, Giovanni Zenatello, who is now an English tenor, and the two are going to be the features of the Boston Opera performance of "Martha" in English.

Gay and Zenatello are nice people. If all singers were like them an opera ... would be a happy man. All that Mr. and Mrs. Zenatello want is the money, and they don't mind in the least working to get it.

When Maria and Giovanni came to Boston they were typical singers of the Italian school. Henry Russell had in mind the establishment of French opera in Boston, and Maria and Giovanni went to work ... French opera ... comparatively easy for Maria, who knew the French language, but Zenatello had a hard time.

He succeeded, however and his Samson in "Samson et Dalila" was truly memorable.

Now they have attacked the English language with enthusiasm. Both speak English pretty well, and both look forward to "Martha." So do opera goers, for at last we are to hear a great tenor sing "The Last Rose of Summer" in English.

The last tenor to sing in "Martha" in Boston was Bonci, while Louise Homer sang Nancy, the part to be taken by Madame Gay.

Maria is very refreshing to talk to. When I met her during a flying visit to Boston I said jokingly, "Ah, Madame Gay, the famous French contralto."

"Ah," laughed Maria, making a playful pelt at me that would have been a knockout had it landed. "You think you are funny. I am the great English contralto this year, and in Russia I am the Russian contralto, and in Germany the German contralto. I sing all the languages.

"Some day I will go to Japan and be the Japanese contralto."

And they say that foreign artists will not learn our language so that we cannot have opera in English. Bosh, pish and tush.

REGER'S CONCERTO IN ANCIENT STYLE

Dr. Muck to Present First of His Promised Symphony Novelties This Week.

The Symphony concerts of this week bring the first novelty of the year, which Dr. Muck promised on his arrival in America. This is Reger's Concerto in Ancient Style for Full Orchestra. In this Reger has sought to embody modern musical thought in the form used by Bach. The work is in three movements and ...

The Concerto in Ancient Style is his opus 123. It had its first performance in Frankfort-on-Main last month, at one of the Museum's concerts, with Mengelberg ... Judging from accounts which have been received concerning it, it contains little to excite the heated discussions which have attended the first performances of his earlier works. The middle movement ... particular has been raised as being of very uncommon ... beauty. The part of the solo ... of course be played by Mr. ... the concert master of the orchestra.

... important with the performance of the Reger Concerto will be the only ... this season of Fritz Kreisler, the distinguished violinist, who is to play the Beethoven Concerto. As is generally known, Mr. Kreisler comes to America under an exclusive and limited contract with the Symphony Orchestra. He will be in this country only a few weeks, and is to play at several concerts with the orchestra and in addition will play once or twice in the middle West. It had been intended at first that he should give a recital here, but he has sent word to Mr. Ellis that he prefers to limit his work this year entirely to orchestral performances.

The program as made by Dr. Muck begins with the Reger Concerto, which will be the first part. The second part will consist of the Beethoven Concerto for violin, played by Mr. Kneisel, and Beethoven's "Leonora" overture, No. 3.

TO GIVE HARP RECITAL.

Special Numbers to Be Played by Miss Martin.

A harp recital is of uncommon interest to music lovers, because harp virtuosi are small in number and compositions for the harp are not appreciated in their full beauty. Miss Edith Martin, who will appear in Steinert Hall tomorrow afternoon, has selected a program ... written especially for the harp ... Fuchs, Ruta ... and others adapted for performance on it. Howard White, 'cellist, and Carl Lamson will assist the noted artist.

BERTHALD'S PROGRAM.

Operatic Tenor to Be Heard Tomorrow.

Barron Berthald, the operatic tenor, announces a program for his coming song recital in Steinert Hall on November 18. Unlike most programs issued by operatic singers, in place of operatic arias he is substituted "Lieder" and modern songs by American and foreign composers. Chadwick, Hadley, Parker, Campbell-Tipton, Strauss, Cornelius, Hugo Wolf, Delbrouck and Hahn are among the names of those who furnish the songs for his endeavors while the only operatic touch is furnished by Wagner, who is represented by two arias from the "Walkure." Adolph ... of New York will play the accompaniments as also several solos by Brahms and Chopin.

PLAYS ON SCHEDULE OF BOSTON THEATRES

Dazzling Array of Entertainers Coming After Six Months in New York.

Shubert Theatre.

With a dazzling array of musical comedy stars, reinforced by a mammoth aggregation of feminine beauty and minor talent, the Winter Garden company, direct from its six months' engagement in New York, opens to the Shubert Theatre tomorrow night.

"The Passing Show of 1912" is the first of two remarkable Winter Garden series to have New York talent. Only he must Lee-Shubert and Messrs. Hoffmann and Jolson, "Broadway to Paris" have made such a pronounced success in the present instance that it might have been necessary to draft some of the popular stars of "The Passing Show of 1912" to make up the new cast. As it is, the Winter Garden company and Miss Hoffmann just exchange their stars each to enjoy new and discriminating audiences.

The fundamental appeal of the forthcoming attraction is its extraordinary magnitude in its wide range and generous scale. For one admission, the choicest fruits of the amusement world are exhibited in their respective mode. A clean-cut and pointed travesty on many of the greatest dramatic successes of the decade are exploited, from making up an evening's entertainment from the broad field of dramatic art interspersed with periodical moments of melodic tunefulness, the whole being structured with the alchemy of glorious feminine loveliness.

Hollis Street Theatre.

At the Hollis Street Theatre tomorrow night Charles Frohman will present a play that is new to this city, but one which has scored an international success. The play is "Passers-By", a comedy in four acts by C Haddon Chambers, who has a number of successful plays to his credit, among them "The Tyranny of Tears" and "Captain Swift." It is said however, that "Passers-By" is the most delightful play that Chambers has yet written and that it is one of the distinct novelties in playwriting the stage has seen in years. The star of the production is Charles Cherry, who is in his first stellar season under the direction of Charles Frohman, and it is said that this role has never been better fitted with a role than that of Peter Waverton, the hero of "Passers-By."

Gaiety Theatre.

With all the brilliancy and snap that characterizes all of Joe Hurtig's shows, the "Bowery Burlesquers" production will be greatly enjoyed by the patrons of the Gaiety Theatre this week, commencing tomorrow afternoon. Joe Hurtig undoubtedly has the gift of knowing just what constitutes a great burlesque show. In such matters as scenery and costumes no better equipments are seen on any stage along Broadway, and exhibitions of skilful stage management are invariably present in a Hurtig production. In the selection of the "Bowery's" cast, rare good judgment has been shown, and the chorus is composed of girls who are not alone youthful and pretty, but who possess just the right chic and vivacity for a burlesque performance. Having now provided with musical numbers of the kind that keep an audience enlivened and highly entertained, the work of these girls is perfection itself.

Castle Square Theatre.

"Madam X" is a play that invariably succeeds, and it is making the hit of the season at the Castle Square. Throngs have witnessed it during the past week, the theatre has been packed to the doors at every performance, and thousands have been turned away in their efforts to obtain seats.

Therefore John Craig has been compelled to change plans, and to announce that Madame X will begin its second week at the Castle Square stage Monday. The play contributes to the success of the piece, and especially the acting of Mary Young, in the title role. It is strongly emotional, but it is extraordinarily human and real, and it foresees the attention of the audience to the very end of the great trial scene in which the action of the play culminates.

With Donald Meek as the son, Wilson Melrose as the husband, John Craig as the friend, Walter Walker as the rascally lawyer, and Barney Chrisite as the doctor, "Madame X" has a cast of unusual excellence at the Castle Square.

St. James Theatre.

William Vaughn Moody's "The Great Divide," will be the offering at the St. James this week, with matinees on every day excepting Monday. Up to last week the St. James company has played no popular drama, but such popular demand makes a matinee on that day necessary and Mr. Thomas cannot disregard the imperative demands of his patrons. "The Great Divide" tells the story of a woman of the East and a man of the West and the conflict between their two natures, which is expressed in the play's absorbing narrative which holds the attention of the audience for over two hours. When Henry Miller and Margaret Anglin first produced this play it proved a complete triumph and has since held on all over the country. It appeals to all, for strongest because its characters are strong types of American men and women. The company, headed by Beth Franklyn and Theodore Friebus who will play the roles of Ruth Jordan and her rough Western lover, are cast in congenial roles.

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

Without question, the most notable novelty ever brought to this country by B. F. Keith for his vaudeville circuit will be seen at B. F. Keith's Theatre in Boston this week, in "Don," the marvelous talking dog from Germany. Unlike many other so-called talking animals previously seen upon the stage, Don actually speaks words like a human being. Another big feature of the week will be the Great Ellis Family, Europe's most finished troupe of equestrians, who appear in a startling novelty, introducing several beautiful, schooled horses. Sherman, Van and Hyman are a trio of young men who introduce what they call "Fifteen Minutes of Musical Foolishness," and another big feature will be McIntyre and Groves, in their ludicrous sidewalk chat, "On Fifth ave Train."

Majestic Theatre.

An extra matinee last Thursday was necessary for "The Merry Widow" at the Majestic Theatre to satisfy the demands of the public. The new production which Henry W. Savage is offering has proved the best version of the famous operetta which he has yet given. Boston is true to her old favorites, and Mabel Wilber as Sonia, Charles Meakins as Prince Danilo, Oscar Figman as Poppoff and the many others who have played here in Mr. Savage's companies before have met with a warm reception.

Globe Theatre.

There will be real variety in the Globe program for the week beginning tomorrow with "Camping Days," a big musical comedy feature; Silbeal and Grovani, a duo of European novelty artists; the Oriole Trio, Gus Edwards Sextette, Irene LaTour and "Zana," Elkin and Saunders, the Three Brownies, Ferguson and Mack, Arthur Rigby, the minstrel star; Bethlehem Brothers, Dooley and Dooley, as well as a new picture program, will amuse the Globe "regulars." The bill will be changed as usual on Thursday, with amateurs appearing on Tuesday night, and the Country Store on Wednesday and Friday nights.

New Palace Theatre.

The feature picture at the New Palace Theatre this week will be a stirring story of the France-Prussian war, in which love, caste and military excitement will be traced through the various scenes. The title of the picture is "Madeleine," and in the form that it will be seen at the Palace will doubtless prove a sensation. "Madeleine" is a monster moving picture production in four reels, employing hundreds of soldiers in its spectacular scenes. The acting of the principals is said to be the most brilliant of any seen in a moving picture. Several other new pictures and a change of programme in illustrated songs will make the bill attractive in every particular.

Colonial Theatre.

Kitty Gordon, in "The Enchantress," starts on her second week at the Colonial tomorrow evening with the rare distinction of not only having captured New York city, but has won the splendid approval of the city and that critical public gives it is plainly shown by her very charming manner on the stage at each performance, when by every action she almost by sign language expresses a "thank you."

Boston Theatre.

Clifton Crawford has an attractive musical play in "My Best Girl," with which he begins the second week of his engagement at the Boston Theatre on Monday. It is a play designed to exhibit the quaint oddities of Mr Crawford himself, and in this it is a more than excellent entertainment but, in addition, the piece has fetching songs and dances for other members of the organization so that something amusing, bright or attractive is before the audience throughout the play.

Premier Theatre.

Two extraordinary moving pictures will be shown at the Premier Theatre this week. The first will be featured tomorrow only and is called "Buckfoot's Confederate." This is a Biano film, which guarantees its faithful adherence to West ern atmosphere. The feature for the Tuesday shows will be an Ambrosio film entitled, "The Siren's Call to Duty," a story of a strike in a big factory. The picture is crowded with thrilling moments, and shows how a little girl saved a desperate situation. The pictures exhibited at the Premier are not shown in any other house in the downtown section of the city, a fact that has considerable influence on the success of the theatre.

Tremont Theatre.

Henry Miller's "The Rainbow," has established itself at the Tremont Theatre, and has piled up attendance records that have not been equalled at the Tremont for many months. Not even "The Count of Luxembourg," the biggest musical success in New York today, attracted during its Boston engagement the big attendance that has been drawn to the Tremont Theatre by Mr Miller's irrisistent success which begins its third week tomorrow night.

Park Theatre.

At the Park Theatre Rose Stahl and her company mark the beginning of the two-fifth week of their engagement with the performance tomorrow night, and they will soon celebrate the 100th performance of "Maggie Pepper." This is a record made by no other company in Boston this season, and few in other large cities have done as well. The playing for public seems not to fire of the story of the girl of the department stores. Miss Stahl's own personality so enters into the girl that it is difficult to separate the two, and for this reason the pleasure of the performance becomes more personal.

Orpheum Theatre.

The Red Rose Quartet heads the bill at the Orpheum Theatre for the forthcoming week, and has for its associates Welsh, Mealey and Montrose, novel eccentric comedy acrobats, Eldon and Clifton, in a dramatic sketch, "For Old Times' Sake"; Charles Leonard Playter, the "Human Top"; Jere Sanford, whistling and yodling comedian, Raymond and Hall, songs and dances, Mack and Mack, singing comedians, Three Gamboons, European gymnasts, and the Lorraine, beauty weight handcers.

Plymouth Theatre.

George Arliss in "Disraeli" begins the sixth week of his engagement at the Plymouth Theatre Monday. Perhaps not this season will the Boston public witness an other play which will surpass the standard of "Disraeli." Though Mr. Arliss had been absent from Boston over five years, he is now established here as much a favorite as he was a few years ago. Liebler & Co. have given him an excellent production and a company of notable players.

National Theatre.

It will be one big act after another in the new show at the National Theatre. It will be a vaudeville festival. Harry Dooley a bright young woman, will make her debut in Boston. She will be supported by her Metropolitan Minstrels, a frivolous, frolicking aggregation of juvenile entertainers. This will not be the only feature. There will be Hayden, Dunbar and Hayden who with the aid of a piano make things hum. The new bill will also offer the Apollo Trio, a troupe of Italian performers. Another novelty will be "The Reverse." The "violin girl" in this act has been a big hit all over the circuit.

Hub Theatre.

A selected list of pictures and vaudeville features will make the bill for the coming week at the Hub Theatre. This week General Pisano, the sharpshooter, will be the big a t.

STORIES OF STAGE TOLD BY PLAYERS

There Are Interesting Happenings Behind the Theater's Curtain.

Back of the curtain line of a theatre some funny things happen at times. To say the least, the men who work the scenery and the properties and the lights are "quaint." They are also very opinionated as to the relative merits of the players they have watched. Charles Cherry, who is the star of "Passers By," was called on one day before the company left New York by a young woman of society aspirations who thought that she was fitted for a stage career. Mr. Cherry pointed out to her the inadvisibility of the step she contemplated and at the same time adding, "what is particularly desired on the stage at the present time are people who know the mechanics of the stage."

Merciful heavens!" exclaimed the young woman throwing up her hands, "you don't mean to tell me, Mr. Cherry, that it is necessary for one to be an expert at intimacy with those dreadful stage hands?"

Beth Franklyn of the St. James Theatre company has played the leading woman's role in "The Great Divide" in two big productions of the play. Theodore Friebus has also played the leading masculine role in two productions of the play. Therefore when the first rehearsal of the play was called the stage manager was greatly surprised to find that Miss Franklyn and Mr. Friebus knew their lines and business perfectly. But this was not all; three other members of the company had appeared in recent revivals of the play, so they, too, knew their lines. There was little work to be done on the play and the company had lots of extra time, owing to the fact that next week the St. James company gave only a series of special matinees and no night performances.

That it is just as well to remember not to inquire too deeply into things is aptly illustrated by the story which Clifton Crawford, star of "My Best Girl," company, is now telling: "Old Aunt Sally, the highly esteemed cook in a Southern family, was frequently praised for her culinary skill, and one occasion, when a number of guests had been to dine with the family, a remark was made touching the beautiful appearance of Sally's pie, which showed a very pretty scallop on its edge. Enquiry being made as to how the old lady managed to get such an even design, Sally was summoned to the dinging room, and the question was duly put to her. The emotion of the guests may be imagined when the old lady replied: "Oh, dat's easy. I jest uses my false teeth."

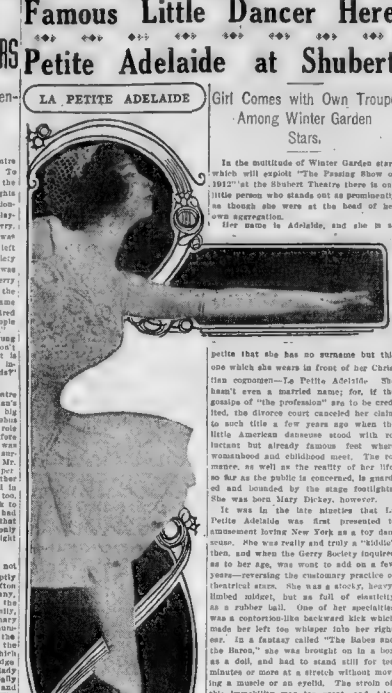
Waldron's Casino.

Cooper's "Beauty, Youth and Folly" Company will be seen at the Casino this week, when patrons of that house may look for a remarkable production of burlesque. A new two-act musical comedy called "The Blue Rose" will be presented with an entirely original score.

Grand Opera House.

"The Orientals," burlesquers will be arrived—this time with a practically new program. Only the actual coronation of King George and Queen Mary as Emperor and Empress of India will be retained. The other feats have never been shown in Boston. The claim is made by the Kinemacolor Company that the film "The Murharrum Procession and Festival" is one of the most wonderful series of pictures it has ever made. The speaker will again be Edward Freiberger.

Famous Little Dancer Here Petite Adelaide at Shubert



Girl Comes with Own Troupe Among Winter Garden Stars.

In the multitude of Winter Garden stars which will exploit "The Passing Show of 1912" at the Shubert Theatre there is one little person who stands out as prominently as though she were at the head of her own aggregation.

Her name is Adelaide, and she is so petite that she has no surname but this one which she wears in front of her Christian cognomen—La Petite Adelaide. She hasn't even a married name; for, if the gossips of "the profession" are to be credited, the divorce court canceled her claim to such title a few years ago when the little American danseuse stood with reluctant but already famous feet where womanhood and childhood meet. The romance, as well as the reality of her life so far as the public is concerned, is guarded and bounded by the stage footlights. She was born Mary Dickey, however.

It was in the late nineties that La Petite Adelaide was first presented to amusement loving New York as a toy dancer. She was really and truly a "kiddie" then, and when the Gerry Society inquired as to her age, was wont to add on a few years—reversing the customary practice of theatrical stars. She was a stocky, heavy-limbed midget, but as full of elasticity as a rubber ball. One of her specialties was a contortion-like backward kick which made her left toe whisper into her right ear. In a fantasy called "The Babes and the Hare," she was brought on in a box as a doll, and had to stand still for ten minutes or more at a stretch without moving a muscle or an eyelid. The strain of this immobility was too great, and Adelaide must have something easier, with action in it. So, when the Hippodrome opened, she tried a real starter by doing a toe dance on a horseback horse as it cantered around the circus ring. From that moment her progress upwards has been one of the real achievements in the art of dancing.

At Tremont Temple tomorrow evening "The Destiny of Kinemacolor" will be repeated—this time with a practically new program. Only the actual coronation of King George and Queen Mary as Emperor and Empress of India will be retained. The other feats have never been shown in Boston. The claim is made by the Kinemacolor Company that the film "The Murharrum Procession and Festival" is one of the most wonderful series of pictures it has ever made. STARS AT POPULAR PRICED CONCERTS Remarkable List of Soloists for the Sunday Afternoon Events.

A remarkable feature of the season at the Opera House this year will be the appearance of the stars of the company at the popular-priced concerts to be given afternoons.

These concerts will be given at the Opera House exclusively under Mr Capen, but the soloists are a remarkable list and include during the month of December, Marcoux, Garden, Vaire, Tetrazini and McCormack.

Yanni Marcoux will be soloist at the first concert. At the second Mary Garden will appear in vocal selections from "The Damned" and excerpts from Aire de Dubussy For the third concert Kreisler, the violinist, will come. Tetrazini will be heard at the fourth concert, and at the fifth Marie Gay and John McCormack will be soloists at a performance of Verdi's requiem.

The first concert of the season will take place on December 1, and will be devoted to a program of music purely Russian in origin and character. Mr Capen has chosen several compositions new to Boston, among them being an extended excerpt from the Dubussy Mysteries of Mesmerggio (the first hearing in America), the symphonic poem "Thamar" of Balakieff, the March and Dances Polovtsiennes from Borodine's "Prince Igor"; "Le Temps" and "The Song of Mephisto" from Mousorgsky's "Songs and Dances of Death" and the Rimsky Korsakoff "Scheneh Cappice." In the program Mr. Capen will have under his direction the chorus and orchestra and chorus of the Opera House, and an assisting soloist Mr. Marcoux, Mme. Chesseron, Miss Barnes and Miss von Aken.

Scenic Temple.

There will be special feature attractions next week at the Scenic Temple, including two numbers of international reputation in the photo-play extinct there will be presented several subjects decidedly new to Boston

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

THIS is a musical comedy year with the theatres. The play-going public, always fickle and impossible to understand, has decided in favor of ragtime melodies, comic specialties and crowds of girls, and the managers are straining themselves to supply what the play-going public will buy. Not only in Boston, but in all of the large cities of the country musical comedy is the entertainment that is prospering, while the legitimate dramatic offerings, in most cases, are not coming up to expectations. A few established successes in the legitimate drama are moving along and making money, but even among the established successes there are only a few that are not positive disappointments to their producers. The answer to all this is plain; the public wants spice and music in its entertainment. That was emphatically settled when the Gertrude Hoffmann show arrived at the Shubert Theatre for a two weeks' stay that was stretched into six weeks. It was also proved by the success of "The Quaker Girl," which ran for more than two months at the Colonial Theatre, and which has been followed by "The Enchantress," another success that threatens to remain for many weeks. On four different occasions the Gertrude Hoffmann show had its time at the Shubert extended to meet the demand for seats, and now that piece is to be succeeded tomorrow with another mixture of vaudeville, burlesque and merry dancing girls—"The Passing Show of 1912," which comes from the New York Winter Garden. That the managers are alive to the situation is shown in the cancellation of "Bought and Paid For," which was scheduled for a run at the Shubert. This play was the most conspicuous of last season's New York productions, yet its time at the Shubert was cancelled in order to give the Hoffmann show a chance to continue the prosperity it had found. "The Passing Show of 1912" will doubtless find the same friendly reception tomorrow night. The failure of all but a few of the dramatic offerings of the present season to draw satisfactory receipts has not been an indication of weakness on the part of the plays, but of a lack of wide public interest in anything but musical plays.

BY a peculiar twist of circumstances, or coincidence, five of the six theatrical stars now playing in Boston are English people, leaving Rose Stahl all to herself as the only American star now in local captivity. The English actor-folk are Kitty Gordon, at the Colonial, who has been showing her beautiful British back to American audiences for eight years; Henry Miller, at the Tremont, who has been in this country so long that most of his admirers have forgotten that he is English; Chiton Crawford, at the Boston, who came over from London a dozen years ago as a vaudeville performer; George Arliss, at the Plymouth, whose many years in this country have not robbed him of a pronounced English accent, and Charles Cherry, at the Hollis, who for several seasons has been convincing American playgoers that English actors can take good care of themselves in foreign lands. My word, but the drama is full of English players—eh, what? Rose Stahl has every right to feel lonesome in her Americanism this week, but it is a safe bet that she wouldn't swap her New Jersey citizenship—or whatever its feminine equivelent may be—for all of London, with Liverpool and Manchester thrown in. A census of the theatres of Boston at this moment would show rather conclusively that American money is buying food, cigars and fancy raiment for a good many English actor-people.

WITH the arrival of "The Passing Show of 1912" at the Shubert tomorrow we shall have a fair chance to see just what kind of entertainment New York prefers, for it has been the Winter Garden attraction for several months and has enjoyed a voyage that is seldom accorded a mixed musical entertainment of similar nature. "The Passing Show of 1912" is extravagant travesty, containing in burlesque form portions of the principal New York successes. Also, it may be added, its chief qualities have been arranged to suit the eye as well as the mind. As a spectacle of beautiful women in gorgeous gowns, also beautiful women in gowns that are so scant that even New Yorkers shuddered, the piece had no difficulty in holding its own against the entire field of opposition. That the New York success of this entertainment will be repeated in Boston there can be no doubt, for it is crowded from curtain to curtain with Just that style of richly spiced musical nonsense that playgoers have already exhibited many positive indications of favoring. The uplifters of the drama may scorn such efforts to amuse as those found in "The Passing Show of 1912," but the average playgoer, in large quantities, will be found as close to the footlights as it is possible to get seats.

IT is a question whether the public really appreciates the great amount of money which theatrical managers sometimes spend to make their entertainments attractive. There is a hidden item of expense in "Disraeli," for example, which means nothing to the public, but which costs $400 a week to the Liebler. The last act of "Disraeli" runs about four minutes, one of the shortest full acts ever put into a play, yet each minute of that act, I am told, costs exactly $100 a week—or $400 for the four minutes. And that is simply an extra expense for music and additional people, neither of which enters into the other three acts. On an eight weeks' engagement in this city these four minutes of entertainment will cost Liebler & Company $3,200 above the salaries and other regular operating expenses of the production. In the eighty weeks that the play has been running this means an extra expense of $32,000. It will be seen that the high cost of living enters into the making of plays if producers attempt to engage in small atmospheric details of production.

WHILE some actors, many of whom are out of work, are turning the finger of scorn toward their brothers who have safely dodged hard times by lending themselves to moving picture productions, Mrs. Fiske, the most distinguished of all American players, is calmly preparing to present herself in a moving picture production of "Becky Sharp." Inasmuch as Mrs. Fiske does not hold to any of the false notions about the dignity of her art in its relation to motion photography, it is rather difficult to understand the violence exhibited by some of the less distinguished members of the profession when the matter of motion picture acting is suggested.

Many Debutante Affairs.

Debutantes and their happy affairs are still holding their own, even though other events do crowd so alarmingly. The past week has been especially gay for the buds, and almost every day had one or more brilliant debutante events to its credit. The first was the reception which Judge and Mrs. Bosson gave at the Twilleries on Monday in honor of their daughter, Miss Pauline Bosson. On Tuesday afternoon came Mrs. Foster's reception for the Misses Foster and Aeolwall, at the Fenway home of the Fosters, and Mrs. Hubbard's reception for Miss Hubbard at her home in Bay State road; also Mrs. Bradley's for Miss Amy Bradley at the town house in Beacon street.

Wednesday had to its credit Mrs Thorndike's reception at her Commonwealth avenue home for Miss Mary Thorndike, and on the same afternoon the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Otis Potter was introduced at a reception given at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander S. Porter on Brimmer street.

Thursday was marked by Mrs. Henry Lord's tea in Brookline for Miss Lord, Mrs. Beebe's reception at the Twilleries for Miss Barbara Beebe, Mrs. George Lee's reception in Brookline for Miss Marjorie Lee and Mrs. Walter Badger's in Cambridge. On Friday there was Mrs. Sears Ramsay's reception at the Copley Plaza and Mrs. Galen Stone's in Brookline.

The only two debutante dances of importance were Mrs. Robert H. Gardiner's for Miss Lucy Aspinwall and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Peabody's at the Milton Town Hall for Miss Sylvia Peabody, the youngest daughter.

Mrs. Gaston's Dinner.

Among the debutante events yet to come is Mrs. William A. Gaston's dinner of twenty covers which she is to give at her home in Bay State road in honor of her daughter, Ruth, on Monday, the 25th, before Dr. and Mrs. Augustus Thorndike's ball at the Copley Plaza. Mrs Gaston is to give an other dinner on the evening of December 4, before Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Webster's ball, which is also to take place at the Copley Plaza. Mr. and Mrs. Gaston are also planning a large White Mountain party from the 14th of February to the 17th, the week-end in the mountains giving their young guests an opportunity to enjoy the Winter sports there.

On Wednesday of the coming week Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Dalton are to present their daughter, Miss Edith Holder, at a reception at their home in Elmwood avenue, Cambridge.

Mrs. Royal Robbins has issued cards for the reception which she is to give for her daughter, Miss Thurlea Robbins on December 4, at the Carlton street house in Longwood.

A notable debutante affair will be the dance which Miss Adele Thayer is to give at the Twilleries on Wednesday in honor of Miss Sarah Winslow daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Winslow who has just returned with her parents from a Summer abroad.

Concert Aids Nursery.

The Boston Nursery for Blind Babies was benefited by a concert held on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Roland Gage Hopkins on Crafts road, Chestnut Hill. The artists were Mlle. Ernestine Gonthier, the new mezzo contralto, and Georgs Copeland. The affair was a decided success.

The members of the skating club are looking gaxiously forward to their first meeting of the season, which will be on Thursday afternoon of the coming week at the Arena. The meeting of the club will be on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons throughout the season

Since last season the club has been incorporated with the following board of governors: George Atkinson, Jr., A. Winsor Weld, Aaron Davis, Arthur Drinkwater, Dr. Harold W. Baker Dr. J. Collins Warren, Charles L. Barlow and Brooks Frothingham

Several exhibitions have been planned by the club and this season Herr George and Fraulein Elsbeth Muller will be the instructors. This well-known brother and sister, who are now on their way to Boston, have been a great attraction at the Berliner Eis-Palast and are pronounced by competent authority to be the best exhibition pair skaters in Europe

One of the all-important charity events of the near future will be the Christmas sale of the Episcopal City Mission, to be held at Trinity Parish House on Thursday, November 21, from 10 to 6.

There are to be special features this year for the children, including a Punch and Judy show at 2.15, 4 and 4.45, the tickets of admission including ice cream. There will be four table d'hote luncheons, each of a half hour, beginning at 11.30. Mrs J. W. Tuckerman will be in charge of the tea and ices from 3.30 until 6, during which time fortunes in tea leaves will be told

The various tables will be in charge of well-known society women At the fancy table will be Mrs. C. C. Everett assisted by Miss Marjorie Coolidge Mrs. J. H. Cotton, Mrs. F. G. Curtis Mrs. A. N. Hood, Mrs. J. E. Masters. Mrs W. B. Neal, Mrs. Harold Peabody, Mrs. L. W. Rogers, Miss Rose Williams and Mrs. A. S. Whittier.

At the cake table Miss Lucy Parsons and Miss L. W. Storer will have Miss Barlow, Mrs. W. C. Lincoln, Miss D. S. Paine, Miss F. F. Paine, Mrs. Carrol Perry, Miss A. G. Thayer and Mrs. Arthur L. Walker for helpers.

The children's Christmas gift table is to be in charge of Mrs. Louis B. Harding and Mrs. T. W. Proctor, assisted by Mrs. H. Bemis, Mrs. Edwin Ford and Miss Marion Harding.

Miss Terry's Musicales.

Miss Terry's musicales will be as usual one of the all-important musical events of the coming season, will be given this year as last, in Fenway Court.

Charity is the keynote to which most things social are pitched for weeks to come. Sweet charity is the magnet around which all other events revolve, and, judging from the present outlook, the same conditions of affairs will last for some time.

Naturally the Vincent Club fair and concert, to be held in the large ball room of the Copley-Plaza on Tuesday, November 26, is among the most interesting and important.

Miss Susannah Cunningham, who studied voice abroad under the best masters, is arranging the concert and will sing, as will also Miss Elizabeth Sears and Miss Phyllis Robbins, all well known members of that exclusive organization and all known for the excellence of their voices. Miss Eleanor Cotton is to give some of her clever French monologues and Miss Anne Nourse will play the piano.

Miss Elizabeth Gray is to be in charge of the large group of girl ushers. The tables at the fair are to be filled with most attractive articles many of them made by the girls during the Summer and others brought over from Europe. There will be a luncheon and tea, at both of which a number of the season's pretty debutantes will serve.

Among the well-known society women subscribers are Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames, Mrs. Frank E. Peabody, Mrs George P. Gardner, Mrs. Charles A Kidder, Mrs. Eliot Hubbard, Miss Emily Beebe, Mrs. D. P. Kimball, Mrs J. Randolph Coolidge, Mrs. Oliver Ames, 2d, Mrs. S. Sprague, Mrs Henry E. Raymond, Miss Fanny Faulkner, Mrs. Sara C. Pitch, Mrs. J. Tucker Burr, Mrs Charles P. Hemenway, Mrs S. J. SIMPLE RECIPES FOR BEAUTY AND HEALTH

PROPER WAY TO SHAMPOO—In the first place never wash the hair with soap as it makes the hair harsh, streaky, brittle and takes away the glossy look. Try shampooing with a teaspoonful of ammonia dissolved in a cup of hot water. Rinse thoroughly with clear water. This shampoo dries very quickly and is used by the best hairdressers to make the hair fluffy and lustrous. The abundant lather cleanses as no other shampoo will, and checks scalp irritation immediately. It is inexpensive and makes shampooing a simple, easy task.

TO REMOVE BLACKHEADS AND WHITEHEADS—To get rid of blackheads, a precautive wrinkles, freckles, large pores and similar facial blemishes, use the following grandmother cream-jelly which can be prepared at home at small cost: Mix one ounce of almonds and two teaspoonfuls of glycerine in one-half pint cold water. Stir and let stand a few hours. This cream-jelly will keep the skin soft, smooth and satiny and when used as a massage cream cleanses the pores perfectly and will restore the youthful color to a faded, sallow skin.

SAFE EYE-REMEDY—Tired, dull, inflamed eyes can be made strong, clear and sparkling by using the following simple remedy. Dissolve one ounce orrine in a pint of cold water and drop a few drops in each eye daily. It is very soothing and strengthening and has enabled many to do away with wearing glasses. For granulated lids and eye-troubles generally, the results have been remarkable.

GOOD HEALTH-TONIC—To tone up the system, restore lost appetite, purify the blood and give new life and strength to a run-down body there is no better remedy than this old-fashioned, home-made tonic: Take one ounce each of hops and one half ounce sugar in one-half pint alcohol (not wine), Toss and heat water to make a full quart. A tablespoonful before each meal will soon enhance you up with pure, rich, red blood and bring health and vigor and every vitality of the body. The fine tonic is a wonderful health-restorer and quickly removes skin-eruptions, sallowness and other signs of poor health.

FOR FUZZY GROWTHS.—With a little water add enough pulverized to cover the hairy surface, apply and after two or three minutes remove, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This delicious treatment is harmless, unfailing and banishes hair or fuzz without marring or disfiguring the skin.—Advertisement.

ONE APPLICATION RELIEVES CATARRH AND COLD IN THE HEAD

The quickest, best and safest way to cure catarrh or a cold in the head is by using a remedy that will "touch the spot" and do its work quickly without leaving any bad effects. Ely's Cream Balm, which is applied to the nostrils or rubbed on the throat or chest, gets right at the root of the trouble and instantly relieves even the worst case of catarrh or cold. A few minutes after applied you can feel a loosening up in the head, the pain and soreness are gone, the sense of taste, smell and hearing come back, and you feel like a different person.

Ely's Cream Balm cleanses, heals and strengthens the inflamed membranes, takes away the stuffed-up feeling and dull pain in the head, relieves the throat soreness and stops the nasty discharge which is the cause of the disgusting hawking, spitting, blowing of the nose and foul breath. Hay fever victims who are made miserable by fits of sneezing, coughing and wheezing get instant and permanent relief by the use of this simple remedy.

Don't suffer another minute. Ely's Cream Balm will relieve you immediately, and a 50-cent bottle will more than likely work a complete cure. All druggists sell it.

HILLSBORO VACATIONISTS

The first annual reunion of the Hillsboro, N. H., vacationists is to be held on Monday evening, November 18, in Bleckwell Hall, Huntington avenue, under the auspices of the newly formed organization composed of thirty young women of Greater Boston who spend their annual Summer vacation in the New Hampshire town.

For many weeks the members have held weekly meetings at the various homes to make plans. No effort will be spared to make the occasion a memorable event. It will be but the beginning of a brilliant series of social gatherings to be held throughout the Winter.

Since the announcement of the party hundreds of requests have been received by the committee for invitations from former residents of Hillsboro, now located in Greater Boston and outlying districts.

A large representation will meet the residents of the town, who are planning to attend the party. They will engage a special car to make the trip. Many of the residents will be the house guests of the vacationists over the week-end, for whom special hospitalities are being planned.

The evening's program will comprise unique features, among which will be a genuine country dance for the special entertainment of the older guests. Cupid, ribbon and confetti dances will be prominently featured. The hall will be decorated to represent a Summer bower and add to the realistic-ness of the reunion.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sutkins, the host and hostess of the vacationists in Hillsboro, will be the guests of honor.

The matron's bower will be greeted over by Mrs. J. F Sullivan, Mrs. Robert Ford, Mrs. J. J. Collins and Mrs. Henry Cook.

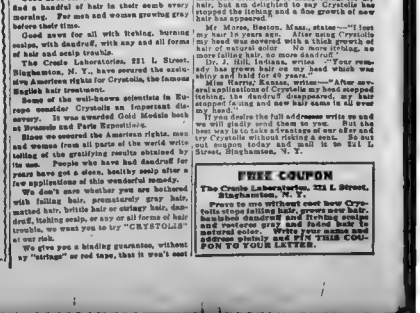
Beautiful Hair And Lots of It

If You Use Crystolis

$1000.00 Reward if We Cannot Prove Our Claims. Try It at Our Risk. Mail Coupon Today.



Here's good news for the man who vainly tries to plaster a few scanty locks over "that bald spot."

Good news for the woman whose hair is falling, whose locks are too scanty to properly pin up her false hair.

Good news for both men and women who find a handful of hair in their comb every morning. For men and women growing gray before their time.

Good news for all with itching, burning scalps, with dandruff, with any and all forms of hair and scalp trouble.

The Crosle Laboratories, 221 L Street, Binghamton, N. Y., have secured the exclusive American rights to Crystolis, the famous English hair treatment.

Some of the well-known scientists in Europe consider Crystolis an important discovery. It was awarded Gold Medals both at Brussels and Paris Expositions.

Since we secured the American rights, men and women from all parts of the world write telling of the gratifying results obtained by its use. People who have had dandruff for years have got a clean, healthy scalp after a few applications of this wonderful remedy.

We don't care whether you are bothered with falling hair, prematurely gray hair, matted hair, brittle hair or unkempt hair, dandruff, itching scalp, or any or all forms of hair trouble, we want you to try "CRYSTOLIS" at our risk.

We give you a binding guarantee, without any "strings" or red tape, that it won't cost you a cent if we do not prove to you that "Crystolis" will do all we claim for it, and we will gladly refund the money if you agree to back our guarantee.

Just send us the statements of a few who have used Crystolis and know of its wonderful merits from actual personal experience.

Rev. Campbell, N. Y., writes —"It seems incredible after using so many things for my hair, but am delighted to say Crystolis has stopped the falling and a fine growth of new hair has appeared."

Mr. Moree, Boston, Mass., states:—"I lost my hair for years and was thinking of buying a wig when I was induced to try Crystolis. My head was covered with a thick growth of hair of exceptional beauty and fluffiness, no more falling hair, no more dandruff. It is simply wonderful."—Your remedy has done for me my head which was full of dandruff for 60 years."

Mrs. Wm. Hartman, Ohio, writes:—"After several applications of Crystolis my head stopped itching, the dandruff disappeared and a new hair soon came in all over my head."

If you desire the full addresses write us and we will gladly send them to you. But the best way is to take advantage of our offer and try Crystolis without risking a cent. Fill out coupon today and mail it to 221 L Street, Binghamton, N. Y.

The Best Cough Syrup Is Easily Made at Home

Costs Little and Acts Quickly. Money Refunded If It Fails.

This recipe makes a pint of cough syrup, and saves you about $2.00 as compared with ordinary cough remedies. It stops obstinate coughs—even whooping cough—in a hurry, and is splendid for sore lungs, asthma, croup, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. Tastes good.

This takes right hold of a cough and gives almost instant relief. It stimulates the appetite, and is slightly laxative—both excellent features.

Pinex, as perhaps you know, is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and the other natural healing pine elements.

No other preparation will do the work of Pinex in this recipe, although strained honey can be used instead of the sugar syrup, if desired.

Thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada now use this Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe. This plan has often been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equalled. Its low cost and quick results have made it immensely popular.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

HEADACHY, CONSTIPATED, BILIOUS TAKE DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS"

Removes the scum from the tongue, sweetens a sour, gassy, bilious stomach; cleanses your liver and 30 feet of bowels without gripe or nausea.

If headachy, bilious, dizzy, tongue coated, stomach sour and full of gas, you belch undigested food and feel sick and miserable, it means that your liver is choked with sour bile and your thirty feet of bowels are clogged with effete waste matter not properly carried off. Constipation is worse than most folks believe. It means that this waste matter in the thirty feet of bowels decays into poisons, gases and acids, and that these poisons are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

Most people dread physic. They think of castor oil, salts and cathartic pills. They shrink from the after effects—so they postpone the dose until they get sick; then [illegible] liver and bowels cleansed [illegible] way they have a bowel wash [illegible] all wrong. If you will take a teaspoonful of delicious Syrup of Figs tonight you will never realize you have taken anything until morning, when all the poisonous matter, sour bile and clogged-up waste will be moved on and out of your system thoroughly but gently—no griping—no nausea—no weakness. Taking Syrup of Figs is a real pleasure. Don't think you are drugging yourself. It is composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics, and constant use cannot cause injury.

Ask your druggist for "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," and look for the name, California Fig Syrup Company, on the label. This is the genuine and reliable. Any other Fig Syrup offered [illegible] should be refused with contempt. Don't be imposed upon.

DRIVE PARLIAMENT INTO THE GUTTER

Tory Tactics Make Rough House of Ancient and Dignified Assembly.

WORLD LOOKS ON AMAZED

Idol of the Empire Being Irretrievably Disgraced and Its Prestige Ruined.

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

The scenes of turbulence and of downright rowdyism which marked the sittings of the House of Commons this week have so degraded Parliament that it is doubtful if the most ancient and honorable of the legislative institutions of the modern world can ever regain its high standing and dignity.

For centuries every Britisher who took any interest in his imperial government was proud of the fact that the House of Commons bore the title of "First Assembly of Gentlemen in Europe."

And, aside from party division among the members, it title was accepted as deserved. Leaving out of question the high handed and often insulting manner in which members from Ireland were treated there by both parties and under successive administrations, the "tone" of the House of Commons has always been tinged by an almost religious atmosphere of courtesy, of absolute obedience to the Speaker, of perfect propriety among the members and of the utmost reverence for the time-honored traditions of the historic assembly.

It is apparent that all this piece of feeling is over. And more's the pity. Those who are responsible for its passing are a lot of young Tory blockheads, so-called, whose ages range from the twenties to thirty-five or forty and who have found seats in Parliament within the past half-dozen years.

Coarse and Boisterous.

I saw some of them in action as I looked down from the Strangers' Gallery of the House of Commons on the memorable night of the passage of the Parliament bill, the purpose of which was to limit the veto of the House of Lords. Loud, angry, boisterous, coarsely vituperative, unmindful of the decencies of the place or of the pinnacle hour, their conduct in interrupting Liberal speakers that night was without shame.

As I listened to them and watched their conduct I recalled the men whose places they had, unhappily, come to fill Disraeli, Northcote, Hicks-Beach, Webster, Gibson, Chaplin, Lowther and the other giants of the old fashioned Tory party, who, if they did strongly oppose Mr. Gladstone for his Irish policy, were always honorable and courteous in their opposition. And now behold their successors!

Seats those turbulent young men now occupy were held by their fathers, who, if they did not all hold degrees from Oxford or Cambridge, were at least versed in the ways of gentlemen.

Farmers' those sons of wealthy parents who turned up noses at trade were pitchforked into the army, where there was nothing for them to do except observe the rules and ordinances of the officers' mess, play tennis or polo in the mornings and go to cricket match in the afternoon and put in the remainder of their time hunting for rich women who as wives would care for them in their declining years.

As for studying tactics or military science, that was altogether too vulgar and wholly unnecessary, you know. Didn't the Duke of Wellington defeat Napoleon at Waterloo? What further need was there, then, for studying tactics of warfare?

Day of Measurement Came.

The Boer war came, with all its sustained horrors of disaster to England and her military pride. And, with an empire shaken from centre to circumference, society warriors of the Strand court and the cricket field were weighed and measured for their full measure of humanity.

Since that time the Transvaal war office has raised the mental standard of those to whom it would intrust commissions to go to war. With the coming of the Boer war ended also the end of such young officers as Kitchener and Lord Roberts found putting the place of adopting officers' wives to the footing of Cape Town while the fighting men were being put to the front.

The new order accordingly made Othellos of hundreds of those sons of their fathers. But one way was left to save the family pride. That was to get seats in the House of Commons for the idlers in the young collegiates as would be willing to take them.

Their fathers were glad to retire from arena in which the rude material rewards had come to be long hours, exhausting committee work and a floor overrun of the discipline of party.

Many, if not all, of those young Tory members are blind irreconcilables, barring of some rules barons of the mine stripe which makes a joke out Asters of Lloyd George, of Augustine Birrell of John Morley, of Lord Haldane, and of every public man who has dared to advocate this measure of pain justice to Ireland. Above all, they hate the prime minister, Mr Asquith, with a violence unparalleled.

Limit to Their Power.

These are the men whose rough-house conduct towards the Prime Minister and the Nationalist members of Parliament has so disgraced and shocked the world.

They cannot drive the Asquith Ministry out of power for the government has a small majority securely backed by the Irish party. They cannot defeat the Home Rule bill by any such means as the present programme. But they can irretrievably degrade the Parliament of Great Britain into the gutter, and towards this noble attainment they are steadily marching.

If the condition of Tory disorder continues in Parliament it may transpire that even as powerful a man as the Speaker of the House of Commons shall find himself unable some day to cope with the new conditions. In that event he would be well advised if he telephoned over to Scotland Yard headquarters and invited Chief Inspector John McCarthy to co-operate with him in preserving order in the House. Mr McCarthy has just been appointed superintendent of Scotland Yard to succeed Superintendent Pearce. He knows his business.

Bazaar to Help Day Nursery

Over 3,000 Children Cared For

HAPPY CHILDREN AT CHARLESTOWN DAY NURSERY

Friends of Helpless Little Ones Unite in Worthy Movement of Relief.

The second annual bazaar of the Guild of the Holy Child of Charlestown, in aid of the Day Nursery, will be held on Thursday and Friday evenings and Saturday afternoon and evening, November 21, 22 and 23, in Knights of Columbus Hall. There is much interest in the affair because of the worth ness of the cause and the need of more funds for the prosecution of its work.

[illegible] of the members of the guild comprise [illegible] of school Catholic women of the Charlestown district, more than 3,000 children have been cared for.

Provided with comforts and medical attention since January, the opening month of the nursery.

The nursery was established for the care of children of mothers who are obliged to leave their helpless, dependent children to go to work. That the nursery has amply fulfilled its mission is evidenced from the high standard of health attained by the children under its kindly protection. Each child is under the watchful eye of a trained nurse and matron. Whenever symptoms of illness are discovered medical aid is immediately sought, free of cost to the mothers. The house in which the nursery is located [illegible] some [illegible] during the day. At the close of [illegible] these children repair to their homes to know the return of their mothers from work.

A cordial invitation is issued by the president, Miss Mary Moore, to all those interested in the helpless babes and needy working mothers to assist in making the bazaar a success. Many novel features will be introduced during the three evenings, on Saturday afternoon special entertainment will be provided for the children.

The tables will be decorated and presided over by members of the organization.

The apron table will be in charge of Mrs Eleanor T. Brennan, assisted by Mrs Arthur Dolan, Mrs J. F. O'Brien, Mrs John J. Hogan, Miss Julia Morrison, Miss Isabel Curry, Miss Mary Regan and William J. Day.

At the fancy work table will be Miss May Collins, Miss Margaret Whelan, Mrs. Grace Walsh, Miss Minnie Corbrand and M. J. Tierney. Chinese laundry—Mrs. Joseph Trefts, Mrs. James H. Connelly, Mrs. John F. Anderson, Mrs. John Deegran and J. H. Connelly.

The refreshment table will be directed by Mrs. P. J. Kyle, Mrs. Richard Gosnell, Mrs. William O'Brien, Mrs. Annie E. Sykes and Mrs. Henry Kiley.

At the candy table will be Miss Mary C. Morris, Mrs. Lord Burns, Miss May Doherty, Miss Florence Brennan, Miss Mary Curry, the Misses Mary and Margaret Mitchell, Miss Bessie Quigley, Miss Lillie O'Hare, Arthur Crowley and James Crowley.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE TO HOLD REUNION

Murdock, Mrs. John Roach, Miss Alice Chamberlain, Mrs. Paul Kane, Mrs. C. Dunn, Mrs. T. Cunliff, Miss Mae Murdock, Miss Grace Walsh, Miss Julia Hickey, Mrs. John Dunn, Miss Annie Nicholson, Miss Gilbody.

Rev. William H. Fitzpatrick was born in Eartlown, Colchester County, N. S., November 21, 1832. Educated in his native town, he started life as a school teacher. He came to the United States when he was twenty, and worked in Belleira, Bolton and Dedham for about five years, or until he saved enough money to enable him to enter Holy Cross College in 1856. He graduated in 1862, and then entered the Sulpician Seminary in Montreal. He received holy orders on May 30, 1868.

'LEITRIM NIGHT' ON NEXT THURSDAY

Irish Clubs to Hold Many Meetings, with Social and Literary Features.

Next Thursday evening will be "Leitrim Night" with the members of the Irish County clubs. Paine Hall will look its prettiest that evening when the sons and daughters of Leitrim, with their many friends as guests, will hold the annual reunion, concert and ball under the auspices of the County Leitrim Association. The social affairs of this popular club have been very successful in the past, but the members anticipate the largest attendance of the entire series owing to the excellent work of the committee and the demand for tickets.

James Regan will be door marshal. William J. Cassidy will head the reception committee. James Gallagher will be chief of aids. The lady members will act as aids and assist the reception committee. The grand march will begin at 9:15 sharp. The Central Council delegates will be present to represent the other thirty-one clubs. The proceeds will go to the benevolent fund.

After the regular meeting of the Dublin Club, to-day held in Appleton Hall to-night, a fine program of speeches and music will be given by some excellent talent.

The Mayo Men's Benevolent Association will meet in Fraternity Hall, No. 12 Kneeland street, this afternoon. Final arrangements will be made for the annual reunion, or "Mayo Night," in Paul Revere Hall on Tuesday evening, November 26. The floor officers will be appointed and a rehearsal of the grand march will complete the exercises this afternoon.

* * *

Members of the Roscommon Social Club are sanguine that all records of admitting new members will be broken in the club this afternoon. The meeting will be at 2 o'clock in Harrison Hall, Dewson building.

* * *

The committee of fifty making arrangements for the eleventh annual reunion in Paul Revere Hall on Thursday evening, December 12, is working very hard to complete all details with a view of making the event a big success.

Thomas J Finnegan is chairman of the ball committee, Joseph Moore is secretary and Timothy J. McKeon is treasurer.

The Kilkenny Men's Association will meet in their new quarters on Central street this afternoon. Plans for the annual ball and reports of the benevolent committee will be important matters for the members. A social session will follow the business meeting.

The Knights of St. Finbar will meet this afternoon in A. O. H. Hall, Union street, Charlestown, to make final arrangements for the series of lectures and concerts to be held during the remainder of the season.

Generous donations are made by this club to worthy affairs at every meeting. No appeal for any worthy movement goes unheeded. Prominent speakers are always at the St. Finbar meetings and today will be no exception to this rule.

PRESIDENT CANNON INCREASING ROLLS

State Executive of Ancient Order Expects to Double Ranks During 1913.

Although the Ancient Order of Hibernians is now one of the largest fraternal organizations in Massachusetts, State President Cannon desires to double the ranks during his term, and as he has a record as a great organizer in Worcester County, where he has just concluded a long term as county president, it is the opinion of all members that big gains will be made all over the State.

In carrying out his work, President Cannon will have the valuable assistance of State Vice-President John F. Donnelly of Cambridge, who performed great work in Middlesex County when he was county president.

Other strong aids will be State Secretary Richard Dwyer of Suffolk, who has just switched four years as county president, and State Treasurer Dennis J. Slattery of Worcester, who was county president of Norfolk County had an excellent report to make at each convention.

Neponset Court has made arrangements for a series of entertainments to be held during the Winter season, the first of which will be held Tuesday evening at Kelther's Hall, Neponset, when Captain Jeremiah G. St. Aidan's Church Dedication Today

Cardinal, Assisted by Monsignori and Other Clergy to Bless Brookline Edifice.

The new and beautiful Church of St. Aidan, in Brookline, of which Rev. Joseph F. Coppinger is rector, will be solemnly dedicated at 11:30 o'clock this morning by His Eminence, Cardinal O'Connell.

Attending the Cardinal as his chaplains will be Rt. Rev Monsignor Moriarty of Jamaica Plain and Rt. Rev. Monsignor Supple of Roxbury.

Following the ceremony of dedication, solemn high mass will be celebrated by the Rev. Joseph F. Coppinger, who will be assisted by Rev. Edward F. Moland of St. Stephen's Church, Boston, as deacon; Rev. Patrick J. McCormack of St. Joseph's Church, sub-deacon; Rev. James A. Splaine, D. D., of the Cathedral, master of ceremonies, and Rev. John O'Brien of St. Aidan's Church, assistant.

Rev. Father Maurice C. P., of Blessed Gabriel Monastery, Brighton, will preach the sermon.

Solemn vespers will be sung at 3 p. m. by Father Coppinger. The deacon will be Rev. Charles A. Dinneen of the class of Seaven Christ, South Boston; sub-deacon, Rev. Joseph F. Delaney of St. Peter's Church, Watertown, and master of ceremonies, Rev. David S. Heffernan of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Everett. The sermon will be by the Rev. David J. Regan of St. Patrick's Church, Roxbury.

Appropriate music will be under the direction of Daniel L. Prendergast. The music will be in charge of Organist Michael A. Lally.

In Charity's Cause.

Preparations are being made by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Mary's Church, North End, for the annual bazaar to be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, December 5, 6 and 7. The proceeds will be used for the relief of the poor of the parish.

SOCIETY RECEPTION TO THE CARDINAL

Catholic Union to Be Hosts of Church Prince at the Copley-Plaza.

Hon. Joseph H. O'Neil will deliver the address of welcome at the reception to be given at the Copley-Plaza tomorrow afternoon by the Catholic Union of Boston in honor of Cardinal O'Connell.

The function will be one of the most elaborate and notable social affairs held in the history of the union.

The cardinal is expected to arrive at the hotel at 5 o'clock. He will be escorted to the reception room, in the private suite, by President O'Neil, his associate officers of the Catholic Union and the members of the reception committee.

Tickets for the reception are confined to the members of the union and their families. Some 500 guests are expected.

Besides the officers of the union, Rt. Rev. Mgr. Splaine, rector of the cathedral, will be in the receiving line.

A grand program of orchestral music will be rendered during the evening.

The guests will be received by the following ushers: Francis E. Burke, Henry F. Brennan, Walter H. Broderick, Edward L. Byrne, Frederic J. Crosby, Dr. James W. Day, Frank Dowling, Robert J. OUR BALKAN WAR CORRESPONDENT BALKS-- DISGUSTOVAS, Province of ISHUDWORRI, Theesonuff—To the editor of the City Life Section.

Sir: I herewith tender my resignation. It is by no means the only tender thing about me, but I want it understood at the beginning that I am no longer your War Correspondent in the Balkan States

I Balked

I Balk now

I'm still Balkan

When I arrived it was the understanding that I was to cable to you AT YOUR EXPENSE an expertly written description of the terrible carnage. I agreed to that, but I want it distinctly understood that I am not a Marathon Runner

Only on one consideration will I withdraw my resignation, and that is that you will either make the Bulgarians stop chasing the Turks, or make the Turks stop running away from the Bulgars

Of course the censor will hold up this cable, and the chances are that by the time it reaches you one of the enemies will have chased the other enemy entirely off the map.

I landed at Ikgipolonole, expecting to witness a conflict. The Turks had retreated to Oolooloo Boola. I rushed forward as fast as an old fashioned solid tire bicycle could take me, but saw nothing

Hungry and homesick, longing to learn more about the fight, I approached a lady and asked her about it

"Are you for the Turks?" asked she

I gave her an evasive answer.

"I believe you are!" screamed the lady, whereupon she wallloped me severely.

She was no lady! She was a man, and a Greek soldier! I wish those Greek men wouldn't wear petticoats, they make me nervous.

The Greek ladies wear long clinging skirts, now if this were only reversed but to resume

Being disgusted at my inability to catch up with any of the battles I returned to the coast, reached Constantinople and struck inland toward Adrianopole.

I saw the Turks

In fact, eleven regiments of Turks ran directly toward me as I approached. They did not hesitate an instant, almost every man in those eleven regiments ran directly over me. They were on their way to Constantinople.

Were it not for the fact that they were either bare foot, or wearing boudoir slippers I might have been severely injured

But I was delighted. I had seen some action. I got up and chased the Turks, seeking to catch up with a general and secure an interview. After running two days and three nights and failing to overtake any of them, I felt exhausted

But I had scarcely fallen before nine more regiments approached. They didn't even hesitate, but every man ran right over me

They wore hob-nailed shoes. Consequently my eyes were soon closed and I cannot give you a very accurate description

They were mostly brunettes, wearing harem skirts and long black mustaches. Some of them had been eating garlic

It was most annoying.

But being an intrepid war correspondent I quickly recovered and gave chase. I knew not whether they were Bulgars, Serve, Montocolored people, Greeks or just an Opera Bouffe troupe. But I was unable to overtake them. They were after the Turks.

As I told you before, I am not a Marathon runner

It is no kind of a war. Believe me, Mr Editor I didn't see a moving picture machine in any of the Balkan States. There may have been one, but I'd wager it was moving so fast the pictures inside couldn't keep up with it

As I was in the Ottoman Empire, or what was once the Ottoman Empire, heaven only knows who owns it now, I thought it would be clever of me to visit a few harems and get material for some special articles

I called at one and was promptly admitted

I will admit that I was ragged and dusty and scarcely recognizable, but when one hundred and eighty-two houris all fell upon my neck at once and called me "husband" I retreated so rapidly that I nearly overlook the soldiers, twenty-two miles to the west

War is certainly all that Voltaire first asserted and later Sherman repeated it to be, but as for domestic life in the Orient I'd rather take my chances on reading on the system in little old Crime Square, New York.

Just now, as I am dashing this off in the cable office, a courier has arrived with some startling information. This is what he tells me

"Valisk nom ati sicurbestobitti adro pasha jeronsk"

This is an important piece of information, and while I am resigning, I am willing to work right up to the last minute. You are entirely welcome to this bit of inside information. I would advise you to copyright it, in order that other papers will not steal it

This is terrible work here. I didn't have a napkin with my meals for a week. Then I found a stock of napkins, but since then have been unable to find a meal to go with them

There have been quite a number of sudden deaths in this vicinity. There would have been many more, it is said, had it not been that so many of the fighters ran so fast death failed to overtake them. It is my private opinion that half of the fighters ran like this for the sole purpose of preventing death from overtaking them

There hasn't been such wonderful running since Bryan got out of the habit

Most of the ladies here have given up the ancient custom of wearing veils. It is too bad. In fact, these women, by removing their veils have practically ruined the landscape hereabouts.

Before coming my way to Constantinople I shall meander into Marash. I learn there is a brewery there.

Outside the fact that there has been some fighting it is a vacuum, and that there is considerable fighting going on by fits and starts, mostly in such starts that I can never overtake them, there is no further news for you. Any time you see fit to equip me with a newly horse power automobile I may perhaps be able to catch up with the rear guard of some of the combatants. Otherwise you will have to depend on someone else for your news.

I have worn out my Boy Scout shoes, and at present am wearing one blue Greek sandal and one red morocco turned up toed Turkish slipper.

Which reminds me that one reason why these men are fighting so hurriedly just now is because they are obliged to smoke their own make of Turkish cigarettes, being unable to import the "imported" ones from this country.

I am taking the next boat back to the Battery

Yours exhaustedly,

LEWIS ALLEN.

P. S. The message I cabled you in some foreign language I have just had translated. Kindly disregard it, as I learn it was not news, but merely a request on the part of the courier to have me tell him how the battle between our three Presidential candidates is progressing. I replied

"Oh, they are running, too."

HEINE AND HONUS

HONUS—Did you take your bath today?

HEINE—Why should I? Tomorrow ain't Sunday.

HONUS—You should take an AIR-BATH every day.

HEINE—Tell me why I should take an air-bath

HONUS—An air-bath is the latest discovery of science. To be healthy you must be full of air.

HEINE—I'll bet you was never sick a day in your life.

HONUS—A great doctor has found out that what makes people sick is clothes.

HEINE—The doctor is wrong. It ain't the clothes that makes 'em sick; it's paying for them.

HONUS—Don't you know that it's unhealthy for a man to wear clothes?

HEINE—I know it wouldn't be very healthy for a man who didn't.

HONUS—It is our clothing that closes the pores so that the ventilation that should be in you stays outside. And that's why we need air-baths. Instead of washing yourself in a tub of water you should wash yourself in a tub of air.

HEINE—You mean when you take a bath you mustn't get wet?

HONUS—That's it.

HEINE—Oh, I see. It's a kind of a dry-cleaning process.

HONUS—It's a great idea. The doctor says that everybody should take off his clothes, go out and take an air-bath every day.

HEINE—Once will be enough.

HONUS—Twice would be better.

HEINE—The police will never let you take the second one.

HONUS—You don't understand. You can't walk out in the street and take an air-bath.

HEINE—You've got to take it out in the air, ain't you?

HONUS—Sure. But the way to do that is to take the family way out in the country, until you find a secluded spot and then you walk around with all your pores undressed.

HEINE—But if you did that how long do you think that spot would remain secluded

HONUS—That's the only way to let the air go through you

HEINE—Yes, and some fellow would come along with a shot gun and let the daylight through you.

HONUS—But don't you see the doctor's idea is to have the city set aside places for air-bathing where airers at their leisure can sit around and ventilate themselves, wrapping their skin in the soft zephyrs.

HEINE—Yes, and Taft's.

HONUS—The Democrats carried everything.

HEINE—And all that the Republicans carried was the banner.

HONUS—How do you account for the landslide?

HEINE—Well, it seems to me the trouble was this: Wilson ran for his party, Roosevelt ran for himself, and Taft ran for Sweeney.

HONUS—I see that Taft says that he was surprised at the result.

HEINE—He should have expected it. You know he's been President for four years now, and this is the first time that people have had a chance to tell him what they thought of him

HONUS—Bryan came out and made a fine speech after the election

HEINE—You can always depend on him to make a speech.

HONUS—He said: "It was a great victory for the Democrats. It is a blessing to the country."

HEINE—It was a blessing—that he didn't run

HONUS—Taft, Wilson and Roosevelt stayed up all night to hear the returns.

HEINE—But there's one fellow that didn't have to lose any sleep

HONUS—Who was that?

HEINE—Debs.

HONUS—That's all right about Debs. Some day he's going to hand us a big surprise. You'll see somebody vote for him yet.

Stuart Barnes, the Comedian, Talks on "Wives and Women"

Copyright, 1912, by the Star Comp any Great Britain Rights Reserved.

SINCE the days of Eve and the serpent, woman has been uncertain, coy and shy on gratitude. Why did Eve bite the apple? Because she was so green herself she thought the time was ripe. She wasn't hungry. She only wanted to get the old man in trouble. So she went out making dates with that reptile, and when poor old Adam came along he saw snakes.

Nowadays a fellow doesn't get in trouble on account of an apple. Now it's a peach. He'll stand on the street corner, watch a little tugboat float by, and gently whisper, in passing, "Some squab! Some squab!" And then she'll turn around, look skyward, and hand him: "Have at me, Stevano, have at me!"

Stage Rights Reserved by Mr. Barnes.

Well, we're all crooks today, anyhow. The only difference is, some of us are locked out and others are locked in. They have bolts and bars on the bank to keep the thieves out, and bars and bolts on the jails to keep 'em in. Every one looks upon one's neighbor with suspicion. The highest type is the man higher up. I maintain that woman ought to have a hand in the government! Her hand isn't as big as a man's; she can't graft so much.

The trouble with us guys is that we don't appreciate the women half enough. Would you believe it, you can still find men groaning about marriage being a failure? Why, I only need to look up and down Broadway for a minute, and I can spot 10,000 wives who are supporting husbands! To prove it, just take a glance at the marriage records. You'll find that far more women than men were married last year. And, get this—do you realize that, since the world began, half our parents have been women?

Oh, it's great to get married, and it's great to be hanging around outside the church just before your sentence is pronounced, and then have some dear bachelor friend come along and say kindly, "What's the trouble?" Then, as he slinks away around the corner, you can just catch him murmuring something to the effect that there's sixty 'em born every hour.

But married men can laugh just as well as any other lost souls. Of course, we can. Huh-ha! Huh-ha. That's a laugh, isn't it? That's the way I laugh when I come home at night and wifey says, "Dearie, we're going to have somebody for dinner." SOMEBODY! I step in and find wifey's three brothers, out of work, come to bum a meal, while wifey's mother steps up and announces that she has come to do thirty days with us.

A man asked me yesterday if I would marry for money. I told him not so it would be discernible, if I could get it any other way. Before I was married I didn't have a cent. Now I haven't got a pocketbook. He told me that bachelor life hangs on a thread. I told him to tie a rope around himself and stay with it.

But still, love has its bright side. There's courtship. You go to your girl's house and say to the maid, "Is Miss Lizzie in?" Of course, she's been up at the front window looking her eyeballs out for the last half hour, and you know it.

Then you step into the parlor, like the big gawk that you are, and wait, while all Lizzie's little brothers and sisters sneak along the hall and take a peek at you.

Pretty soon she blows down the stairs and says, "Oh, is that you?" And you say, with that ever ready wit, "It's me." Then Lizzie says, "Won't you come in?" Of course, you've been in ever since you arrived, but that doesn't make any difference. Then, to even things up, you say, like the prime boob that you are, "Isn't it nice weather?" It's been raining for three days, but you have to say something.

Lizzie says, "Won't you stay to supper?" and hopes you won't. You, like the big squash that you are, say "I guess I better not this time, but as long as you insist, I guess I will." Then she steers you into the dining room, and you're so nervous you blush at the bare legs of the table. In making a reach for the celery you upset a glass of water, you big hippopotamus, thereby occasioning cloud bursts of lawfer from the little brothers and sisters. You try to grab your napkin to keep from choking, yank the tablecloth instead, and several articles of delicatessen drop to the floor.

About this time mother has nourished a little peeve, and she snaps in cyanide tones, "Young man, will you have tea-or-coffee?" You send back, "A little of both, please," and then you proceed to favor the "coffee" with vinegar. And all this time the old man is thinking, "I wonder what that pup makes a week."

Did you ever stop to realize how easy it is for a man to find excuses to pick a fight so that he can get out at night time? And how many different ways a wife can tell her husband to stay out all night and not mean it? One of the old, familiar songs goes like this. Wifey says:

"Why, of course. Go as far as you like. Stay out all night if you want to. But remember one thing, if you do go out tonight, it will be over my dead body!"

Another "foxy" hubby hands this one over the dinner table; it's one of those quick ones, one that he puts through fast so as to have it over with in a hurry:

"Dearie, I may be a little late tonight getting in, but——"

But she's jues as quick as he is, and bats out a homer like this:

"Oh, is that so? Well, isn't that funny? Huh, that's the funniest thing I ever heard. Well, if you must tear yourself away from little 'dearie' tonight, just you come across with a little of the manuma, before going out!"

That's the death warrant. He stays in.

Then there's this variety. Wifey says:

"Honeybunch, there's no use of your staying cooped up in the house every night, when you need recreation so much. Go out and have a good time with your friends. I'll be waiting right here in this chair for you, lovey, at 5 a. m."

You want to look out for that one. She's going out herself

"PRE-HISTORIC MAN."

TEN thousand years before the Flood
When man was full of savage blood
His wife was meek, and if she'd speak,
Good land, how she would catch it!
For up would shout her husband brave,
"Now, Mary Ann, you must behave,
Or I will exercise you with this pre-historic hatchet."
Though this was rather rude, of course.
She never sued him for divorce,
And fat or slim she'd stick to him
As only woman can.
Uninterrupted by a scrap,
Her husband took his daily nap,
And life was gay in the primitive day
Of Pre-Historic Man.

REFRAIN

Pre-Historic Man
Who lived in the ancient jungle—oh.
He scared his wife with a big stone knife
And he surely was boss of the bungalow.
She drew his water and she chopped his wood,
And she also handled the frying pan,
But she did not wear the trousers,
FOR
They were not worn
In the primitive morn
Of Pre-Historic Man.

"WHAT LIPS ARE MADE FOR."

EVE came to Adam's Paradise
When Love was pure as dew,
And she said, "I think the world is nice—
It's all so bright and new.
My ears, sweet sounds arrayed for.
But my lips—ah, well, dear Adam, tell—
What can my lips be made for?"

Then Adam said, "Relieve your mind
Of all these doubts unruly;
Creation is so well designed
That nothin's wasted, truly.
Our hands are made to toil and spade.
Our feet are made to walk with.
So it's plain to me as plain can be
That our lips are made to talk with."

CHORUS.

So all through pretty, pretty Paradise
Eve sought for conversation.
She talked to the bees and the chimpanzees
And the Polly parrots in the high, high trees—
Ha-ha, to all Creation.

So down in Paradise Eve sat
And wept the livelong day.
For her words rang false and her songs sang flat
And her lips seemed thrown away.
"Oh, Adam, dear, come here, come here!"
She called through sad Creation.
"My heart grows sere, for my lips, I fear,
Have missed their true vocation!"
So Adam harked to her sad alarm
And he came to his weeping dear;
So he drew her close in his manly arm
Till their lips were very near.
"Ah, lover mine," cried Eve ovrine,
"This hour you may bring bliss with.
For it's plain to me as plain can be
That our lips were made to kiss with!"

MONDAY—Took up a new subjekt fisikel culcher wich is to ejukate the boddy and all the mussels.

In fisikel culcher is a lota funy things. Teacher dont let us breethe like allways. We gota inhail and exhail

Then she lerns us how to bend forwords and bakwords and moove our arms and legs.

Fisikel culcher aint nuthing new. Once when me and ma went to the minajeree we seen a munkey doing it just like in our class and he done it better then teacher.

Their was a elefent too done fisikel culcher with his ears.

TUESDAY—Teacher said maybe sum of us will be grate men sum day you cant tell.

Most of the gratest men in our histery like Benjamin Franklin and Abraham Lincoln didn't have no kolleje ejukation and dident even go to school very much. Nowerdays a boy aint got no such chanst to be grate. Hes gota go to school a long time.

If your a grate man you can do a lota good in your life and even when you die becaws the boys get a day off from school.

Had to stay in after school today for throwing a spitball. It was Robbie Crosbys fawlt. If he hadent dodjed I wouldnt a hit teacher

WEDNESDAY—Evryboddy is gota learn a nice peace to say for Thanksgiven. Susie is gona lern me one with motions just like a akter. She lerned it when she was taking ellakution lessons.

Ellakution lerns you how to talk with your hands. Sum peopie are born ellskutionists.

Got anuther new boy and he juse came from germeny and dont talk no english only germen. Teacher askt him a question in germen but he dident understand.

She told us she lerned germen in kolleje but I gess kolleje germen is diffrent.

THURSDAY—Pa read in the paper how there gona have mooving pikchers in the schools and lern us our lessons that way.

That will be grate. Maybs they'll show us how a prequisition guverns the objektiv case.

I'd like to see a pikcher of a sinjuler number chesing the third person and I wish they would make grammer jump over a multiplikation table and brake all its rules.

Nuts is ripe on Judd Hill and me and Harry and Joe Scudder is gona get a lot tomorrow. I'm gona play sick in the morning.

FRIDAY—When I told ma I was too sick to go to school she sent me back to bed and I had to take a lota medsin. It aint no fun. I wish I went to school.

Is school you dont have to be in after three a clok and here I had to take medishin all day long

Things That Have Always Puzzled Us--No. 3.

Copyright, 1912, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

ONE of the things that puzzles all of us is that ancient one, "Half of the world does not know how the other half lives!"

How does the other half live?

Supposing one half knew how it's other half lived, Sufferin' Reno, think of the cross-libels that would be filed!

Yet we would like to know how that other half lives, not only our own matrimonial halves, but everyone in general

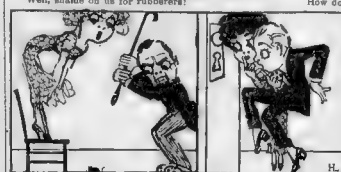
Jinks is sporting an auto. How does he do it?

We wonder and worry about that. Perhaps the butcher and baker know how he does it—to their sorrow—but everyone else wants to know.

Mrs. Ena Mallface looks as young and svelte as she did twenty-five years ago.

How does she do it? We wish we knew, don't we?

Well, shame on us for rubbereers!



Sometimes, at a musical comedy, we just sit and wonder how on earth those girls got into those costumes. We men folks simply can't see how they do it. We wish we could. We women folks don't care about seeing how they do it, but we do wish we knew how they did it.

Mr. Pious is such a solemn, long-faced guy, and passes the contribution plate every Sunday and wears nice clothes and shiny lids, and lives in such a nice house and always goes into the city every day. We wish we knew where he gets his money, what his business is, how much he has got, and all that.

We suspect he may keep a gambling place in the city, or a horrible liquor saloon, or something like that

And wouldn't we be sore if we did know, and learned he mereiy was a wholesale dealer in churns or hemp rope or baking powder!

The Beborne always close the blinds in their dining room. We are puzzled to know what they have for dinner. They go to church regularly, but perhaps they serve liquor at their home meals!

And remember how we heard Mrs. Blink scream the other night, and Mr. Blink's voice rose loud and deep. We'll just bet they were having a regular cat-and-dog, knock-down and drag-out fight of it. Oh, dear, we do wish we knew how they managed to live together.

And wouldnt we be disgusted if we really knew, and thus learned that Mrs. Blink saw a mouse and leaped into a chair, and Blink struck at it with the poker and hit his sore toe and so cursed horribly, and that the Blinks never quarreled and loved each other dearly?

Yes, indeed, it would disappoint most of us terribly to know that, as it would put an end to our gossip about how terribly the Blinks fight.

How DOES the other half live?

How do all the Joneses manage to live in that little bungalow—there's eight of them and only two sleeping rooms?

Who hooks the old maids' dresses up the back?

How is it so many of those terribly homely women are just covered with diamonds?

Is that handsome man who calls so frequently at the Cazumps a relative of theirs, or only a bill collector?

How on earth does Mrs Gaddabout manage to be all dolled up and on the street every morning, and yet do her work, when she doesn't keep a maid?

We've always been puzzled to know why the Swiftleighs can never keep a maid more than a week.

How on earth do so many people manage to keep an auto?

And, for the love of Midas, where did all these wealthy folks get their money?

Is the bold lion tamer really afraid of his little wife?

Did our minister actually go to a moving picture show?

Are those real diamonds Mrs. Derbluffe wears?

Was that Mr. Harry's wife he was with down in Chinatown the other day?

If it wasn't, he should worry

Yes, indeed, we DO wish we could learn how the other half—but HOLD ON, wait a minute!

In that case, everyone else would know all about US, wouldn't they?

Er—well, let's let it go as it is

SAMMY'S SCHOOL DAYS

Copyright, 1912, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

THERE was a peculiar shooting accident over on the Ridge last week. Ray Culpepper was fooling with a revolver. He pointed it at his sister Patience and pulled the trigger. He didn't know it was loaded and it wasn't. Patience was not hurt. Rather unusual, as we, to say the least

We spent a few days and nights in New York recently. One morning after our return our wife asked us what we were talking about in our sleep when we said something about having a chicken in our lap. Quick as a flash we replied: "Well, you see, when I was eating at a hotel in New York in carving a chicken it slipped and slid into my lap. I presume the incident recurred to me in my dreams."

Some fielding average on terrible back suspicion, say we

The teacher at the little red school house asked the scholars to compose a sentence which would contain the word amphibious. Little Jem Johnson the son of the colored parson, promptly retaliated with "Most fish stories am fibious."

In the interest of disarmament the International Peace Congress asked that peaceful people discontinue papering their rooms with cartridge paper. In deference to their wishes the barracks of the local military company will be papered with blank cartridge paper

Billy Sykes who is famous for having the longest nose of any one in the country has a bad cold, and has to talk through his nose. So if Bill's conversation sounds like a long distance telephone you will know what the trouble is

To a person riding through this town on a train it would make them think of Pittsburgh, but we rise to say that the cause of so much smoke is the box of cigars Charley Simmons passed around on the occasion of the stork's visiting his house last week

Nigger Knight says he supposes that one reason why there are no lady locomotive engineers is because they would have to be out late at night with the fast mails themselves, he has effected another entrance

Seeville is called a tank station, although there is no water plug there to quench the thirst of the locomotive but we guess, if you went up to the Court of Old House and saw the bench around the bar up there, you'd know why it's called a tank station, all right

We have exclusive information that the piano trust is doing business on nerve. It is also rumored that the shoe trust is on its uppers, that the fur trust is full of skins and that litigation has been started against the corset trust, but that the latter will fight prosecution with a number of stays. We also hear on good authority that the harvester trust has cornered everything but the Grim Reaper and that the glue trust is not frightened by threatened suits but will continue to stick. Our informant also says the radiator trust will defend itself with some heat and that the bathtub trust is ready for a clean-up

Nigger Knight says the Lusitania may be queen of the seas, but even she has her piers. That boy Knight is as funny as a tight shoe on a sore toe. He'd make a weeping-willow laugh

It Looks Like It.

"WHO can describe a caterpillar?" asked the teacher.

"I can, Teacher," shouted Tommy.

"Well, Tommy, what is it?"

"An upholstered worm."

Certainly It Did.

"DID your watch stop when it dropped on the floor?" asked one man of his friend.

"Sure," was the answer. "Did you think it would go through?"

Every One Knew It.

THE newly married pair had escaped from their demonstrative friends and were on the way to the depot when the carriage stopped. The bridegroom looked out of the window impatiently. "What's the matter, driver?" he called.

"The horse has thrown a shoe, sir," was the reply.

"Great Scott!" groaned the bridegroom; "even the horse knows we're just married."

Awaiting Orders.

THE station master on the Eastern Indian Railway had been given strict orders not to do anything out of the ordinary without authority from the superintendent. This accounts for his sending the following telegram:

"Superintendent's Office, Calcutta.

"Tiger on platform eating conductor. Please wire instructions."

Well Trained.

HUB (angrily)—What! More money? When I'm dead you'll probably have to beg for all the money you get.

Wife (calmly)—Well, I'll be better off than some poor woman who never had any practice.

Excellent Evidence.

DOCTOR—Has the patient still a few rational moments?

Nurse—Yes, he has. Whenever his wife comes into the room he screams, "Get out! Get out!"

Didn't Take.

"DID you ever try auto-suggestion?"

"Often, but I can't induce my husband to buy one end of der car?"

He Was Short.

"VY don't yer speak ter yer swell friend at der oder end of der car?"

Shush! She ain't paid her fare yet.

Certainly.

MISS GUSHER—Tell me, Mr. Board, do you believe in big weddings or little ones?

Mr. B.—Well—er—er—as for that, my dear lady, I should say that the former were quite essential to the latter.

Why.

"WHAT makes the judge scratch his head?"

"Just another attempt at judicial recall."

Lucky.

"THIS is the third time you have been here for food," said the woman at the kitchen door to the tramp. "Are you always out of work?"

"Yes'm," replied the itinerant. "I guess I was born under a lucky star."

Trapped.

"PINK, I'm afraid you are wasting your time brushing my hat. I don't seem to have anything smaller than a $10 bill."

"I kin change dat all right, boss."

"Then you don't need me up. So long, Pink."

Hardly.

"COME, now, Hesmina," said the Whitechapel bridegroom, "you're goin' to say 'obey' when you come to it in the service, ain't you?"

"Wot, me?" cried the bride. "Me sy 'obey' to you! Say, Bakes, ain't 'Ermery, you can't 'arf me size!"

IN THE BALKANS

Our Great War Correspondent Gives Us Full Dope on the Situation.

By Abdul, the Bulbul Ameer.

USKWYCOKPC — I arrived here at 1:17 today, after a miserable journey.

The town is full of Bulgars.

I thought of a good line, if Turkey should prove victorious.

I would then say, "The Sultan has the bulge on the Bulgars."

The hotels here are miserable, and in all my experience as a war correspondent, I have never been so uncomfortable.

The Turks have a number of Kurds in their army, but their plans have curdled.

Another bright thought that just struck me. It is those little touches that enliven a grim story and bring home to the reader what life on the firing line is.

I tried to go to the front today, but the Turks were beating it so fast that I couldn't get far enough to the rear to get to the front.

Not so bad?

I hear the mosque of St. Sophia is threatened. I don't know who threatened it, but whoever he is he should be locked up.

The hotel prices here are very high and I shall have to go over my expense account again and increase it.

A Stale Joke.

Perturbed Diner: What on earth is the matter with you this evening, waiter? First you give me fish, and now you give me the soup.

Waiter (confidentially): Well, to tell the truth, sir, it was 'igh time you 'ad that fish.

The Perils of Being a War Correspondent

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

Doorknobs make good nest eggs, but are bum for breakfast?

Elections are great things to have over?

A bantam is a small chicken and so is a chorus girl?

The Balkans are nothing but a bunch of more or less carelessly made mountains?

Montenegro is a place which tourists find it easy to avoid?

Breakfast cereals need not necessarily be eaten at breakfast?

Astronomers study the stars, but the stars show no resentment?

The practice of eating candy is a very profitable one, otherwise there wouldn't be so many people making it?

A person is not of the bon ton merely because he weighs a ton?

How Did She Mean It?

THE small boy was being reproved by his mother.

"Why can't you be good?" she asked.

"I'll be good for a nickel," he said.

"Ah!" responded the mother, "you want to be bribed. You should enjoy your father and be good for nothing."

No Offence.

SHE—Pardon me, sir, for walking on your feet.

He—Oh, don't mention it. I walk on them myself, you know.

Our Weekly Health Hint.

Don't argue with a Democrat.

IN THE SMILE'S LETTER BOX

A JOKE.

TO THE EDITOR—I saw this joke in a paper recently:

Doctor—Are you following my instructions to take the pills 3 times a day and a drop of whiskey before going to bed?

Patient—Well, doctor, I am a bit behind on the pills, but then I am three months ahead on the whiskey.

It seems to me that the patient was foolish to call in a doctor if he did not intend to obey his orders. What is your opinion?

JACK JORRAX.

(You seem to have stated a fact. —Ed.)

GOLDEN HAIR.

TO THE EDITOR—Is golden hair likely to prove detrimental to my success as a stenographer?

EMILY EAGLE.

(Not if you don't leave it around carelessly.—Ed.)

A TOOTHACHE.

TO THE EDITOR—Please reply by mail and tell me how to cure the toothache.

PAINFUL BILLY.

(We cannot answer letters except through the columns of the paper. Your toothache has probably gone by this time. If not, eat broken bricks until the pain wears off. —Ed.

What He Didn't Like.

A HORSE dealer was trying to sell a horse afflicted with heaves, and said to the prospective buyer: "Hasn't he a fine coat? Isn't it a dandy?"

"His coat's all right, but I don't like his pants."

POETRY MADE POPULAR

Copyright, 1912, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

WE cannot waste time on a preface this week; we have too precious a song to consider. Let 'er go:

Oh, I went down South to see my Sal.
Sing Polly-wolly-doodle all the day;
My Sally am a spunky gal,
Sing Polly-wolly-doodle all the day:
Fare thee well, fare thee well,
Fare thee well, my fairy fay.
For I'm going to Louisiana
For to see my Susianna;
Sing Polly-wolly-doodle all the day.

You probably rubbed your eyes after reading the above, and we don't blame you.

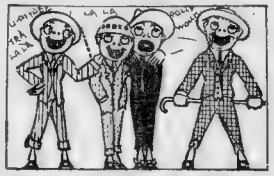
But this is not the national song of a lunatic asylum; it is instead a very popular ditty at our leading centres of sweetness and light, to wit, our universities. The greater the university the more persons there are to sing these words.

The above is the first spasm of a "college song," which is a different kind of song from any other.

The remaining lines, however, clamor for publication:

Oh, a grasshopper sitting on a railroad track,
A-picking his teef wid a carpet tack.

(Be sure to sprinkle plenty of "Polly-wolly-doodles.")



Oh, I went to bed, but it wasn't no use,
My feet stuck out for a chicken roost.
Behind de barn, down on my knees,
I thought I heard dat chicken sneeze.
He sneezed so hard wid de whooping-cough,
He sneezed his head and tail right off.

Isn't that a complete little affair? Lucid, and all that. Tells a connected story, too. A pip of a song—drama—poem.

It is necessary to understand the language in which the song is written to appreciate the full beauty of the song. There is not space here to run a dictionary or we should do so.

Another example may perhaps help the student:

The shades of night were falling fast,
Tra, la, la, tra, la, la.
As through an Alpine village passed,
Tra, la, la, la, la.
A youth who bore, 'mid snow and ice,
A banner with the strange device:
U-pi-dee-i, dee-i, da,
Upidee, Upida,
U-pi-dee-i, dee-i, da,
U-pi-dee-i-da!
Rrrrrrrrrrrrrrrr-Yah! yah! yah!
U-pi-dee-i, dee-i-da, u-pi-dee, u-pi-da!
U-pi-dee-i, dee-i-da, u-pi-dee-i-da.

The second song is in some respects better than the first. There is a greater flow of language, indicating that the singer's college education has progressed considerably since he merely dallied with "polly-wolly-doodle."

At first we had intended to comment on these songs—to explain them, as it were.

But on second thought we won't. Explanation is impossible.

Lafe Johnson is forchin' his tew boys and a girl tew write with ther left hands, believin' thet ther drawin' movement will be more savin' on pencils than ther drivin' movement uv right handers. Lafe is sew plaigged stingy he won't hev the hairs in his ears cut because it will make them stiff end wear out their towls when he washes.

Our new preacher hain't long fer these parts. Widow Blake, who does his wash', sez he hain't got one man's pairs uv unmentionables tew his name. She sez every pair is jest knee high end they hev three initials on em what ain't hisin by a long shot. She also sed thet she asked him of he hed ever bin in ther place wher ther tag sez they wuz made end he hain't never bin ther, nuther.

Jim Peterson's muskit busted when he shot her yisterdy. Ther stock went deown in ther field fifty rodd, end laid ther kickin' fer fifteen minues after he got tew et, sew Jim sez.

ALL EUROPE IS IN FLURRY, PREPARING FOR DREADED WAR

Rifles, Cannon, Machine Guns and Ammunition Scarce Even at Extortionate Prices.

BRITISH SQUADRON READY

By JOHN L. EDDY.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—There are not five thousand strictly modern rifles of any standard make suitable for warfare to be purchased at a reasonable price anywhere in Europe.

Machine guns are at a premium and almost unobtainable except by Powers who make them for themselves.

Cannon and ammunition available for immediate service are fetching extravagant prices.

Warships nearing completion can be sold at 50 to 100 per cent profit by any Power that has them building.

All powder factories, arsenals and armament works in Europe are working night and day at top pressure.

Such is the situation at the present moment. All Europe, and for that matter the larger part of Asia, is preparing feverishly for war on a scale never known before in world's history.

Many of the facts [illegible] are being gathered here and there from the Continental press. For instance, in Russia, a statement is made that the government tailors are now working overtime turning out army uniforms; but the main facts I get from a man whose business is to buy and sell weapons of warfare. In the past he has put through large [illegible] deals with States, not always small ones, that have wanted to get guns or ammunition without raising the suspicion of their neighbors, or who have desired to smuggle arms during wartimes in violation of neutrality laws.

Organization of Smugglers.

For [illegible] known there is a recognized trade [illegible] with its agents through [illegible] its [illegible] house of information, its [illegible] who are [illegible] in real life, its underwriters who take heavy risks for deep profits, its [illegible] business men who [illegible] generous shippers but who privately [illegible] sell and deliver [illegible] of war to prospective revolutionists and to needy governments in the throes of strife.

From another source [illegible] that [illegible] always proved reliable [illegible] that the [illegible] situation in Europe [illegible] newspapers, influenced by the stock market and anxious to avoid a scare, would have it appear [illegible] end of the Balkan war does not mean the end of Europe's troubles. It may mean only the beginning. Austria is determined that Servia shall not reach the sea [illegible] with Austria to prevent that happening. It is not a sudden, but a fixed [illegible] and there is a plan of action which can be put into immediate operation.

England Is Prepared.

England is prepared for Austrian intervention at any moment. Such a decision will mean [illegible] challenge by the Triple Alliance to Russia, and therefore to the Triple Entente. The Russian Ambassador [illegible] the outlook as being as black as possible, while at the German Embassy in London it is stated that the position adopted by Austria would be maintained at all costs. Russia is exercising her whole influence with France and England to get the undivided support of the Triple Entente for the Servian cause, and herein lies the chief danger of the situation.

Meanwhile determined effort is being made to induce the British government to purchase two dreadnoughts now building at Barrow on the Tyne for Turkey.

The question of payment for these ships is now problematical and as the work is now suspended upon them, the builders would probably dispose of them to the first buyer. Should the buyer be a continental government, the balance of power might be seriously altered at a moment when [illegible].

The British War Office has never been so busy as at present since the [illegible] with the Boers. Officers are working [illegible] late at night. All leaves have been cancelled. Woolwich and Enfield are working at high pressure to meet the demand upon the arsenals. By the end of next week a hundred thousand men will be ready with all munitions of war to be dispatched at a moment's notice to any scene of action.

Battle Squadron Ready.

At the navy dock yard during this week work has been hurried on all ships in drydock or being refitted and several battleships have left with secret orders for unknown destinations. The British Navy is declared to be fully prepared to deal with any emergencies which may arise. The lesson of the Russo-Japanese war when Russian warships were sunk without warning at the outbreak of hostilities and in their own harbors, even before they knew such an outbreak had occurred, and the Italo-Turkish war when Turkish vessels were summarily seized, has not been lost upon the admiralty.

Today as a consequence, and contrary to all earlier experience, a battle squadron is being held ready for war and all British warships are carrying fully charged ammunition and are permanently cleared for action by not having on board more boats or material of any kind than absolutely necessary.

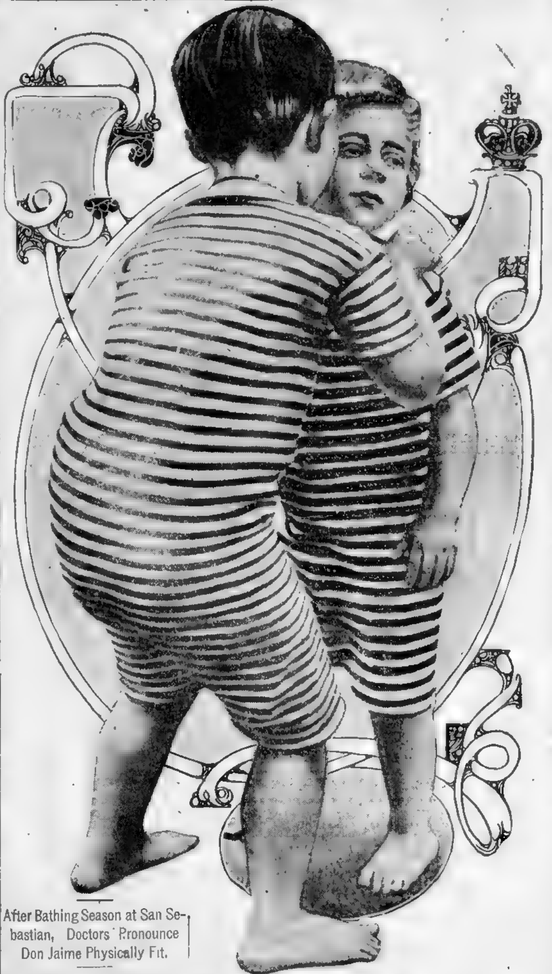
Certain obvious risks are run by this course, but its advantages in case of a sudden outbreak of war are held to more than counterbalance them.

The German Navy is doing likewise. There are rumors of Austrian and Russian army mobilization. The hounds of war throughout all the old world are tugging at the leash and it is not at all impossible that the anniversary of Napoleon's bloody campaigns in Europe may see events that will give a new meaning to the word Armageddon.

Queen Ena Makes Ducklets of Her Boys

Teaches Ladies of Her Court How to Swim

SPAIN'S HEIR TELLING SECRETS OF THE SEA TO HIS LITTLE DEAF BROTHER



After Bathing Season at San Sebastian, Doctors Pronounce Don Jaime Physically Fit.

MADRID, Nov 16.—That the youngster, the Prince of the Asturias, heir to the Spanish throne, has been enjoying himself immensely at San Sebastian, one of the most beautiful watering places in Europe on the Bay of Biscay, near the French frontier.

There King Alfonso has a residence, the unpretentious palace of Miramar, where the royal family pass most of the Summer and the early Autumn.

Queen Victoria, like so many English women, is very fond of sea bathing. She has taught her first-born and his younger brother, Don Jaime, to swim, and this peaceful experience in "naval operations" has greatly benefited both lads.

Nine distinguished physicians held a consultation on Don Jaime's condition, at San Sebastian, the other day. They announced that the little prince's mental and physical development is perfectly normal. But there has been no improvement in the affection of the ears which has afflicted him since birth.

The elder Prince, who is of an amiable and affectionate disposition, is devoted to Don Jaime and both are very happy in the company of their playmates, sons of grandees or cabinet ministers, whom the Queen invites to San Sebastian to ride ponies with her sons, to romp on the lawns with them or to splash in the sea.

Besides making ducklets of her boys, Queen Victoria has taught the ladies of the court the joys of swimming. Her Majesty established a swimming school at San Sebastian, the second Summer she was there. Her natatorial skill amazed the court ladies.

She rides a great deal, too. It is whispered that the Queen yearns to preserve the figure which captivated her lord and master, lest his fickle taste wander further.

German Defaulter Here.

BERLIN, Nov. 16.—Gustav Brunning, the messenger of the Dresdener Bank of Berlin who escaped with $50,000 of the bank's money, is in the United States. A letter from him was received by a former messenger at the bank, stating he was well and safe in Hoboken, and that he had had a fine journey across the ocean.

May de Sousa Files Action for Divorce

Husband Is Too Fond of Being Man of Leisure, She Says, and She Is Tired of It.

PARIS, Nov 16.—May de Sousa, the clever American actress, who two years ago married E. A. Haines of Rochester, N. Y., has not found married life the roseate and ecstatic state she pictured it. So she has entered suit for divorce in London.

Her success in America was only a slight reduction of the furore she created in Paris and generally in Europe. She is not filling an engagement in South Africa. She said that the ease with which she was able to make money seemed to strike a responsive cord in the heart of her husband, who concluded there was no use of two working if one could make enough for both. So he became a man of leisure. His wife said she could not provide for him, nor did she wish to, so she told him to go to work or somewhere else, any place, so long as she was rid of him. He declared, she says, that leisure had taken such hold of him that he could not work again. Then she sued for divorce.

MRS. RONALDS IS VERY ILL.

Son and Daughter with "Aunt Fannie" Constantly.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Mrs. Ronalds, known to intimates as "Aunt Fannie," is still seriously ill at her house in Cadogan place. Her son, Reginald, who was leaving for New York, and Mrs. Ritchie, her daughter, are in constant attendance on her mother, who is one of the most popular Americans in London.

For several years Mrs. Ronalds has been a great sufferer from rheumatism and now her heart is affected.

Mrs. Brown Potter's Hindu Master a Spy

Pretended to Instruct in Yogi Cult While Fomenting Sedition in India.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Mrs. James Brown Potter has not started on her Theosophical lecture [illegible] reason being that the [illegible] philosopher who has been giving [illegible] extremely expensive lessons in the Yogi cult now proves to be a [illegible] agent whose sole object in coming to this country is to foment sedition in India. Under these trying circumstances the fair Cora is reconsidering the situation. Meanwhile in intervals of taking astral walks with thousand-year-old celebrities, Mrs. Brown Potter is entertaining numerous American friends at her mother's home at Staines.

"Ye Olde Bridge House," as it is called, has been fitted up most attractively under Mrs. Potter's supervision. There are oak beams, blue china, not too much daylight and quantities of strange oriental curios.

The visitor is confronted at unexpected corners with mysterious red lamps or a kind of [illegible] associated with Eastern bazaars. Although Mrs. Brown Potter sold some of her curios she still possesses the brass bowl in which the executioner at Pekin placed his victims' heads and the wonderful Persian ware vase presented by an oriental who conceived a hopeless love for her and died the day she received it.

Lady Nevill Writing a Play.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Lady Dorothy Nevill, as a variation on the writing of delightful reminiscences, is now engaged on a play, the scene of which is laid in early Victorian days. Lady Dorothy is one of the few grand dames still remaining who have a vivid recollection of the time when Queen Victoria was young.

TEMPERAMENTS OF ARTISTS CLASH AT ORIENTALIST BALL

Challenges Exchanged by Famous Parisians at Studio of Isidora Duncan.

ARCHITECT GOES INTO EXILE

By PAUL PIERRE RIGNAUX.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—[illegible] given by Isidora Duncan [illegible] exponent of Grecian poetry of motion [illegible].

The ball was given at her famous studio at Neuilly, quite close to the grounds where [illegible] Barney of Washington has a Greek play performed [illegible] of her husband [illegible] painter [illegible] the greatest in Paris [illegible] of Italian [illegible] 5,000 years old.

Orientals Dance Turkey Trot

Everybody was in Oriental [illegible]. A striking figure was [illegible] the dressmaker, who was [illegible] like a Sultan. His wife was dressed also a Sultana and wore a pair of golden trousers. Madame [illegible] wore a flowing Grecian robe and had diamonds in her hair which were worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. Gunsbourgh [illegible] Porter danced the turkey trot with Madame Vely Bey, wife of the son of the Vice-Admiral of the Turkish fleet. Mme. Bey was formerly Mrs. Solomon Sturgess of Chicago. Paris singer, brother of the Princess de Polignac and of the late Duchess Decazes, posed as a Greek God.

The apple of discord was thrown when Henri Bataille, the playwright, kissed Isidora Duncan's foot. 'RUNAWAY MATCH' BY YOUNG WEST ENDERS

St. Joseph's Total Abstinence Society to Give Bright Comedy in Copley Hall.

The St Joseph's Total Abstinence Society of the West End will hold its annual musical comedy tomorrow evening in Copley Hall, Dartmouth street. "The Runaway Match" is the title of this year's offerings. It is to be produced under the personal direction of George A. C. Lard, assisted by Miss Katherine Conedy.

The comedy is in two acts and interspersed throughout with enjoyable sketches. The cast is made up of young men and women who made quite a reputation in theatricals in the West End section and other parts of Greater Boston.

Among those who will take leading parts in the show are: Miss Margaret F. Kelleher, Miss Katherine A. Dacey, Miss Helen M. Connelly, Miss Margaret Cuddy, Miss Rose Maguire, Miss Katherine E. Costello, Miss Dorothy Guild, Miss Mollie Dunham, Miss Anna L. Lynch, Miss Rita Barry, Miss Matilda Ratcliffe, Miss Rose Doherty, Miss Mabel Ling, Miss Evelyn McKenna, Miss Lucy Haggerty, Miss Narcissus Buton, Miss Anna Martin, Miss Bernadette Mahoney, Miss Elizabeth Driscoll, Miss Martha O'Loughlin, Miss Mary A. Blakeman, Miss Lillian Sweeney, Miss Mary E. Verney, Miss Helen A. Maguire, Miss Ella V. Leary, Miss Edna LaRoche, Miss Florence McCarthy, Miss Helen Blakeman, Miss Margaret Cummings, Miss Nellie Coffey, Miss Anna F. Corrigan, Miss Nellie Gargan.

Martin A. Hernan, John E. Lynch, Jr., Charles E. Mansfield, Martin F. Cummings, John L. Sullivan, Andrew J. Goodfellow, Charles J. Haley, James V. Stanton, Joseph H. Sheerin, Harry P. Walsh, Maurice Cronin, Robert Perrin, William J. Campbell, James P. Cummings, William Doherty, James F. McDonald, Richard E. Downey, Joseph O'Donnell, James E. Maguire, John A. McKenna, George F. Doherty, Patrick J. Grant, J. Frank McCarron, Maurice J. Henry, James A. Haggerty and Lawrence McGuinness.

At the conclusion of the second act there will be a reception to the company and invited guests. Among the latter will be Governor Foss, Lieutenant-Governor-elect David I. Walsh, Rev. Terrence P. Moriarty, pastor of St. Joseph's Church; Rev. Peter J. McCormick, spiritual director of the association, Rev. Florence J. Haldorn, president of the Archdiocesan Total Abstinence Union, and Rev. James H. Conroy, Rev. Joseph J. Smith and Rev. Walter I. Reeher, curates of St. Joseph's Church.

The arrangements are in charge of the following committee: William H. Cobbs, chairman; John L. Fitzgerald, secretary; James B. McKenna, treasurer; William M. Trenchard, Robert J. Hickey, Edward A. Menard, William J. Barry, Howard Dwyer and James P. McDonald.

A collation and dancing will close the evening's entertainment.

Funds for Needy in Charlestown

Women's Catholic Union Plans Social Function in the Interest of Charity.

An attractive social program has been arranged by the members of the Charlestown Women's Catholic Union for the purpose of securing funds for work among the needy children of the district.

On Tuesday evening the first evening whist will be held in the parlors for which attractive souvenirs have been procured. The parties are open to the public, to whom a cordial invitation is issued by the president, Miss Mary J. Riley.

One week later a lecture will be given in the Union Richard S. Tooling on his trip abroad with the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

The Rev. William Clark, recently appointed curate to the parish of St. Francis de Sales, will be the spiritual director of the society for the coming year.

The dressmaking and embroidery classes will be held on Friday evenings as heretofore. The instructors report good attendance in all classes. A portion of the proceeds of the parties will be used to help the work of the St. Vincent de Paul Society of the parish.

The fortieth anniversary of St. Peter's Parish Meeting House Hill Dorchester, will be observed in the form of a reunion to be held in Mechanics Building, Huntington avenue, next Wednesday evening. This reunion will be different from any held by the people of St. Peter's for some years, as it will be a gathering not only of the present parishioners but of all who have attended the church in the past.

The proceeds will be devoted to the building fund of the new parish hall, which is at present in course of construction on Bowdoin street.

The building is a long-cherished idea of Monsignor Peter Ronan, the pastor of the church, and when completed will be a monument to the Catholics of Dorchester. Interested in the coming reunion are, besides the pastor, his assistant priests, Rev. Edward Kenny, Rev. Hugh Blunt, Rev. Michael Dunphy and Rev. Michael Derby.

Sparing No Expense.

No expense is being spared to make the reunion the largest and most successful in the history of the parish. Tomorrow evening a procession of fifty automobiles of all kinds and sizes decorated in colored lanterns and blazing with red fire will proceed through the principal streets of Dorchester, in a pre-celebration of the event.

Every society connected with the church has taken hold of the affair with enthusiasm, and from the reports of the various committees a brilliant gathering is an assured fact.

Among the invited guests of the evening will be Governor Eugene N. Foss, Mayor John F. Fitzgerald and his family, and many of the State and city government officials.

Those in Charge.

The executive committees include Charles Logue, William J. Hennessey, J. J. Donovan, James E. Tealnor, Edward J. O'Neil, Peter J. Donaghue, Patrick Doyle, Patrick F. McDonald, John Dunnigan, E. F. Butler, E. F. McSweeney, William J. Hennessey, James Barry, James A. McElaney, John A. McCormick, Cornelius Murphy, James J. Byrne, James J. Smith, John W. Connolly, John F. Molloy, Patrick B. Brockton Knights of Fourth Degree

To Be the Hosts of Cardinal O'Connell and Justice DeCourcey.

BROCKTON, Nov. 16—Cardinal O'Connell will make his first visit to Brockton on November 27, when he will be tendered a reception by the Knights of Columbus of this city. The affair will be held in Clark Hall, and will be only for fourth degree members and their wives and friends.

A banquet will be served in the early evening after which the Cardinal will give an address. Justice DeCourcey of the Supreme Court is also expected to be present and give an address. Arrangements are being made for elaborate decoration of the hall and the event promises to be one not yet unsurpassed in Brockton.

His Eminence accepted the invitation through Edwin Mulready and Alfred W. Donovan of Rockland. The committee in charge of the reception includes Charles F. King, James A. Gorman of Bridgewater and Dr. Collins of Whitman.

PROMINENT WOMEN IN WORTHY CAUSE

President Gasson, Judge Keating and Monsignor Splaine Enlisted for Lectures.

Under the auspices of the League of Catholic Women, a mothers' sewing class will be opened on Friday afternoon in St. John's Hall, North square. Weekly sessions will be held throughout the Winter. The purpose of the class is to instruct Italian mothers in the art of practical needlework. During the session the children under school age will be placed in charge of a trained nurse in the temporary day nursery.

The class will be under the direction of a committee headed by Mrs. Thomas M. Devlin, and proposes many plans for the advancement of educational, industrial and practical training of residents of the North End.

The league is growing rapidly. Its present membership of 2,000 is just double that of the same month last year. An active Winter program is being planned by the members.

On Wednesday evening the Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., will deliver an illustrated lecture in Cathedral School Hall on "The French Revolution." Judge Patrick H. Keating will lecture on Saturday, November 23, on "Trial by Jury." Monsignor Splaine, rector of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, will talk on "Dante."

The newly established headquarters of the league at room 511, Cornett Building, Tremont street, afford many facilities for carrying on its work under the direction of the following officers: Mrs. James Dwight, president; Mrs. Charles Bruce Perkins, vice-president; Miss Katherine Mulvey, treasurer, Executive committee, Miss Josephine M. Beasley, Mrs. Mary Broderick, Mrs. Henry V. Cunningham, Mrs. M. M. Cunniff, Mrs. C. James Donnelly, Miss Mary Alice Cotter, Mrs. Thomas M. Devlin, Miss Mary A. Hickey, Mrs. T. B. Fitzpatrick, Mrs. J. Michel Galvin, Miss Adeline L. Horgan, Miss Estelle Jasigi, Mrs. Lawrence J. Logan, Mrs. Colin M. MacDonald, Mrs. Mary E. Mellen, Mrs. Julia C. Prendergast, Miss Maud M. Rockwell, Miss Mary E. Wahl.

SEVEN CAUSES AND MANY BAD EGGS

To Market at Premium Price, Poultryman Cannot Be Careless.

NO. 1'S MUST BE 2 OUNCES

Seven cases are responsible for most of the loss in marketing eggs, says N. E. Chapman, a Minnesota authority upon egg production and shipment. They are these:

Marketing small eggs.
Marketing dirties.
Unnecessary breakage.
Marketing eggs in which the chick has begun to develop.
Marketing shrunken eggs.
Marketing rotten eggs.
Marketing mouldy and ill-flavored eggs.

No eggs should be marketed, according to Mr. Chapman, that does not grade as a No. 1 in weight—that is weigh two ounces. A case of thirty dozen should weigh forty-five pounds net. Lighter eggs should be consumed at home, placed on the market, they lower standards and prices. Careful selection and breeding should be followed until the stock that produces light eggs is cleared out. To this end, the trap net will be helpful.

Ugh! That Dirty Egg!

Five eggs in a hundred are marketed dirty. Some are stained or smeared; others are merely muddy or filthy. But whatever produces the color is likely to be a substance that soaks through the shell and mis-flavors the contents. Clean nests and houses are indispensable to clean eggs.

Frequent gathering of eggs is also necessary, as the eggs are liable to soiling if left long in the nests. In rainy and muddy weather this is more than usually important. An egg once soiled is like a reputation—soiled forever. Washing of market eggs is to be avoided, for washing makes the egg take odor and become stale more rapidly. Eggs packed in bran are frequently classed as dirties, as the bran sticks to the shell.

Eight eggs of every hundred are broken before they reach the consumer. Even a slight dent in the shell renders the egg subject to quick deterioration and immediately lowers its price. To produce strong shells, the poultryman is advised to supply his hens liberally with such materials as grit and oyster shells.

The eggs should be collected only by careful handlers. Piling of eggs on one another in boxes or pails is one cause of breakage: the eggs should be placed at once in cases. Jolting in transportation is to be carefully prevented.

Floats and Blood-Rings.

No egg is prudently marketed by a poultryman who values his reputation if it has entered upon chick-development. True, eggs that has reached the stage only of "light float" are still eatable; but "heavy floats" and "blood-rings" are not wholesome, and their sale is inadvisable.

Development is of course the result of leaving eggs too long in the nest, where they undergo heating from broody hens or otherwise—as from the heat in Summer. Infertile eggs should be produced for the market as far as possible; hence the cocks should not run with the laying hens after the hatching season.

The egg substance is 65 per cent. water, and the egg shell is porus. Result, evaporation and shrinkage—loss of weight and substance. The larger the air cell the further shrinkage has advanced, making allowance, however, for the effect of temperature in expanding or contracting. Hence the air-cell test is not wholly dependable. Candling is one test for shrunken eggs. Shaking is another; a perceptible gurgle shows a doubtful egg.

Holding eggs over is poor practice. In the Summer eggs should receive as much care as cream, and be marketed daily. Even in Autumn, holding is not best. Drafts of warm air, moisture, high temperature, sunlight—exposure to any of these is bad for the egg, and holding the egg increases the chance of exposure before it reaches market.

Some More "Bad" Eggs.

For market purposes, a rotten egg is "one you would not want your wife or children to receive as food." Moisture is the main cause of egg rotting. It weakens the resistance of the shell, permitting bacteria to enter and set up decay.

Nests on the ground, in wet straw, in damp buildings or in cellars, are responsible for many rotten eggs; so are damp cases. A rotten egg produced by decay in an egg that has been heated, is technically known as a "dead germ." Other classes of rotten eggs are "black" rots, "white" rots, and "spots."

Fresh eggs are as ready to take up odors and flavors as is milk. Hence mould or mustiness in cases, fillers, nests, packing or even the air of the room, will mis-flavor them. Keeping them near fruits, vegetables, fish, etc., is dangerous. Moreover, the food and drink—such as filthy water, musty grain, onions, and decaying vegetables or meat—may communicate an ill flavor to the egg.

Only the greatest care and cleanliness will turn out eggs that are up to the right market standard.

CROWN CORN KING IN NEW ENGLAND

It Surpasses Roughage in Value Per Acre, Food Elements and Energy.

By DR. THOMAS F. HUNT,
Ex-Director Pennsylvania State College Station.

There is no area in the United States better adapted to the production of grass than the eastern part but for a century it has lacked cattle. The tide has now turned. Western lands are no longer uncapitalized; pioneer farming has in a large degree forever disappeared in the United States. The East is rapidly coming into its own.

Corollary to the fact that the East is adapted to the production of trees and grass is the fact that the East raises relatively large amounts or roughage or bulky foods and relatively small amounts of concentrates or grains. The nine North Atlantic States, i. e., the New England States, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, produced in 1910 four times as many acres of hay as corn, while the North Central States west of the Mississippi River produced more than three times as many acres of corn as of hay. The ratio of hay to corn is, therefore, twelve times as great in the East as in the North Central States mentioned. In other words, while these North Central States produce an excess of concentrates, the Eastern States produce an excess of roughage. The folowing table suggests the extent of these relationships:

ACRES OF HAY AND CEREALS IN 1910.

Total Land Area.	Nine North Atlantic States	Seven North Central States
Hay	12,37[illegible]	11,1[illegible]
Corn	2,705,000	38,77[illegible]
Total cereals	8,[illegible]	84,848,000

It is of the greatest importance that the bearing which this circumstance has upon agricultural practice should be understood. Broadly speaking, the food value of any substance depends upon its palatability, and upon the percentage of digestible protein and of total energy which a particular animal may recover in useful work. Without going into details, it may be stated that the percentage of the total energy derived from a specific food by a given animal will depend upon the percentage of food digested and the work of digesting it.

It has been computed that when Indian corn is fed to ruminants, 46 per cent. of the total energy of it is lost, while 74 per cent. of the total energy of mixed hay and 94 per cent. of the total energy of wheat straw are lost in the process of digestion. The total net energy of these three products stands as folows: 54-26-6. The energy value may be stated similarly. A German authority has computed the energy values as 82.7 for average meadow hay, and 126.8 the hundred pounds for Indian corn, when fed to horses.

The bearing which these facts have upon corn-growing in the East may be shown by referring to the series of fertilizer experiments that has been made at the Pennsylvania Station during the past thirty years.

AVERAGE ANNUAL YIELD DURING TWENTY FIVE YEARS.

Corn, ears	[illegible]	$[illegible]	180
Corn, stover	[illegible]	[illegible]	40
Oats, grain	[illegible]	12.27	192
Oats, straw	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Wheat, grain	[illegible]	[illegible]	106
Wheat, straw	2,[illegible]	[illegible]	6
Hay	3,009	19.05	135

These figures may be condensed into a table that will bring out the comparison in a more striking manner, as shown below:

DIGESTIBLE PROTEIN, ENERGY VALUE AND FARM VALUE PER ACRE.

	Digestible Protein pounds.	Energy value Therms.	Farm value.
Corn	[illegible]	[illegible]	$[illegible]
Oats	121	1,[illegible]	14.40
Wheat	114	1,[illegible]	18.67
Hay	185	1,232	19.50

The importance of corn in eastern agriculture is plainly emphasized whether considered from the standpoint of digestible protein, energy value, or money value. It would seem probable that Indian corn has not yet reached its limit in price compared with the other three crops. Its energy value is approximately three times as great, while its farm value per acre has been only about twice that of other crops. The above table also explains why land, which is especially adapted to Indian corn, is high in price.

It does not follow from what has been said that the individual will find it more economical to attempt to raise a large proportion of his concentrates. It may be more profitable for him to buy his corn from his Western neighbors, so long as they are willing to allow the fertility of their farms to be transferred at a reasonable price to those of their Eastern neighbors.

EDITOR'S ACRE

By PROF. R. W. NEAL.

TWISTING THE FARMER'S FACE TOWARD OPPORTUNITY.

THE village dweller buys his farm produce of dealers, not of farmers.

Why?

The farmers round about the villages sell their farm produce to dealers, not to consumers.

Why?

One answer is, that the farmer always has sold thus to grocers and to grain dealers; therefore they keep on doing it.

Another answer is, that the grocers and the grain dealers make their living largely by buying farm produce to resell it to consumers at a higher price. They are convenient buyers, and often the only buyers of whom the farmer knows; and in many little ways they have fostered the idea in the farmer's mind that they are the only buyers he can reach.

But there is a much better market just as convenient. That is—the market offered by the community itself, in which these dealers live. If poultrymen, truck-gardeners and farmers generally were to make a campaign to secure customers in the village, near which they live, they would often find themselves able to dispose of all they raise at better prices than the dealer pays.

And if the consumers who find that they pay a higher price for an older and perhaps stale and deteriorated article, should persistently make the farmer realize that the public is ready to buy good produce at a fair price, they would soon get him trained to bring his supplies to them instead of to the dealer. The farmer would benefit, the consumer would benefit, and the dealer would—learn.

FEWER "FUTURES" IN APPLES.

GAMBLING in apple futures is on the decline. The increase of cold storage threatens to do away with it.

The custom of the apple grower has been to market his apples on the tree or in the barrels soon after he gathered them. When he figured on their value he figured on what they would bring him in October or even earlier. At that time, however, they were worth little, for they were not yet in condition or demand for consumption.

Weeks or even months had to pass before demand would be at the best. The buyers knew this, but they knew also that if they bought the apples in the Fall at a low price they would command the market later on and be able to charge a higher price.

Now, however, cold storage is changing this. Farmers' companies and fruit growers' associations are building cold storage plants, and individual farmers are hiring room in these storage houses. Live business farmers are also constructing cold storage houses of their own. The result is that a large number of growers are able themselves to hold their fruit for the better prices that will be paid later in the year.

The buyers, being no longer able to control the market entirely, are often slow to buy. Uncertain how completely they can fix their selling price later on, they are cautious about paying a reasonable price now, knowing that growers can place their cold-stored fruit upon the market to suit their own judgment and that this will "break" any ficticious price set by dealers.

Small growers who cannot command cold storage facilities are suffering, for the time being, as a consequence of this; for their Fall market has been lessened. But, like many other things, this is unavoidable although unfortunate. In the meantime gambling in apple futures on the part of dealers seems likely to be permanently lessened.

LONG LEGS, PINK BODY RUINS CLOVER BLOW

Larvae of Minute Active Fly Prevent Seed from Forming in Depth of Flower.

Dasyneura leguminicola Lint.

According to the experts of the Oregon Agricultural College, that is the easy little name of the midge responsible for the failure of many a clover blossom to bear seed.

England, Ontario, and most of our own states where red clover is grown, says A. L. Lovett, an investigator, are troubled with this pest. Red clover is its favorite host plant. White clover and alsike, however, and also mammoth clover, it is suspected, are attacked. The tiny larvae hide themselves in the buds and feed on the soft juicy contents of the seed ovaries. The injury grows more serious in an infested field from year to year.

The mother fly is somewhat a lady of fashion—petite, slender, graceful and long of leg, and dressing in a pinkish coat. She has but one pair of wings, and is so small that she is seldom noticed in the field. But when it comes to placing eggs, the little midge is equipped for downright business. The ovipositer, or egg-placer, is twice as long as the body of madame fly herself, reaching far down into the blossoms.

Nature is not altogether well disposed toward the little pink lady of the clover field, and has provided a number of enemies to render her life less certain. Spring and early Summer pasturing of the fields is helpful in destroying her influence. Cutting the crop early will also help to decrease the midges, although it also cuts down the yield of hay somewhat. This may be made up, however, by the heavier yield of seed. Still another method of saving the crop is that of cutting back the field just after it starts. This will delay the heading of the plants until too late for the second family of flies.

Although the larvae, or maggots, have been found abundantly in the mangers after clover hay was fed, it has not yet appeared that they injure the stock or lessen the hay yield. Their injury is confined to the destruction of the seed.

APPLES OF RECORD SIZE.

L. A. Hayward of the Ashmont Poultry Farm in West Boxford, Mass., has grown apples of the famous Baldwin variety which have attracted much attention. Displaying one remarkably large apple, Mr. Hayward said:

"The tree from which this apple was picked is supposed to be about 100 years old and the apple when picked some six weeks ago, weighed just 16¾ ounces. In ripening, however, it shrunk ¾ of an ounce. The apple measures 13¼ inches in diameter one way and 13¾ inches the other, and it is perfect in every respect. There were a few more at 14 ounces and a bushel or more at 14 and 15 ounces from the same tree. The tree was a prize winner when in full fruitage."

Girls Canning Clubs Win Money and Keep Them on the Farm

Americans have always known that girls are clever, and the Department of Agriculture proves it, and here is the proof.

A few years ago the late Professor Knapp began forming girls' tomato growing clubs in the South. There are now about 25,000 girls enrolled in twelve States, and in Oklahoma alone their efforts have been worth a million dollars.

The girls were taught canning by experts and the results have astonished the government officials. Here is an instance: A farmer who had a fine orchard could not sell his fruit to advantage. He happened to see one of these canning exhibitions and invested $150 in a home plant and canned all the fruit on his place at a profit of $6,000.

So far the figures from Oklahoma are the only ones available, but indications are that in Alabama and Mississippi the girls have done even better.

This is the kind of thing that will help to reduce the high cost of living.

There Is Money in This Farmer's Pledge

Living Up to Promise, Minnesota will Establish a Reputation for Its Eggs.

"In order to establish the reputation and maintain the quality of Minnesota eggs," runs the pledge that many farmers in Minnesota have taken, "I do hereby pledge myself:

"To gather eggs twice daily.

"To grade them properly, using 'small,' 'checks' and 'dirties' on the farm.

"To market my eggs at least twice a week, if possible, in standard cases containing twelve or fifteen dozen full-sized (two-ounce), clean, uniform eggs.

"And personally to guarantee their freshness."

This pledge is being taken at the urging of the extension department of agriculture in the State university. Under similar pledges or under contracts to the same effect various neighborhoods in Minnesota have been able to sell the total output of standard eggs at a premium price. The extension department believes that the same result will follow wherever such a pledge is taken and observed.

Many Aliens Are Proving New England Soils Produce Abundant Crops.

By W. R. MERRICK.

ALIENS who "go back to the soil" in New England are almost invariably successful. Battling against obstacles which would discourage the average American, they persist in their efforts until they become the owners of property and are free from the danger of poverty and the perils of helplessness in old age.

Americans who are not temperamentally fitted to wrest a living from the soil often find the obstacles to success insurmountable and return to the cities to toil under conditions which, to them, are more congenial.

But the foreigner, no matter how unskilled he may be, seldom fails when he is given a piece of land and an opportunity to dig his living from the soil.

All around Boston one finds "new Americans" who are cultivating small tracts of land and amazing the New Englander by their energy and ambition. That the foreigner will succeed under conditions which Americans have found discouraging, is so obvious as to need no demonstration. The alien [illegible] builds up a bank account while tilling farms which have been abandoned in despair by Americans.

Hard Work Wins.

On the North Easton-Canton Junction branch of the New Haven are two Italian families who are supplying a large area with vegetables in and out of season, and the land they are tilling yielded unprofitable crops when cultivated by others. The head of the more prosperous of the two families cannot read nor write in either his own or in the English language and his only knowledge of progressive methods is obtained from seed catalogues which are read to him by one of his young sons.

The industry of the Italian, coupled with the knowledge he acquired across the ocean, makes him successful. His expenses are low, he has no aspirations to live or dress beyond his means, and he toils incessantly from daylight until far into the night.

It may be said that nothing goes to waste on the farm which is operated by a foreigner. The writer is acquainted with an Italian who, by utilizing every possible fertilizing element, has restored an abandoned farm and has created a soil which is marvelously productive. His present prosperous condition is primarily due to the upbuilding of his land and to the raising of two and three crops a year on the same ground. Crops are always planted between the rows of early vegetables, and a first crop is sold long before his less active neighbors are getting results from their gardens.

An industrious French-Canadian—a day laborer—has carved a small farm out of land covered with scrub timber which was considered as practically worthless. An old henhouse which was sold for $5, furnished nearly all the material used in the building of this ambitious man's house. In five years he has become the owner of a comfortable house and has cleared enough land to raise vegetables for the village market. And during those five years he clung to his old job, working on his own place nights and mornings.

To the wives and children must be given credit for much of the success of the foreigner. They are helpers the like of which are seldom if ever seen on a farm operated by an American.

Doesn't Need Money.

The foreigner requires neither training nor capital, but the American must have one or the other. The alien possesses qualifications which make up for the lack of money and education.

There is a strong impression among Americans that Italians do not settle on the land when they come over here. They see the floating thousands of laborers that go about working on railways and street improvements and they come to the conclusion that the Italian farmer in this country is practically an unknown quantity. This is a mistaken impression. Italians always have taken up land when they could, and they are increasingly disposed to do so.

It is a matter of general knowledge among Italians, for instance, that nearly all the abandoned farms of Connecticut have been taken up by immigrants in recent years, and all around Greater Boston one finds foreigners tilling the soil. In Millis, Medway and Hudson are colonies of Jews who have proved their right to be called enterprising farmers.

The Poles as farm hands have won the respect of their employers and as farmers, they have long been credited with fortune achievements.

There is one point in which the Italian farmer is marked-off from the American who works beside him. The Italian is, in this country as in Italy, primitive in his methods of farming. He does not use tools and machinery. He works with his hands. He is a long way from the point of mechanical efficiency that the up-to-date American farmer has reached.

But in spite of this he manages to compete successfully with the American. The same primitiveness which makes him use his hands instead of machinery and which thus limits his output gives him fewer wants than the American knows. He is frugal in his habits and he works most industriously. His wife and children do not want luxuries, or even many of what the American would call necessities, and they all help the man in his work.

200 EGGS IN A YEAR WIN FAME FOR A HEN

Few Birds Attain That Record and Many Don't Pay for Their Board.

MARVELS OF POULTRY YARD

Recent egg laying contests prove that hens producing 200 eggs in twelve months are making exceptional records. Amateurs and others who are lacking in experience, and who have won wealth—on paper—by getting 365 eggs from each hen of a flock of 1,000 are no doubt surprised by the performances of the hens in the Connecticut contest.

The best individual record made at Storrs was 254 eggs in a year, but the pen of five, of which this bird was one, totaled only [illegible] eggs, an average of about [illegible]. The hen scoring 254, a Rhode Island Red of the single comb variety, is worth as much as a good horse, and probably could not be bought for $250.

The White Leghorn pen which carried off first prize made a record of 1,071, or 214 eggs for each bird in the pen. Another flock of white Leghorns passed the 1,000 mark and the White Wyandottes winning third place yielded 1,009 eggs during the year.

There are several instances where hens laid eggs for many days in succession. Every hen in some of the pens produced an egg a day for a week, but none of the layers approached the record-making performance of the White Plymouth Rock in the Missouri contest. This hen laid eighty-two eggs in eighty-two consecutive days, more than the average bird on the farm lays in an entire year.

234 in 11 Months.

Dr. Prince T. Woods of Silver Lake, Mass., a poultry writer of renown, says that an apparently authentic record was made by a light Brahma hen of 234 eggs in eleven months in 1898. A Brown Leghorn hatched in 1896 made a trap-nest record of 257 eggs in her pullet year and 210 eggs in her second year of laying. Since that time breeders of most of the popular varieties have claimed individual egg records of [illegible] eggs in twelve months for exceptional hens.

It is well to doubt stories of amazing production until the reported records have been authenticated.

If hens which are known to be layers of exceptional qualities cannot produce more than 200 eggs under ideal conditions, it is not advisable to accept records in which there is an element of doubt.

If conditions are perfect and the flock has come from stock of egg-laying quality, 200 eggs a year is possible. This record is attained, but it is extraordinary and is not equaled by mongrel flocks or birds of uncertain ancestry.

Record of Pen of 22.

On the Ashmont Poultry Farm at West Boxford is a pen of twenty-two Rhode Island Reds which under the care of an experienced keeper have made a record. The daily average of the flock for eight months beginning January 1 of the current year was seventeen eggs, at the rate of 205 for each individual for twelve months. In the management of his birds L. A. Hayward of the Ashmont Farm has shown what selection and breeding will do in the improving of a flock. These hens were bred to lay. Their eggs are dark brown in color and unusually large.

Blue ribbon winners have received more than their just share of publicity. The hen which is built according to the standard of perfection and wins prizes at big shows may be and is worth while, but it is the layer and meat producer which interests the farmer.

The farmer has devoted little or no attention to his chickens and may be feeding hens of no value. A study of recent investigations proves that in some instances the owners of flocks are supporting hens which are costing them a dollar a year.

Under average conditions a 200-egg hen will net her owner from $2.50 to $3 a year—from market eggs alone and if her ability as a producer is established by the aid of the trap nest her eggs may sell for several dollars a sitting.

RURAL MAIL-BAG

NORTHERN VERMONT AND APPLES.

Rural Mail-Bag

I have a chance to get a forty-five acre farm in Northern Vermont at a good price. Would you advise me to take this proposition and go into apple growing? LANSING.

Some kinds of apples grow well in Northern Vermont, such are the Fameuse, McIntosh and Northern Spy. These three do very well there. If the land is good apple land and apples do well in that neighborhood you are safe.

NO FORTUNE IN THE SOAP NUT.

Rural Mail-Bag

A man in the village has been trying to sell me his stock in a soap-nut plantation. It sounds good and I know that he needs the money, which [illegible] his reason for selling. Is it true that grease-removers are manufactured from this product? N. L.

DRY FEED DECREASES MILK.

Rural Mail Bag

Why do my cows drop off in their milk about the middle of October here? I have noticed it now for three or four years. DAIRY.

Without fuller facts one cannot tell. It looks, however, as if the drop in milk comes about the time you take the cows off the pasture and put them upon dry feed entirely. If you have not made provisions to give the cows green feed after the pasture is done they are very likely to drop off in their milk. For the best results in milk production you should arrange some method by which you will be able to supply the cows a considerable ration of green feed even in the Winter months. In our section of the country siloed corn is important in this respect. Soiling crops of rye vetch and the like can also be made to yield green feed for the dairy cow as can oats, clover, alfalfa planted at different times. Kale and roots can also be used. If you do not already give your dairy cows thirty or thirty-five pounds of green feed along with the dry feed, you will find it profitable to change your ration to include the succulent feed.

Toys that gladden the hearts of our dear little ones

The "Schoenhut" Humpty Dumpty Circus Toys

Did you ever know a child that didn't love the circus? Well, here's one the boys and girls can have for their very own. Performing animals, wonderful acrobats, daring bareback riders, trick donkeys, caged lions and tigers with their trainers, the funniest clowns that Barnum ever saw, all ready to do their marvelous acts for the child that owns them. Ten-thousand-and-one new tricks and all performed with the utmost ease. The "Schoenhut" Humpty Dumpty Circus Toys open up a new world of fun and frolic in every home they enter. Each piece is strongly made of wood and jointed like a French doll. Painted with oil paint, so the color can't come off. No plaything ever brought so much joy to the little folks. You can start with a small circus and gradually add to it. Ask your dealer to show you the "Schoenhut" Humpty Dumpty Circus Toys—if he cannot, send us his name and we will send you illustrated literature.

The "Schoenhut" All-Wood Perfection Art Dolls

The most beautiful, winsome little people that ever came out of Toyland

The most wonderful dolls that ever won the hearts of childhood. Boys with roguish smiles and girls of queen-like beauty—they are all real, live, lovable friends to the little folks.

The "Schoenhut" Doll is truly an artistic creation. The faces were modeled by a famous sculptor. They are practically unbreakable. The entire doll—head as well as body and limbs—is made of wood, jointed with our patent steel springs and swivel joints—no rubber cord used. They can assume and hold any natural pose—running, jumping, dancing, skipping, sitting or standing. They are painted with oil colors and may be washed without injury. Dressed in reproductions of real children's clothes. No matter how many dolls your children have, they won't have a real doll until you get them a "Schoenhut" All-wood Perfection Art Doll. Ask your dealer to show them to you. If he cannot, send us his name and we will send you illustrated literature.

Something New and Wonderful

An Eight-Day Alarm Clock Built Upon a New Mechanical Principle by which it Cannot Vary in Time so much as Five Seconds in a Whole Year.

THIS is the new wonder of the age. It is the only-eight-day alarm clock ever made. You wind the clock and the alarm once, and it runs and alarms for eight long days.

All you do when you go to bed is to press a little lever on the front of the clock. That sets the alarm. When you are awakened in the morning, you shut it off. No winding, no setting and no forgetting.

But even these conveniences are not the most wonderful part of this alarm clock.

This alarm clock cannot vary five seconds in the year.

It is as accurate a timekeeper as any watch for which you might pay hundreds of dollars. It is as invariable as the costliest Swiss movement ever produced.

The third wonderful feature of this remarkable clock is that it does not cost any more than any other good alarm clock.

This is the first time it has ever been presented to the American public through the pages of a magazine.

It has been tried and tested for five years. It is the marvel of all jewelers and watch makers, and they understand fully that it is bound, on account of its mechanical principles, to take the place of every other alarm clock on the market.

Now, a clock is run by a power just the same as a steam engine or an electric light plant. The clock's power happens to be spring power — that is the only difference.

The mechanical feature of this clock which makes it absolutely perfect as a timekeeper, is that the power is always the same. This clock could not go any faster or any slower if it wanted to. It has simply got to go always the same. It has got to keep time.

When you wind the ordinary alarm clock, the movement either stands still or goes backward.

When you wind this clock — and remember you have only to wind it once in eight days — the power goes on exactly the same. It does not vary, because by the mechanical principle upon which it is built, it cannot vary.

Can you imagine getting such a clock for the price you would pay for an ordinary alarm clock?

These three features ought to be enough to put this alarm clock into every home in America, because; first of all, no alarm clock was ever before made with an eight-day alarm; second, no alarm clock was ever made which was ever guaranteed or even supposed to keep absolutely perfect time; and third, because the price is no greater than that of any other good alarm clock.

And still we have not even mentioned the exceptional beauty of this new clock.

This alarm clock is 9 x 12 inches in size. It is set in a handsome mahogany finished frame. It is finished above with a gold plated metal handle of good taste. So that it is as handsome as an ornament as it is useful as a clock.

It becomes at once an elegant mantel clock, an absolutely accurate timepiece as accurate as if you had paid two hundred dollars for it — and an alarm clock eight times as convenient as any other alarm clock because it only has to be attended to once every eight days.

We have called this wonderful new alarm clock — and it is wonderful — The National Alarm Clock, because by it and through it, we ultimately expect to wake up a nation.

No man would travel in a spring wagon if he could get a special train for the same price.

This National Alarm Clock is fully guaranteed, of course. It is put out by the great Western Merchandise and Supply Company and that of itself should be sufficient guarantee. However, there is also the money-back guarantee given out with every clock.

You are the first to be told about this really remarkable improvement in alarm clocks. It is fully as wonderful as we say it is. Beyond any question, it will take the place of every other alarm clock on the market. However, you shall be the judge of this.

Please fill in the following coupon, mail it to us to-day and you shall be the first to know all about this great National Eight-Day Alarm Clock, what its remarkably small price is and how to get it.

Please fill in this coupon and mail it now.

ELINOR GLYN

AUTHOR of "Three Weeks" and "WHY!"

Chapter I

HALF an hour ago the butler announced "Sir Hugh Dremont."

I was helping Harriet, the head housemaid, to arrange the ground floor library curtains as I liked, and was up on the stepladder, quite unprepared for visitors, but Harriet went out of the room hurriedly and I got down and shook hands.

"I have disturbed you," Sir Hugh said, but he made no apology, so I answered as well as I could:

"You are such a near neighbor. I am very glad to see you—won't you sit down?"

He looked bored—but he sank into one of the uncomfortable chairs.

"I did not know if you were ready to receive visitors yet," he said, "but I was riding past and was only going to leave a card when your servant said you were at home."

"I am arranging this room," I answered. "The house has been neglected for so long. My husband has not been here for twenty years, and I had never seen it before a fortnight ago, when we came."

We said a few more ordinary things, and I had time to take in his appearance.

He is very tall and thin, and stoops rather, which is what I do not like, and his face is as stern as a face can be, and he has very small whiskers, cut very close, which gives him a strange, old-fashioned look. One expects to see a stock. His nose is large and rather aquiline, and his eyes are large and deeply set, but I do not know of what color they are—dark blue or gray, I expect. He looks indifferent and disagreeable.

He must be at least thirty-five, because I remember Humphrey speaking of his coming of age as an event which took place just before our marriage, and that will be fourteen years ago this May.

It is absurd that I should find thirty-five old, considering that I am nearly thirty myself, but I have never had anything but old people about me—who are cross or tired of life—and I long for something young and joyous, who still believes in things.

I was not unhappy, only strangely, tenderly moved, and perhaps it spoke through the playing.

Algernon is only thirteen. He does not believe in very much more than Humphrey does. They are distressingly alike, my son and his father. Sir Hugh did not seem to be taking much interest in our conversation. He stared out of the window most of the time, and then he said suddenly:

"There is the General coming across the lawn. By Jove! How little changed he is!"

My gaze followed his, and it seemed that I took in Humphrey with fresh eyes, and I realized it was true; for, except that his hair is white in places, and his glance is more fierce, and the sardonic expression round his mouth is cut in two deep lines, he does not look very different from the beau tenebreux whom my father brought into the schoolroom, and after, it told me I was to marry in a few weeks.

Humphrey was only seventeen, and I was nearly seventeen.

But I always hate to think of those old days. How frightened I was of him, and am still!

His raspish voice and arrogant, overbearing manner have increased with time. My sister Letitia says he was very attractive when I married him, and had been the loveliest, most beloved of desirable women, but I never was able to see his charm.

"You have been out of England for years, have very sad." Sir Hugh sighed as Humphrey and I stepped from the carriage in the garden entrance. "And your tenants were seldom here. They villagers will be glad you have come back at last."

Humphrey always said a home was a great encouragement to one's military duty," I answered, "and he would not return until he was free. Then since he left the army we have wandered about abroad for the last three years, because the Morleys' lease was not yet up, but now I suppose we shall remain here for the rest of our lives."

"His part of the world is very isolated. You will find there are hardly any neighbors, and only one or two of the old people left besides myself," said Sir Hugh looking at me considerably and showing singularly strong white teeth as he smiled a little. "Perhaps he is not so disagreeable after all.

"I like solitude. That is why I spend so much time at Minton Dremont," he went on. "Your husband is such an old friend of mine. I hope you will come and dine with me some day soon."

At this moment Humphrey opened the door and came in with a crisp hearty greeting.

They talked about the world they knew, and then of horses, and what were the hunting prospects for the season, and what had been the record of last.

It must be nice to have some absorbing interest like that, which makes you friendly at once with people, and bridges the years. I felt stupid and stiff while I spoke with Sir Hugh alone. I have always been obliged to conceal my real feelings and tastes, and never have been allowed to enjoy them, so that now I seem always to wear a mask and answer like an automaton.

Humphrey speaks of everything as his—never ours. To hear him you would think he was the only person in the case. He is going to have this or that tree cut. He is going to do so and so with the garden.

"I hope I will soon be settled comfortably, and then my sister and I will dine with pleasure," he said finally, and Sir Hugh prepared to go.

"It is awfully interesting this house," he told me, as we walked with him through the vaulted stone passage to the entrance hall, full of histories and thrilling stories. "We are very proud of it in the neighborhood, on account of its age."

Humphrey walked on ahead.

"I hate old houses," I said, as we shook hands. "I hate everything old. Good-by."

He looked at me curiously, and the first gleam of cognizance came into his eyes. And now I am awaiting the arrival of Letitia—my brilliant and successful sister Letitia who is not afraid of Humphrey—of anything in the world.

Letitia came in her motor. She always has the latest thing, and although she is ten years older than I am, no one would ever know it. I wish I saw her oftener. She brings me such glimpses of the world, and is so deliciously garish and credible and up-to-date.

I almost love her, for as a child, after our mother died, when I was ten and she was twenty, and I was so glad when she made that brilliant marriage and we saw no more of her. She was reluctantly going to bring me out in my eighteenth year, when Humphrey took this wild fancy to me, and she and my father practically carried it through, four weeks before I was seventeen. Henry Grey is rich and very careful with his money, and I have not a penny of my own, that is why I am so heartless, I suppose.

"My dearest girl, Letitia said. "You do waste yourself more than ever; it makes me cross each time I see you. You are extraordinarily attractive-looking, you know. Go! Leave, with your demure air and rebellious gleam in the eyes, and although you are nearly thirty you look a mere girl. I can't think how you keep so slender. If you were only better dressed I do not know that you could have so much success."

"Indeed—what could I do?

Letitia leaned back and laughed

"Yes, I know," she answered. "Humphrey did keep you absolutely shut up with his old sister all those first years of your marriage after you left India did not suit you. It must have been insufferable, of course, but since he left the army you have wandered about abroad. At all events, you cannot have picked up a more creative boo—"

"I have never been out in the street alone, even," I said, "and I have never been allowed to talk to a man or have any intimate friends. One atrophies after a time."

"It is quite ridiculous," Letitia exclaimed, startled, as though she suddenly realized something for the first time.

"We have all looked up on you as a child. I expect," she said rather hurriedly, "but now you have come back to England and this charming place, you must wake up and see your kind—though how people can live in the country all the year round, I don't know! Neighbors are always duties and bores—there is no one to amuse you probably. The Essendens are too far off, and the Perwoods too poor,—but I forgot; Humphrey's land touches Minton Dremont. Have you met him yet? Hugh Dremont?"

"Yes, he came to call just now."

Chapter II

"WHAT do you think of him?"

"He is rather disagreeable-looking, and it is so old in these days having those whiskers."

"You perfect goose!" and Letitia laughed. "If you only knew the world a little better you would know that is just his chic. He wears them because he wants to. He does not care a farthing what anyone thinks of him. He is the most utterly unapproachable, cynical, attractive creature imaginable. I have not a friend who has not tried her hand at him, and he is perfectly brutal in his methods with them, or used to be. He has almost retired into his shell in these last years. It is perhaps your luck that you have come to live near him."

"I did not find him attractive," I said, and then wondered if I were telling the truth.

Letitia leaned back and laughed.

"I can only spare these two nights with you, pet," she announced, "just long enough to tell you what you must have done to this place to make it habitable and then I must tear on to town."

"There is no use your telling me anything, Letitia," I interrupted her. "You must use your clever way with Humphrey when you make him think he has suggested what you want and that you are against it, he gives in sometimes. I have no influence with him."

Letitia kissed me lightly as she got up from her chair. "Poor little Guinevere," she said; "it is quite time you were rescued." Then she asked in a different tone:

"How is Algernon?"

"You will see him to-morrow. He has not gone back to his school," I told her. "He goes to Eton at the autumn term."

"Children are a frightful bore. I am so thankful Langthorpe is so devoted to his nephew. He has never regretted our having none. Algernon is too like Humphrey to be altogether a comfort."

"Yes," I allowed.

"I have noticed that," she went on, "either, when a woman is passionately in love, the child is the image of what she thinks the man is—or it she is—as you were, Guinevere—asleep and unknowing, the child is like the man with his worst qualities. If the man is a self-centered creature like Humphrey—strong natures produce some definite thing. Humphrey reproduced himself, you being practically a nonentity in the affair."

"Probably."

"Guinevere—you are not going to remain a nonentity always, are you?"

"I don't know," I said, and then something made me almost cry aloud. "Oh, if you knew, Letitia, how I want to live—before it is too late!"

She looked at me strangely. "The worst of you would be that you would take it too seriously, I fear. You could not frivol, Guinevere, and then you would make a faux pas, and then we should have a family scandal."

But I controlled my momentary emotion and reassured her.

"I still have my sense of humor," I said. "Now, we ought to go and dress."

At dinner Letitia did her best to charm Humphrey, who was at his gayest. She parried his attacks so sharply he could not dominate every one and every subject as usual. She got in that, the house being so old, we ought to have it done up by someone who really knew of the suitable things for it. But Humphrey said he intended to leave it as it is—an early Victorian coating over the rooms that his mother lived in, and the rest as cold and bare and ghostly as they had probably been since 1509, when most of them were built:

My bedroom looks over the moat which comes under the windows at that side—it was a stateroom.

Humphrey has taken his mother's suite, as the fires do not smoke there. They are far away from me, on the other side, a wing built on at a Georgian date. I am thankful to say it is now seven years since he has suggested being near to me. The house is not very large, only dark and queer and impracticable. There is no comfort—only tradition and grim darkness, and—gloom.

I wish I might have new hangings for the great oak bed—the deep red velvet looks so funereal. I would have chosen another sleeping apartment myself, but that the view from here is so beautiful, when I go into the little round closet which is in the turret, and I can make it into a sort of retiring room, where I can fly to—away from the noise when Humphrey swears at the servants. He likes state, too, and thinks his wife ought to occupy "My Lady's Chamber." I sometimes wonder if I am afraid of ghosts. There are such queer sounds in the paneling. I have read a number of books lately which say that people leave their impress upon their surroundings, and some part of their spirit comes back to their earthly abodes if they have been wicked and wretched, and they influence the dwellers who now occupy them. All this house is full of bloodshed and crime and cruelty. There cannot be any pleasant influence connected with it. Violent partings of lovers—betrayed friends—and the Bohuns were Roundheads, too, and tortured a cavalier in this very room who adored the wife of that Bohun who hangs over the chimneypiece in the drawing-room.

It seems they have periodically liked the idea of being christened Humphrey, though where the connection comes in to the original Humphrey Bohun, I have never heard. Algernon was called Humphrey Algernon, the latter name after my father. He likes his new home, Redwood Moat. There are such numbers of rats and he has two good terriers. I wish I wish I could love Algernon as much as I want to. It sounds so ideal—a beautiful little son born when the mother was only seventeen, and ought to have been such a plaything for her, unhappy and frightened and cowed as she was then. But she was too young to understand any maternal instincts: he was a terror to her in case anything happened to him. Can that Guinevere of those old days be really me? And then in India I was always too ill, and when he and I came back Algernon was already four years old. Oh, those years at Bath with him and his stern Bohun aunts! There was no chance of becoming friendly. Araminta spoiled him and Lady Crumford punished him—and would have punished me if she could.

Humphrey's instincts seemed to show themselves almost immediately in Algernon. He is as like him in character as he is face. Suspicious, vindictive and arrogant. He loves me, I think, as much as he can love anyone, but I never know when he will turn round and hurt me in the middle of a caress. I have tried my hardest to lead him by love and understanding, but the long absences—he has been at the school Humphrey selected for him since he was eight—undermine my influence, until now, at thirteen, we have very little of common interest apart from the dogs. I believe he is not popular at his school, only that he is such a good cricketer.

I am only just beginning to realize that of course all these circumstances in my life which make it so dreary must be in some way caused by my own fault. But it is very difficult, no matter the natural character, to be able to rise superior to events if a woman has been married so young to such a man as Humphrey, and kept dependent always, without five pounds to call her own.

I ought to try and be ordinary and take everything as calmly in reality as I appear to do on the outside. But something in me, especially in the springtime, cries aloud in a fierce rebellion at the waste of it all—the waste of the years of youth, the anguish of loneliness—the barren littleness of my life.

The obsession of the springtime is upon me to-night; the scents of the May and the fresh wet earth come up from the field beyond the moat. A bird is chirping softly, not yet asleep. I am quivering with I know not what. Night, come and comfort me—enfold me in your dark wings and let me sleep.

Letitia breakfasted in her room. I have never been allowed to do that. Punctuality at meals is one of Humphrey's fads, and he is generally very cross behind the paper at the other end of the table. He does not mean to be unkind to me. He often tries to give me pleasures, but they must be as he likes, not as I like. I am not consulted about anything. If I had not been so young and so frightened in the beginning it might have been all different—or if I had cared for him in the least perhaps I could have acquired some kind of influence. But the hopelessness of the outlook has made me let everything drift. Letitia leads a life of perfect freedom. Her husband, Lord Langthorpe, is an easy-going creature, and they do not interfere with each other. Letitia says, after the first year or two, if you order a man's home well and invariably play the part of brilliant figurehead, that is all which should be required of you, and that both men and women should be free to express their individuality as they please. She has had a number of well-conducted love affairs, all arranged with perfect common sense, and no scandal. She says they are necessary to the development of the brain of a clever woman. It is quite impossible to understand life if you live forever outside the door of its mainspring.

I do not know anything about love. I have imagined it often—but of the reality I am as ignorant as I was at seventeen.

"Guinevere," Letitia said, suddenly, in the middle of her discourse, "you sit there looking at me with your great gray eyes. What are you thinking about? Tell me, you odd thing!"

"I am wondering what you would have done if you had been married, at not quite seventeen, to Humphrey."

This startled her.

"We should have had awful rows, of course, and then I suppose he would have broken my spirit, or I should have worn away his; but you are just where you were, and the days are passing."

At lunch she asked casually if we would not send over and suggest Sir Hugh Dremont dining with us this evening. She wanted to see him again awfully, and it was such a chance, as he so seldom went into society now.

I did not say anything, so Humphrey agreed, much to my surprise, and told me to write a note, which I did.

When the answer, accepting, came back, Letitia was up helping me to arrange my tiny turret sitting room. There is a small winding stairway from it up to the battlemented tower top and down to the same room on the floor below, and then again to the dungeon. On the drawing-room level the little place has been turned into a library, completely lined with books which no one has read for years, but on my floor it had never been touched, since the Round Heads' time, and has still the stuck furniture in it, a table and two chairs. There are three narrow casements looking south, east and west, and a grim, open fireplace.

Sir Hugh, loved the ame. But my sister exclaimed: "How pale you are, Guinevere! Did you see a ghost as we came down the stairs?"

"You could make this delightful," Letitia said. "Either have it paneled or hang tapestry over these rough stone walls, and think how you can escape down the staircase and into the garden without passing the household! A most useful place I call it," and there was a laugh in her eye.

"We must bring Sir Hugh up here this evening, and show it to him, and get his opinion. He knows about every style and date."

"Humphrey probably won't allow any change to be made, but do try," I said, "though even if one got into the garden it is walled all round, and there is still the moat to pass. The only open way to the outer world is through the servants' quarters and across the bridge."

"It is certainly a fortress," Letitia said.

Sir Hugh Dremont was five minutes late for dinner, and Humphrey stood before the fire with his watch in his hand. The fire was lit, because it is a cold and rainy night, and, as I write now after midnight up in my gloomy room, I can hear the wind howling down the turret chimneys and the rain beating against the window panes.

If Letitia had not also been late I am sure Humphrey would have expressed his impatience aloud. He fortunately stands in some awe of Letitia.

Sir Hugh is [illegible] pleasant, and when my sister [illegible] Jane rose, we were [illegible] reach. I never do what [illegible] guest did not seem to be [illegible] it.

He looks distinctly [illegible] He is [illegible]

After dinner Letitia [illegible] comfortable sofa in the drawing-room, and [illegible] when no great effort is [illegible] fell asleep in his [illegible] to the piano and began to play. Her fingers strayed [illegible] night, while my husband [illegible] hour of peace and freedom [illegible] it seems as though they soared [illegible] from its prison house and [illegible] high heaven, upon the wings of [illegible] The two hushed their voices [illegible] not stop speaking, and I was glad of that; they had to [illegible]

There was [illegible] sorrow upon me to-night. I was not unhappy, only strangely tender-eyed, and perhaps it spoke through the piano.

Gradually the noise of their voices became less and less, the room [illegible] there was silence except for the [illegible] notes which came from my hands. I happened to be playing the Raindrop prelude, and it sobbed out what I was trying in a passion to protect [illegible] I knew not what. When I had finished I let my hands fall in my lap. I was far away, and Sir Hugh's voice [illegible] and out of the shadows I saw that he had come forward and was leaning upon the end of the piano.

"You have given me great pleasure," he said, and Letitia was to [illegible]

"Guinevere is a witch," she [illegible] softly, "and now she has let you see a real piece of her magic. Hush!"

I froze at once, as is my [illegible] and said I was glad I had pleased them in a common, [illegible] voice, and then Letitia suggested we should go and see the turret room.

"Come," she said, whispering playfully. "We three must creep [illegible] the sleeping ogress of the castle, who would never permit us to disturb [illegible] the road to his treasure chamber," and he put out her white hand and [illegible] Sir Hugh's and drew him stealthily into the little library, which was lit with only one lamp. Letitia is [illegible] person, her every action is full of [illegible] and no one would ever think [illegible] nearly forty years old.

There was no light whatever in the [illegible] staircase, which we groped by the [illegible] door and as I led the way Sir Hugh put out his strong sooth left hand and took mine. There [illegible] thing in the firm grasp which suddenly affected me strangely; a peculiar thrill ran through me, [illegible] sation that I have never felt before.

"You must guide us," he said, while he pulled Letitia up the stairs, and so we arrived at the entrance of the little shrine.

Only the dim light from my bedroom came through from beyond. There is no electric light installed as yet, and I went forward to [illegible] the lamp, but they followed me.

"Did you ever see such a ghostly place for a young woman to sleep in alone," Letitia exclaimed, struck with the picture of it at night, which she had not yet seen. "I should hate this bed as old and those heavy red velvet curtains. I [illegible] to say I am in a more modern part of the house."

"I have never been up here before," Sir Hugh said. "I have always heard of this room, though. 'The Lady Margaret's Chamber' it is called, is it not? You know we people with [illegible] modern abodes take a deep interest in every [illegible] Redwood Moat. It is a kind of respect, [illegible] to have

The CRIMINAL Who Wouldn't "PSYCH"

By Wex Jones

"CRIMINALS," said my friend Augustus, "contain more psychology than ordinary persons." Augustus, I may explain, is Augustus Spofkins, LL.D., Ph.D., F.P.S., the famous—perhaps the most famous—psychist. What Augustus doesn't know about psych is absolutely not worth knowing. The great psychic investigator honors me with his friendship, although all I know about his favorite study is the way to spell it.

I wonder I don't know just why they put that "p" in front of "psychic." Dickens would never have made a hit with that burglar of his if he'd called him Bill Psyche. Sykes doesn't look so imposing, but it's a heap better name for a burglar all the same.

Back to Augustus, however. "Criminals," said he, in the impressive manner he uses when addressing the Psychic Society, "contain more psychology than ordinary persons. Further, they are easier to observe than others, since they are in a cell and cannot get away."

"I should think all the psychology would be extracted from them by the police in the course of the third degree," I observed.

"Psychology, James," replied my friend Augustus, "can never be eradicated. Fresh founts of it always spring up in the soul. Therefore I must come into contact with some criminals."

"Why don't you go into politics?" I asked.

"No flippancy, James, I beg of you. It shall be your duty to approach a bailiff or thief-taker and tell him that I wish to study the psychology of some prisoner."

"You want me to tip off some fly cop that you want to get hep to some big pinch," said I.

"Your language is far from scientific, James, but if I apprehend you correctly, that is what I desire to be brought in touch with some suspect. It will be crude work for me to determine the prisoner's guilt or innocence, but we psychists must adopt some such means of attracting attention to the importance of a greatly neglected science."

It was only the next day when I was able to give Augustus news of an important case. Worthington Woodberry, a prominent banker of our town, had been found dead in his garden. Beside the body was found a large turnip with a dent in it. There could be no doubt that Woodberry had been struck down with the turnip as he was walking in his garden.

Woodberry's grounds had no turnips growing in them, so the police arrested a fellow named Juggles, who had a big field of turnips on his place about a quarter of a mile from Woodberry's.

There was some argument about the guilt of Juggles. A number of people pointed out that some tramp might have pulled the fatal turnip out of Juggles's field. The police, however, maintained that only a person familiar with the deadly nature of the vegetable would have selected such a weapon.

When I told my friend Augustus of the case, he sorrowfully remarked that it was almost too simple, but that in the interest of psychic science he would examine the suspect and tell the police if he were guilty or innocent.

There was no trouble in arranging with the police for an examination of Juggles by Augustus Spofkins, LL.D., Ph.D., F.P.S., and the following day the professor, a few fellow members of the Psychic Society, and myself assembled in the jail.

Before Juggles was brought in, Augustus explained to us the system he would use—a sadly practical and material system he said, not truly psychic.

Augustus would mention a word to the suspect, who must instantly reply with whatever word the first suggests to him. Ordinary words, not bearing on the Turnip Mystery, as the affair was now called, would be used by Augustus to establish the normal length of time it took Juggles to answer.

Thus if Augustus said "Rain" and Juggles answered "Wet" in two seconds, that would establish the normal reaction of Juggles's brain at two seconds.

Then when Juggles was off his guard, Augustus proposed to slip in a word referring to the murder, Juggles, if guilty, would try to answer with some word that would not sound incriminating, and consequently would take much longer than two seconds in replying.

So, all being prepared, Juggles was brought in handcuffed to a deputy sheriff, and told to reply promptly with whatever word was suggested to him by the word Augustus would utter.

I sat close by with a pencil and a sheet of paper to take down the words and the time as announced by a member of the Psychic Society, who was equipped with a stop-watch for the purpose.

Here is the table of results as I noted them:

Augustus	Juggles	Time
Egg	Breakfast	2 seconds
Ham	Eggs	2½ seconds
Bacon	Breakfast	2 seconds
Turnip	Breakfast	4 seconds

"Ah," exclaimed Augustus, when I showed him the list, "this is indeed important. 'Egg' suggests 'breakfast' to Juggles. Natural enough. But why does he answer 'eggs' to the word 'ham'?"

"Probably fond of ham and eggs," I remarked.

"Possibly, James, possibly, but he should have answered 'breakfast.' You notice he took half a second longer to think of 'eggs.' Most suspicious. Then when I said 'bacon' why did he respond with 'breakfast'?"

"Probably he has bacon for breakfast," I suggested.

"It's possible, of course," replied Augustus. "We must not be dogmatic, but this response of 'breakfast' strikes me as immensely suspicious."

"Persons who are not criminals eat bacon for breakfast," said I.

"Please don't confuse me with your wild conjectures." Augustus replied in a peevish tone. "Be all that as it may, did you notice the result when I uttered the crucial word 'turnip'? The deed was committed with a turnip, and the murderer, to avoid mentioning a word that would create suspicion, pauses four seconds to think of a harmless word like 'breakfast.' And if 'turnip' by any freak or mental quirk could really suggest 'breakfast' to this man Juggles, why did it take him four seconds to answer, when his normal time is only two seconds?"

"Probably he doesn't have turnips for breakfast so frequently as he does bacon and eggs," I observed.

"So frequently!" ejaculated Augustus. "My dear James, you surely don't think any man could be so abnormal as to eat turnips for breakfast?"

"Why not?" I asked. "Seems to me turnips are just as much a breakfast dish as the marmalade you eat every morning. Indeed, I shouldn't be surprised to learn that the marmalade is mostly turnips, anyway."

"James," said Augustus, in a tone of great severity, "this is a psychic investigation, not a pure food inquiry. Prepare for the next set of questions."

Somewhat abashed, I proceeded to note the following table:

Augustus	Juggles	Time
Bread	Breakfast	2 seconds
Eight	Breakfast	3 seconds
Nut	Cocoa	4 seconds

"Most satisfactory, most satisfactory, indeed," said Augustus, as he perused the list.

"This guilty man could not help revealing that his thoughts dwelt upon the 'cocoanut,' as you call it"

"To 'bread' the prisoner answers 'breakfast.' He might as well have answered 'dinner' but we will let this pass, although his frequent use of 'breakfast' indicates an extremely limited mind or a deliberate attempt to deceive. And then mark his response to the word 'eight'—the hour of the crime. So startled that he takes three seconds for consideration, the prisoner again responds with the parrot-like repetition of 'breakfast.' Only way to account for that is on the supposition of his guilt."

"Perhaps," I ventured, "Juggles is accustomed to breakfast at eight o'clock."

Taking no notice of my interruption, Augustus went on. "And the word 'nut,'—you notice the response to that? 'Nut,' as you may know, is used among the vulgar as a term for 'head.' The worthy banker was hit on the head. A guilty conscience forced this man to take four seconds to think of the harmless word 'cocoa,' which, I presume, was suggested in some way by his former word 'breakfast.'"

"Remember, Augustus," said I, "that the head is frequently known among the vulgar as the cocoanut."

"Ah, in that event, our case is stronger than ever. This guilty man could not help revealing, under this merciless psychic investigation, that his thoughts dwelt on the 'cocoanut,' as you call it. He propelled the turnip at the banker's cranium."

"Yes," said I, "bounced the vegetable off his bean."

"No levity, James, please. This man is guilty."

"I don't take much stock in your psychic business, Mr. Spofkins," said the chief of police to Augustus, "but I'm glad you agree with me. I know Juggles is guilty on account of the turnips growing in his farm. I never had no use for science, but goes in for practical dee-duction."

"Come, my man," the chief continued, "back to your cell. You may as well confess."

The COST

By Shirley Carson

"I WONDER if I shall ever get just the right expression?"

Rupert Dale moved back impatiently from his easel, the dissatisfied frown deepening on his face.

"A week's work, all for nothing," he muttered, folding his arms, and looking intently at the picture before him. "There seems some fatality about the expression of the face. I can't convey my idea to the canvas—it's humiliating, but it seems to be true."

The thought seemed to sting him to fresh action; he took an impulsive step forward, reached for his palette, and re-commenced work. For fifteen minutes there was silence in the studio; then a low tap came at the door.

"Come in!"

The door was opened, and a woman, young and lovely, stood irresolute on the threshold. Dale put down his palette with a sigh of relief, throwing an arm around his wife as she came forward. They stood before the picture and the woman's eyes swept it with some curiosity.

"I waited until the light began to fail; I wanted to say good-by to you before I went," she said

Dale looked down at her sumptuous dress, and detached a flower from her corsage.

"You are gowned for some festival again," he said gaily. "What is it to-night?"

"We were to dine with the Mortimers, you know, but Curtis is my escort, as usual." She laughed for a moment a little nervously. "I have to manage your social yeas and nays as best I can, Rupert. People are beginning to understand you have no time for frivolities. It was a little hard to explain at first, but now they are beginning to whisper."

"What?" asked Dale, with an amused quiver of his lips. "What were you going to say, Magdalen?"

"They think you are a budding eccentric—a genius—or something of that sort."

Dale laughed loudly.

"But I have not been on the retired list for such a great while," he protested.

"Long enough for people to take it for granted that Curtis will accompany me," his wife answered dryly.

"Curtis is the best of fellows—not half such a selfish wretch as I am. You and he must forgive me, Magdalen—bear with me just a little longer. When once I've got this picture off my mind——"

He faced round to the easel again, and Magdalen's eyes followed his.

"It is beautiful," she said reluctantly, a curious look of timidity on her face. "It is very lovely, but you have never told me what it means. The woman has such a strange look—I wonder what emotion could bring that expression forth."

"I have not got the true expression yet when it comes you won't be in such a state of mystification over the meaning of the picture. . . . Do you remember we went to the play last week?"

"The first time we had been out together for long enough—yes, I remember."

"I had seen the thing before," Dale answered hastily. "Do you remember the scene where the woman is accused—wrongfully accused—of infidelity toward her hisband?"

"Yes."

Magdalen turned sharply from the picture.

"Now I know what you mean—what you are trying to express here," she said. "Why do you paint such morbid things? Why—why should a woman's agony have such a fascination for you?"

"I didn't get the expression I wanted," Dale went on, his eyes riveted on the picture. "It was all too—well, too stagey. I came home without being satisfied."

Magdalen looked at the picture again with singular shrinking.

"I should never want to see it hung in a house of mine—the face would haunt me."

Dale laughed amusedly

"What a child you are in spite of your having been married five years! I believe you would have me paint buttercups and daisies, and little girls in Greenaway frocks, and fat cherubs."

Magdalen was by the door, her fingers on the handle.

"Sometimes I wish you did not paint anything," she said in a low voice. "It takes you away from me so much. You grow worse month by month."

Dale drew her into his arms impetuously.

"Just be patient with me a little longer, Magdalen," he pleaded, lifting her face till her stormy eyes met the earnest expression of his own. "My work has meant a tremendous lot to me lately, I own—I've been wrapped up in this thing, but it is almost finished now and it is far and away the best piece of work I've ever accomplished. Masson is awfully enthusiastic over it—says it is going to put me in the front rank. You—you don't know what this picture is going to mean to me, Magdalen."

He held her off at arm's length, and she suddenly turned away from the rapt expression in his eyes. Dale thought it was a curious change that came over her, but he did not stop to analyze it; he was grateful for the farewell kiss she gave him. Her face showed softened lines in the dim light, and when she had passed through the door she turned to give him a gay little wave of the hand.

"Don't come down; Curtis is waiting at the end of the corridor, and you know he always takes good care of me. . . . And be sure not to worry yourself over the picture."

[illegible] words came sharply from Dale's lips [illegible] taken [illegible]

Dale laughed at the parting sally; then he went to the window and watched his wife and her cousin take their departure. "Curtis is the best fellow," he muttered, watching the tall man who helped Magdalen into the carriage, "and by Jove, he's as Greek as he can be. Masson told me yesterday that all the women were in love with him, and that he didn't seem to be much moved by it—ungrateful dog."

The carriage rolled out of sight, and Dale, suddenly aware of a feverish headache, stepped out to the balcony. The evening air was soft and cool, grateful to anyone oppressed with nervous tension. Dale had been living through a strenuous time and was not yet over with it. The pictured face in the easel did not completely express his soul's conception, and he was growing mystified with himself because these last touches were proving so difficult. As a rule, his hand's cunning did not fail him at the crucial moment.

Then he fell to thinking repentantly of Magdalen. Until to-night he had not suspected her dissatisfaction over his social shortcomings. She had always appeared happy in having Curtis as an escort, and the fact had pacified him; made him feel he could legitimately give more time to the work which pressed him so hard.

When the roll of carriage wheels sounded, Dale jumped up with an exclamation. Sleep, or waking dreams, had claimed him this long while, and he shook himself back to reality in a hurry.

Curtis and Magdalen had entered the house, and were passing up the staircase together. Dale stumbled into the dark studio and switched on a light, then opened the door. Curtis often came in for half an hour to talk about pictures and smoke a cigar.

The CRY

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.—Arsène Lupin, engaged with two of his gang in robbing the villa of M. Daubrecq, a member of the French Cabinet and Deputy [illegible] the police. Daubrecq's valet [illegible] Lupin's confederates are wounded; both escape. Lupin escapes [illegible] with a crystal stopper, which in turn is stolen from him during the night. He is at a loss to understand the significance of the stopper, and secretly enters Daubrecq's house to try and regain possession of it. While there he sees a mysterious woman in conference with the deputy and finds that she also is anxious to get hold of the crystal stopper.

Chapter V

He stood leaning against the table, listening impassively to Daubrecq, who was also standing and who was talking very excitedly. He had his back turned to Lupin; but Lupin, leaning forward, caught sight of a glass in which the deputy's image was reflected. And he was startled to see the strange look in his eyes, the air of fierce and brutal desire with which Daubrecq was staring at his visitor.

It seemed to embarrass her too, for she sat down with lowered lids. Then Daubrecq leaned over her and it appeared as though he were ready to fling his long arms, with their huge hands, around her. And, suddenly, Lupin perceived great tears rolling down the woman's sad face.

Whether or not it was the sight of those tears that made Daubrecq lose his head, with a brusque movement he clutched the woman and drew her to him. She repelled him, with a violence full of hatred. And, after a brief struggle, during which Lupin caught a glimpse of the man's bestial and contorted features, the two of them stood face to face, railing at each other like mortal enemies.

Then they stopped. Daubrecq sat down. There was mischief in his face, and sarcasm as well. And he began to talk again, with sharp taps on the table, as though he were dictating terms.

She no longer struck. She sat haughtily in her chair and towered over him absent-minded, with roaming eyes. Lupin, captivated by that powerful and sorrowful face, continued to watch her; and he was vainly seeking to remember of what or of whom she reminded him, when he noticed that she had turned her head slightly and that she was imperceptibly moving her arm.

And her arm strayed farther and farther and her hand crept along the table, and Lupin saw that, at the end of the table, there stood a water-bottle with a gold topped stopper. The hand reached the water-bottle, felt it, rose gently and seized the stopper. A quick movement of the head, a glance, and the stopper was put back in its place. Obviously, it was not what the woman hoped to find.

"Dash it!" said Lupin. "She's after the crystal stopper too. The matter is becoming more complicated daily; there's no doubt about it."

But, on renewing his observation of the visitor, he was astounded to note the sudden and unexpected expression of her countenance, a terrible, implacable, ferocious expression. And he saw that her hand was continuing its stealthy progress round the table and that with an uninterrupted and crafty sliding movement, it was pushing back books and, slowly and surely, approaching a dagger whose blade gleamed among the scattered papers.

It gripped the handle.

Daubrecq went on talking. Behind his back, the hand rose steadily, little by little; and Lupin saw the woman's desperate and furious eyes fixed upon the spot in the neck where she intended to plant the knife.

"You're going a very risky thing, fair lady," thought Lupin.

And he already began to turn over in his mind the best means of escaping and of taking Victoire with him.

She hesitated, however, with uplifted arm. But it was only a momentary weakness. She clenched her teeth. Her whole face, contracted with hatred, became yet further convulsed. And she made the dread movement.

At the same instant, Daubrecq crouched and, springing from his seat, turned and seized the woman's frail wrist in mid-air.

Oddly enough, he addressed no reproach to her, as though the deed which she had attempted surprised him no more than any ordinary, very natural and simple act. He shrugged his shoulders, like a man accustomed to that sort of danger, and strode up and down in silence.

She had dropped the weapon and was now crying, holding her head between her hands, with sobs that shook her whole frame.

He next came up to her and said a few words, once more tapping the table as he spoke.

She made a sign in the negative and, when he insisted, she, in her turn, stamped her foot on the floor and exclaimed, loud enough for Lupin to hear:

"Never! . . . Never! . . ."

Thereupon, without another word, Daubrecq fetched the fur cloak which she had brought with her and hung it over the woman's shoulders, while she shrouded her face in a lace wrap.

And he showed her out.

Two minutes later, the garden-gate was locked again.

"Pity I can't run after that strange person," thought Lupin, "and have a chat with her about the Daubrecq bird. Seems to me that we two could do a good stroke of business together."

In any case, there was one point to be cleared up. Daubrecq, the deputy, whose life was so orderly, so apparently respectable, was in the habit of receiving visits at night, when his house was no longer watched by the police.

He sent Victoire to arrange with two members of his gang to keep watch for several days. And he himself remained awake next night.

As on the previous morning, he heard a noise at four o'clock. As on the previous morning, the deputy let some one in.

Lupin ran down his ladder and, when he came to the free space above the shutters, saw a man crawling at Daubrecq's feet, clinging his arms round Daubrecq's knees in frenzied despair and weeping, weeping convulsively.

Daubrecq, laughing, pushed him away repeatedly; but the man clung to him. He behaved almost like one out of his mind, and, at last, in a genuine fit of madness, half rose to his feet, took the deputy by the throat and flung him back in a chair. Daubrecq struggled, powerless at first, while his veins swelled in his temples. But soon, with a strength far beyond the ordinary, he regained the mastery and deprived his adversary of all power of movement. Then, holding him with one hand, with the other he gave him two great smacks on the face.

The man got up slowly. He was livid and could hardly stand on his legs. He waited for a moment, as though to recover his self-possession. Then, with terrifying calmness, he drew a revolver from his pocket and leveled it at Daubrecq.

Daubrecq did not flinch. He even smiled, with defiant air and without displaying more excitement than if he had been aimed at with a toy pistol.

The man stood for perhaps fifteen or twenty seconds facing his enemy, with outstretched arm. Then, with the same deliberate slowness, revealing a self-control which was all the more impressive because it followed upon a fit of extreme excitement, he put up his revolver and, from another pocket, produced his note-case.

Daubrecq took a step forward.

The man opened the pocketbook. A sheaf of bank notes appeared in sight.

Daubrecq seized and counted them. They were thousand-franc notes; and there were thirty of them.

The man looked on, without a movement of revolt, without a protest. He obviously understood the futility of words. Daubrecq was one of those who do not relent. Why should he waste time in beseeching him or even in revenging himself upon him by utterings vain threats and insults? He had no hope of striking that unassailable enemy. Even Daubrecq's death would not deliver him from Daubrecq.

He took his hat and went away.

At eleven o'clock in the morning, Victoire, on returning from her shopping, handed Lupin a note from his accomplices.

He opened it and read:

"The man who came to see Daubrecq last night is Langeroux, the deputy, leader of the independent left. A poor man, with a large family."

"Come," said Lupin, "Daubrecq is nothing more nor less than a blackmailer; but, by Jupiter, he has jolly effective ways of going to work."

Events tended to confirm Lupin's supposition. Three days later, he saw another visitor bring Daubrecq an important sum of money. And, this

"He, e, I've brought you the irreconcilable chief of our enemies. Have you a feeding-bottle?"

[illegible] after that, one came and left a pearl necklace behind him.

The first was called Dachaumont, a senator and cabinet minister. The second was the Marquis d'Albufev, a royalist deputy, chief agent of the Duc d'Orleans.

The scene, in each of these cases, was very similar. Langeroux the deputy's interview, a violent tragic scene ending in Daubrecq's victory.

"And so on and so forth," thought Lupin, when he received these particulars. "I have been present at four visits. I shall know no more if there are ten, or twenty, or thirty. . . . It is enough for me to learn the names of the visitors from my friends on sentry-go outside. Shall I go and call on them? . . . What for? They have no reason to confide in me. . . . On the other hand, am I to stay on here, delayed by investigations which lead to nothing and which Victoire can continue just as well without me?"

He was very much perplexed. The news of the inquiry into the case of Gilbert and Vaucheray was becoming worse and worse, the days were slipping by and not an hour passed without his asking himself, in anguish, whether all his efforts—granting that he succeeded—would not end in derisive results, absolutely foreign to the aim which he was pursuing.

For, after all, supposing that he did fathom Daubrecq's underhand dealings, would that give him the means of rescuing Gilbert and Vaucheray?

That day, an incident occurred which put an end to his indecision. After lunch, Victoire heard snatches of a conversation which Daubrecq held with some one on the telephone. Lupin gathered, from what Victoire reported, that the deputy had an appointment with a lady for half-past eight and that he was going to take her to a theater:

"I shall get a pit-tier box, like the one we had six weeks ago," Daubrecq had said. And he added, with a laugh, "I hope that I shall not have the burglars in during that time."

There was not a doubt in Lupin's mind. Daubrecq was about to spend his evening in the same manner in which he had spent the evening six weeks ago, while they were breaking into his villa at Enghien. To know the person whom he was to meet and perhaps thus to discover how Gilbert and Vaucheray had learned that Daubrecq would be away from eight o'clock in the evening until one o'clock in the morning: these were matters of the utmost importance.

Lupin left the house in the afternoon, with Victoire's assistance. He knew through her that Daubrecq was coming home for dinner earlier than usual.

He went to his flat in the Rue Chateaubriand, telephoned for three of his friends, dressed and made himself up in his favorite character of a Russian prince, with fair hair and mustache and short-cut whiskers.

The accomplices arrived in a motor-car.

At that moment Achille, his man, brought him a telegram, addressed to M. Michel Beaumont, Rue Chateaubriand, which ran:

"Do not come to theater this evening. Danger of your intervention spoiling everything."

There was a flower-vase on the chimneypiece beside him. Lupin took it and smashed it to pieces:

"That's it, that's it," he snarled. "They are playing with me as I usually play with others. Same behavior. Same tricks. Only, there's this difference. . . ."

What difference? He hardly knew. The truth is that he too was baffled and disconcerted to the inmost recesses of his being and that he was continuing to act only from obstinacy, from a sense of duty, so to speak, and without putting his ordinary good humor and high spirits into the work.

"Come along," he said to his accomplices.

By his instructions, the chauffeur set them down near the Square Lamartine, but kept the motor going. Lupin foresaw that Daubrecq, in order to escape the detectives who watched the hotel, would jump into the first taxi; and he did not intend to be outdistanced.

He had not allowed for Daubrecq's cleverness.

At half-past seven, both leaves of the garden-gate were flung open, a bright light flashed and a motor cycle quickly ran across the pavement, skirted the square, turned in front of the motor-car and shot away toward the Bois at a speed so great that they would have been mad to go in pursuit of it.

"Good-by, Daisy!" said Lupin, trying to jest, but really overcome with rage.

He eyed his accomplices in the hope that one of them would venture to give a mocking smile. How pleased he would have been to vent his nerves on them!

"Let's go home," he said to his accomplices.

He gave them some dinner, then he smoked a cigar and they set off again in the car and went the round of the theaters, beginning with those which were giving light operas and musical comedies, for which he presumed that Daubrecq and his lady would have a preference. He took a stall, inspected the lower-tier boxes and went away again.

He next drove to the more serious theater, the Renaissance, the Gymnase.

At last, at ten o'clock in the evening, he saw a pit-tier box at the Vaudeville almost entirely protected from inspection by its two screens; and, on tipping the box-keeper, was told that it contained a short, stout, elderly gentleman and a lady who was wearing a thick lace veil.

The next box was free. He took it, went back to his friends to give them their instructions and sat down near the couple.

During the entr'acte, when the lights went up, he perceived Daubrecq's profile. The lady remained at the back of the box, invisible. The two were speaking in a low voice; and, when the curtain rose, they went on speaking, but in such a way that Lupin could not distinguish a word.

Ten minutes passed. Some one tapped at their door. It was one of the men from the box office:

"Are you M. le Député Daubrecq, sir?" he asked.

"But who is it?

"M. le Marquis d'A[illegible]

"Eh? . . . What?

What am I to [illegible]

"I'm coming. . . . I'm coming."

Daubrecq rose hurriedly [illegible] the clerk to the box-office.

He was not yet out of sight when [illegible] his box, worked the lock of the door [illegible] beside the lady.

She gave a stifled cry.

"Hush!" he said. "I have to [illegible] most important."

"Ah!" she said, between her teeth. "[illegible]

He was dumfounded. [illegible] open-mouthed. The woman [illegible] only did she know him, but [illegible] through his disguise! Accustomed [illegible] to the most extraordinary and [illegible] concerted him.

He did not even dream of pr[illegible]

"So you know? . . . So you know?"

He snatched at the lady's veil [illegible] before she had time to defend herself.

"What!" he muttered, with [illegible]

"Is it possible?"

It was the woman whom he [illegible] Daubrecq a few days earlier, the woman who had [illegible] against Daubrecq and who had intended to [illegible] with all the strength of her hatred.

It was her turn to be taken aback.

"What! Have you seen me before?"

"Yes, the other night, at his [illegible] I saw what you tried to do."

She made a movement to es[illegible] He held her back and, speaking with great eagerness:

"I must know who you are," he said. "That will why I had Daubrecq telephoned for."

She looked aghast.

"Do you mean to say it was not the Marquis d'Albufey?"

"No, it was one of my assistants."

"Then Daubrecq will come back?"

"Yes, but we have time [illegible] to [illegible] We must meet again. . . . He is [illegible] I will save you from him."

"Why should you? What can you expect?"

"Do not distrust me . . . it is [illegible] our interests are identical. . . . Where can I [illegible] To-morrow, surely? At what hour? And where?"

"Well . . ."

She looked at him with obvious [illegible] ing what to do, on the point of [illegible] of uneasiness and doubt.

He pressed her.

"Oh, I entreat you . . . answer me [illegible] word . . . and at once. . . . It would be [illegible] him to find me here. . . . I entreat you."

She answered sharply:

"My name doesn't matter [illegible] We must [illegible] each other first and you shall explain [illegible] Yes, we will meet. . . . Listen, to-morrow, at three o'clock, at the corner of the Boulevard [illegible]"

At that exact moment, the door of the box opened so to speak with a bang, and Daubrecq appeared.

"Rats!" Lupin muttered under his breath, furious at being caught before obtaining what he wanted.

Daubrecq gave a chuckle:

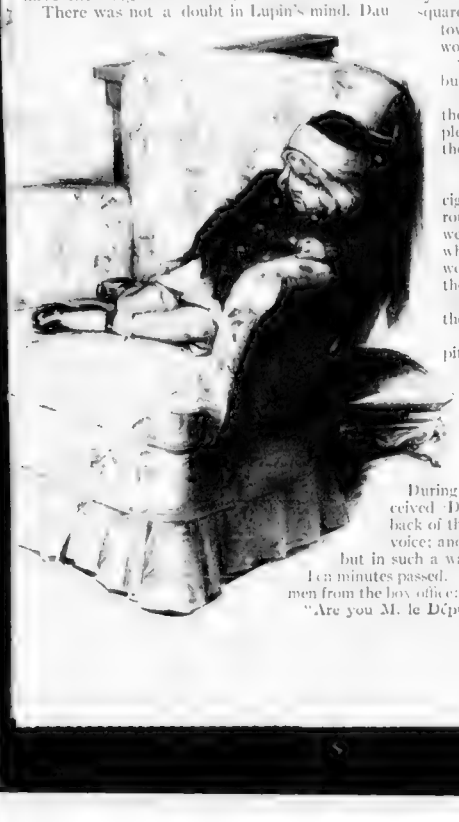
"So that's it . . . I thought so a long while ago. Ah, the telephone trick, a little out of date, sir! I have not gone halfway when I turn back!"

He pushed Lupin to the front of the box and sat down beside the lady.

"And now, my lord Alexander, [illegible] police-office, probably? There's a [illegible] about that mug of ours."

He looked hard at Lupin, who did [illegible] muscle, and tried to get a [illegible] to recognize the man [illegible]

Lupin, without taking his eyes [illegible] rolled out: "He would not [illegible] thrown up the game at that [illegible]



[illegible] opportunity of coming to an understanding with Daubrecq's mental enemy.

The woman sat in her corner, motionless, and watched them both.

Lupin said:

"Let us go outside, sir. That will make our interview easier."

"No, my lord, here," grinned the deputy. "It will take place here, presently, during the entr'acte. Then we shall not be disturbing anybody."

"But—"

"Save your breath, my man; you shan't budge."

And he took Lupin by the coat-collar, with the obvious intention of not letting go of him before the interval.

A rash move! Was it likely that Lupin would consent to remain in such an attitude, especially before a woman, a woman to whom he had offered his alliance, a woman—and he now thought of it for the first time—who was distinctly good-looking and whose grave beauty attracted him. His whole pride as a man rose at the thought.

However, he said nothing. He accepted the heavy weight of the hand on his shoulder and even sat bent in two, as though beaten, powerless, almost frightened.

"Ha, clever!" said the deputy, scoffingly. "We don't seem to be swaggering quite so much."

The stage was full of actors, who were arguing and making a noise.

Daubrecq had loosened his grasp slightly and Lupin felt that the moment had come. With the edge of his hand, he gave him a violent blow in the hollow of the arm, as he might have done with a hatchet.

The pain took Daubrecq off his guard. Lupin now released himself entirely and sprang at the other to clutch him by the throat. But Daubrecq had at once put himself on the defensive and stepped back, and their four hands seized one another.

They gripped with superhuman energy, the whole force of the two adversaries concentrating in those hands. Daubrecq's were of monstrous size, and Lupin, caught in that promise, felt as though he were fighting not with a man, but with some terrible beast, a huge gorilla.

They felt each other against the door, bending over, like a pair of wrestlers groping and trying to lay hold of each other. Their bones creaked. Whichever gave way first was bound to be caught by the throat and strangled. And all this happened amid a sudden silence, for the actors on the stage were now listening to one of their number, who was speaking in a low voice.

The woman stood back flat against the partition, looking at them in terror. Had she taken sides with either of them, with a single movement, the victory would at once have been decided in that one's favor. But which of them should she assist? What could Lupin represent in her eyes? A friend? An enemy?

She briskly made for the front of the box, turned back the screen and, leaning forward, seemed to give a signal. Then she returned and tried to slip to the door.

Lupin, as though wishing to help her, said:

"Why don't you move the chair?"

He was speaking of a heavy chair which had fallen down between him and Daubrecq and across which they were struggling.

The woman stooped and pulled away the chair. That was what Lupin was waiting for. Once rid of the obstacle, he caught Daubrecq a smart kick on the shin with the tip of his patent-leather boot. The result was the same as with the blow which he had given him on the arm. The pain caused a second's apprehension and distraction, of which he at once took advantage to beat down Daubrecq's outstretched hands and to dig his ten fingers into his adversary's throat and neck.

Daubrecq struggled. Daubrecq tried to pull away the hands that were throttling him; but he was beginning to choke and his strength was decreasing.

"Ah, you old monkey!" growled Lupin, forcing him to his knees. "Why don't you shout for help? How frightened you'd be of a scandal!"

At the sound of the fall there came a knocking at the partition on the other side.

"Knock away, knock away!" said Lupin, under his breath. "The curtain's on the stage. This is my business—and what! I've encountered that gorilla . . ."

It did not take him long. The deputy was choking. Lupin stunned him with a blow on the jaw, and all that remained for him to do was to take the woman away and make his escape with her before the alarm was given.

But, when he turned round, he saw that the woman was gone.

Chapter VI

She could not be far. Darting from the box, he set off at a run, regardless of the programme-sellers and check-takers.

On reaching the entrance-lobby, he saw her through an open door, crossing the pavement of the Chaussée d'Antin.

She was stepping into a motor-car when he came up with her.

The door closed behind her.

He seized the handle and tried to pull at it.

But a man jumped up inside and sent his fist flying into Lupin's face, with less skill, but no less force than Lupin had sent his into Daubrecq's face.

Stunned though he was by the blow, he nevertheless had ample time to recognize the man, in a sudden startled vision, and also to recognize, under his chauffeur's disguise, the man who was driving the car. It was the Growler and the Masher, the two men in charge of the boats on the Enghien night, two friends of Gilbert and Vaucheray, in short, two of Lupin's own accomplices.

Had she taken sides with either of them, with a single movement, the victory would have been decided in that one's favor

Three days after the scene at the Vaudeville, Lupin was sitting, dressed like a retired tradesman, in an old overcoat, with a muffler round his neck, on a bench in the Avenue Victor Hugo, at some distance from the Square Lamartine. Victoire had his instructions to pass by that bench at the same hour every morning.

"Yes," he repeated to himself, "the crystal stopper: everything turns on that. . . . Once I get hold of it . . ."

Victoire arrived with her shopping-basket on her arm. He at once noticed her extraordinary agitation and pallor.

"What's the matter?" asked Lupin, rising beside his valet.

She went into a big grocer's, which was full of people, and, turning to him:

"Here," she said, in a voice torn with excitement. "Here's what you've been hunting for."

And, taking something from her basket, she gave it to him.

Lupin stood astounded: in his hand lay the crystal stopper.

"Can it be true? Can it be true?" he muttered, as though the case of the solution had thrown him off his balance.

But the fact remained, visible and palpable. He recognized by its shape, by its size, by the worn gilding of its facets, recognized beyond any possible doubt the crystal stopper which he had seen before. He even remarked a tiny, hardly noticeable little scratch on the stem which he remembered perfectly.

However, while the thing presented all the same characteristics, it possessed no other that seemed out of the way. It was a crystal stopper, that was all. There was no really special mark to distinguish it from other stoppers. There was no sign upon it, no stamp, and, being cut from a single piece, it contained no foreign matter.

"What then?"

And Lupin, receiving a quick insight into the depth of his mistake, What good could the possession of that crystal stopper do him, so long as he was igno-

KITTY DAWNE Doctor of Domestic Happiness

No. 3 Not Enough Mother-in-Law By Lewis Allen

If she has domestic unhappiness," observed Kitty Dawne to her mother, "she is not breaking her heart over it."

The colored maid had ushered a charming young woman into the front room of Kitty's home, which, as became a successful doctor of domestic happiness, was used as her office.

"Are you—I see by your sign that the name is Katherine Dawne—are you that young lady?" asked the caller.

Kitty bowed pleasantly, asked her caller to sit over by her desk and remarked, "I suppose you have seen my queer little advertisement?"

"No, I learned of you through my brother, Mr. Squeers, the real estate broker. He says you are a marvel. But I would like to see your advertisement. He did not mention it."

Quite well Kitty remembered the pompous Mr. Squeers, her first "patient." She picked up a morning paper on her desk and, marking the place in the column of classified advertisements, handed it to her caller, who read aloud:

IS YOUR HOME [illegible]
[illegible]

"Yes," mused the young lady, "my brother was quite right. I think you may be able to help me. I am Mrs. Vincent Barton. My husband is a lawyer. A young lawyer, but fairly successful. We have been married less than a year. I sometimes think both of us were too young for matrimony. It is going to be difficult to quite classify my troubles—" and Mrs. Barton paused as if in doubt just how to proceed.

Kitty smiled happily.

"Mrs. Barton," she said, "tell me the difficulty."

"I hate to believe it," continued Mrs. Barton, "but I can figure it out no other way. Vincent is tired to death of me. I am sure he does not love anyone else, but I feel equally sure he doesn't love me. I cannot believe it is my fault for I am a most dutiful and faithful wife."

"He shows you no signs of affection? On the other hand—"

"No," exclaimed Mrs. Barton, guessing Kitty's question, "he is never cross, never exactly ungentlemanly."

"Where was your home?" asked Kitty.

"Omaha. I met Vincent at the shore here in the East and he is not acquainted in Omaha."

Dragged him in to Kitty, much to his annoyance

"How fortunate," exclaimed Kitty, after she had pursed her pretty lips in deep thought for a moment. "Now listen, Mrs. Barton. I am your old schoolmate from Omaha. I will take my mother's maiden name, 'Kitty Blake.' Can you remember that? I am on here visiting an aunt and looked you up. You will ask me to stay with you and I agree to visit you two days. In this manner perhaps I may secure some correct idea of the situation. That is, if you care enough—"

Mrs. Barton made a gesture of despair and dabbed her eyes with her handkerchief.

"No, I am NOT going to cry, but I DO care. I love Vincent and I believe I do not want to live without him. Come by all means. I have never deceived him—but this will be different."

Late that same afternoon, Kitty, with a traveling bag, called at Mrs. Barton's home. She was in the comfortable living room when Barton came home for dinner. She heard him enter.

"Is that Mr. Barton?" she asked. Mrs. Barton nodded.

Kitty waited but he did not enter the living room.

"He seldom comes in here," explained Mrs. Barton. "He goes to his den until dinner is announced." She went out into the hall and dragged him in to Kitty, much to his annoyance.

Next morning Barton devoted his time to his paper

Kitty was introduced to Barton as "Miss Blake" from Omaha, her "old school friend." He was a somewhat sad-faced young man, but chatted affably with Kitty.

"The heat is rather excessive in here, Mr. Barton, why be so formal? Do not mind me. Put on your [illegible] house coat and slippers."

Barton looked pleased. "If Bertha—er, Mrs. Barton does not object."

"Oh no," said his wife, rather listlessly.

"Er—where are they?"

"I'm sure I don't know," she replied, and made no move to find them.

"Oh well, never mind," he said, but he looked disappointed.

"You know my wife's mother?" he asked Kitty.

"Why—er—slightly, of course," she replied, a bit embarrassed.

"Oh you should know her better, most delightful woman I ever knew. I imagine she does not approve of me, for after one nice visit I've been unable to get her to come on a second time."

"Really, you are most unusual. I always thought mothers-in-law were regarded as a sort of monster—"

"Mr. Barton is too kind and thoughtful to say anything otherwise," said Mrs. Barton lamely.

But through the dinner and into the evening the conversation lagged considerably. Barton excused himself as soon as possible, saying he knew his wife had much rather talk over old school days with "Miss Blake."

At breakfast next morning Barton smiled pleasantly at Kitty, but devoted his time to his paper and, shaking hands with Kitty, expressed the hope of seeing "Miss Blake" again. Then he hurried out.

Mrs. Barton was on the verge of tears when he went. Kitty could see that.

"Well?" asked Mrs. Barton.

"Quite the reverse of 'well' and as near as I can make it out it is [illegible] your fault."

"How can you say that?" exclaimed Mrs. Barton, "when I love Vincent [illegible]"

"Bosh!" snapped Kitty, "you don't know what love is, or how to love. When your mother was here she got out his slippers [illegible] with his house coat, she [illegible] his pipe and cigars and his paper beside his easy chair, she picked the lint off his coat [illegible] tired and she—"

"Miss Dawne," exclaimed Mrs. Barton, "has my husband been to you, too? He [illegible] he told you all that."

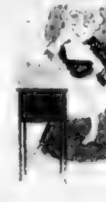
"No, he did not [illegible] No one told me."

"But that is [illegible] mother [illegible] said."

"No, don't say [illegible] You [illegible] your husband [illegible] You should have [illegible] and greeted him [illegible] When he went to [illegible] you should have gone to the door with him, kissed him [illegible] to work too hard, wished him good luck. Handed him his hat and stick. You [illegible] do those things.

"Man is a [illegible] A woman prefers to be beautiful than comfortable. When the man works all day it is his due to be petted when he gets home. What's he slaving for? Just a place to sleep and eat? Why he'd get more cheerful treatment in a nice boarding house. Now you bring your mother back here for a long visit and you need not [illegible] but watch her, watch every move, see how she cares for your husband, attends to his every wish and comfort. Remember it all. My advice, however, is to tell her everything and let her help you. Good-bye."

"Mrs. Barton, do you think you or any other woman is so superior to man that you should be kept in a glass case, and the man should simply admire you as though you were a priceless art treasure [illegible] He comes all the way home to you, are you there? [illegible] better than he that you cannot walk [illegible] to greet him. He holds open doors for you, ties your shoe, waits on you by inches and yet you are no higher grade of human being than he. Why should you not wait on him and love him in a demonstrative way?"



"Not enough mother-in-law. Bertha"

Mrs. Barton could say no more. For the first time her emotions got the better of her and she slumped into a chair and wept.

Kitty got Mrs. Barton's mother's address and wrote the following message:

Mrs. H. B. [illegible] Omaha, Neb.
Please come [illegible] Bertha

It was nearly a month later, before Kitty heard from the Bartons. She was about to send a little note to Mrs. Barton asking about it when Mrs. Barton called. She cried:

"You wonderful little woman!" hugging Kitty, chock [illegible]

"Mother came," she continued, "and I did just as you said, and it wasn't a week before Vincent threw his arms about me when I met him at the door."

The Crystal Stopper

[illegible] of its value? That [illegible] glass had no existence in itself, it counted only through the meaning that attached to it. Before taking it, the thing was to be certain. And how could he tell that, in taking it, in robbing Daubrecq of it, he was not committing a wicked folly?

It was a question which was impossible of solution, but which forced itself upon him with singular directness.

"No blunders!" he said to himself, as he pocketed the stopper. "In this [illegible] business, blunders are fatal."

He had not taken his eyes off Victoire. When turned in a shop-man, she went from counter to counter, among the crowd of customers. She next stood for some little while at the pay-desk. Then [illegible] in front of Lupin.

He whispered her instructions:

"Meet me behind the Place Jansen."

She joined him in an unfrequented street:

"I suppose I'm followed?" she said.

"No," he declared. "I looked carefully. Listen to me. Where did you find the stopper?"

"In the drawer of the table by his bed."

"But we had felt there already."

"Yes; and I did so again this morning. I expect he put it there last night."

"And I expect he'll want to take it from there again," said Lupin.

"Very likely."

"And supposing he finds it gone?"

Victoire looked frightened.

"Answer me," said Lupin. "If he finds it gone, he'll accuse you of taking it, won't he?"

"Certainly."

"Then go and put it back, as fast as you can."

"Oh dear, oh dear!" she moaned. "I hope he won't have had time to find out. Give it to me, quick."

"Here you are," said Lupin.

He felt in the pocket of his overcoat.

"Well," said Victoire, holding out her hand, . . .

"Well," he said, after a moment, "it's gone."

"What?"

"Yes, upon my word, it's gone . . . somebody's taken it from me."

He burst into a peal of laughter, a laughter which this time was free from all bitterness.

Victoire flew out at him:

"Laugh away! . . . Putting me in such a predicament!"

"How can I help laughing? You must confess that it's funny. It's no longer a tragedy that we're acting, but a merry tale, a comic opera, like Pitou in Berry or Jack and the Beanstalk. I must write it when I get a few weeks to myself. The Mysterious Disappearance of the Crystal Stopper."

"Well . . . who has taken it from you?"

"What are you talking about? . . . It has been swept . . . vanished from my pocket: hey presto, begone!"

He gave the old servant a gentle push and, in a more serious tone:

"Go home, Victoire, and don't upset yourself. Of course, some one saw you give me the stopper and took advantage of the crowd in the shop to pick my pocket of it. He only shows that we are watched more closely than I thought and by adversaries of the first rank. But, once more, be easy. Honest men always come by their own. . . . Have you anything else to tell me?"

"Yes. Some one came, yesterday evening, while M. Daubrecq was out. I saw lights reflected upon the trees in the garden."

"The portress's bedroom?"

"The portress was still up."

"Then it was some of those detective-fellows, they are still hunting. I'll see you later, Victoire. . . . You must let me in again."

"What! You want to . . ."

"What do I risk? Your room is on the third floor. Daubrecq suspects nothing."

"But the others—"

"The others? If it was to their interest to lay me a trap, they'd have tried before now. I'm in their way, that's all. They're not afraid of me. So till later, Victoire, at two o'clock exactly."

One further surprise awaited Lupin. In the evening, his old nurse told him that, having opened the door of the pedestal cupboard out of curiosity, she had found the crystal stopper there again.

Lupin was no longer to be excited by these contradictions, incidents. He simply said to himself:

"So it's been brought back. And the person who brought it back and who opens the house by some unexplained [illegible] is selected as I did, that the stopper ought not to disappear. And yet Daubrecq, who knows that he is being spied upon by his very bedroom, has once more left the stopper in a drawer, as though he attached no importance to it at all. Now what is one to make of that? . . ."

Though Lupin did not make anything of it, nevertheless he could not escape certain arguments, certain associations of ideas that gave him the same vague foretaste of light which one receives on approaching the outlet of a tunnel.

"It is inevitable, as the case stands," he thought, "that there must soon be an encounter between myself and the others. From that moment, I shall be master of the situation."

Five days passed, during which Lupin did not glean the slightest particular. On the sixth day, Daubrecq received a visit, in the small hours, from a gentleman, [illegible] to the deputy, who, like his colleagues, dragged himself at his feet in despair and, when all was done, handed him twenty thousand francs.

Two more days and then, one night, posted on the landing of the second floor, Lupin heard the cracking of a door, the front-door, as he perceived, which led from out of the hall into the garden. In the darkness, he distinguished or rather divined the presence of two persons, who climbed the stairs and stopped on the last floor, outside Daubrecq's bedroom.

What were they doing there? It was not possible to enter the room, because Daubrecq bolted his door every night. Then what were they hoping?

Mentally, a [illegible]-work of some kind was being performed, as Lupin discovered from the dull sound of rubbing against the door. Then words, uttered almost beneath a whisper, reached him:

"Is it all right?"

"Yes, quite, but all the same, we'd better put it off till to-morrow, because . . ."

Lupin did not hear the end of the sentence. The men were already groping their way downstairs. The hall-door was closed, very gently, and then the gate.

"It's curious, say what one likes," thought Lupin. "Here is a house in which Daubrecq carefully conceals his rascalities and his [illegible], not without good reason against spies, and [illegible] and out as much [illegible] Victoire lets in the portress [illegible] the accessories of the police, that's well and good, but who is playing false in the people's favor? Are we to suppose that they are acting alone? But what is [illegible]? And how will they know their way about?"

In the afternoon during Daubrecq's absence, he examined the door of the first-floor bedroom. At last, at the very first glance, he understood: One of the lower panels had been skilfully cut out and was only held in place by invisible tacks. The people, therefore, who had done this work were the same who had acted at his two places, in the Rue Matignon and the Rue Chateaubriand.

He also found that the work dated back to an earlier period and that, as in this case, the opening had been prepared before[illegible], in anticipation of favorable circumstances or of some immediate necessity.

The day did not seem long to Lupin. Knowledge was at hand. Not only would he know the manner in which his adversaries employed those little openings, which were apparently unemployable, since they did not allow a person to reach the upper bolts, but he would know who the ingenious and energetic adversaries were with whom he repeatedly and inevitably found himself confronted.

One incident annoyed him. In the evening, Daubrecq, who had complained of feeling tired at dinner, came home at ten o'clock and, contrary to his usual custom, pushed the bolts of the hall-door. In that case, how would the others be able to carry out their plan and go to Daubrecq's room?

Lupin waited for an hour after Daubrecq put out his light. Then he went down to the deputy's study, opened one of the windows ajar and returned to the third floor and fixed his rope-ladder so that, in case of need, he could reach the study without passing through the house. Lastly, he resumed his post on the second-floor landing.

He did not have to wait long. An hour earlier than on the previous night, some one tried to open the hall door. When the attempt failed, a few minutes of absolute si-

THE statement made in a work of art not long published recently, that study of the anthropoid ape is punctilio of value in surgery when the female sex is concerned, is, by the matter of the statement, a comment on the close relations existing between the simian and the human species. That one is not removed from the other is a statement which perhaps no longer needs to be made, though there are some people who were confused about it. But it is a matter of considerable interest to find how much more apparent are the characteristics of woman than of man.

Yet the statement shows rather to be true upon the very face of it. The changes in the species of the two have not much to do with the actual processes of birth are almost always found among the males. It is the stouter and more adapted male that succeeds in the struggle for existence, the feeble male that goes down. The female is more greatly protected. Man, having to fight the battle of man's difference from all other creatures, has emphasized his humanity, and he is radical and aggressive in that direction. The woman, by nature and by bodily structure a conservative, has retained far more of the body structure of the primitive ancestor of the human race almost as much, indeed, as has the ape.

It was Dr. Havelock Ellis who declared that the noble form that woman was still at least equally a quadruped was the greatest single triumph of the nineteenth century. But suppose it will be remembered the devil. Either it or it was a beneficial appliance because it helps to keep in the vertical position organs which should be horizontal. Most of "the ills to which female flesh is heir," is the tragedy to the fact that the whole internal mass of the viscera does not sufficiently strong to support the body in its upright attitude. In man the body muscles are more powerful and the weight of the organs is less consequently he is freed largely from many of the difficulties that attack the gentler sex. It is notable that among sculptors of the day by among the Greek —have presented the female form as though it were far more robustly developed and far less evidently peaks-like than modern photography shows to be actually the case.

How the natural muscular corset is ened by artificial corsets

Both men and women have a corset of muscle lining the abdomen, but the corset in man is stronger than woman's and supports the organs better, therefore he has less need of an artificial corset. He is in fact a better biped. Nevertheless there are many men whose protruding abdomens prove that they would be far healthier and better looking to-day had they worn a good pair of straight front corsets in their youth.

lence followed. And Lupin was beginning to think that the men had abandoned the idea, when he gave a sudden start. Some one had passed, without the least sound to interrupt the silence. He would not have known it, so utterly were the thing's steps deadened by the stair carpet, if the baluster rail, which he himself held in his hand, had not quivered. Some one was coming up.

And, as the ascent continued, Lupin became aware of the uncanny feeling that he heard nothing more than before. He knew, because of the rail, that a thing was coming and he could count the number of steps climbed by each vibration of the rail; but no other indication gave him that dim sensation of presence which we feel in distinguishing movements which we do not see, in perceiving sounds which we do not hear. And yet a blacker shadow ought to have taken shape in the shadows; and something ought, at least, to modify the quality of the silence. No, he might well have believed that there was no one there.

And Lupin, in spite of himself and against the evidence of his reason, ended by believing it, for the rail no longer moved and he thought that he might have been the sport of an illusion.

And this lasted a long time. He hesitated, not knowing what to do, not knowing what to suppose. But an odd circumstance impressed him. A clock struck two. He recognized the chime of Daubrecq's clock. And the chime was that of a clock from which one is not separated by the obstacle of a door.

Lupin slipped down the stairs and went to the door. It was closed, but there was a space on the left, at the bottom, expert left by the removal of the little panel.

He listened. Daubrecq, at that moment, turned in his bed, and he breathing, was resumed, evenly and a little stertorously. And Lupin plainly heard the sound of rustling garments. Beyond a doubt the thing was there, fumbling and feeling through the clothes which Daubrecq had put by the bed.

"Now," thought Lupin, "we shall learn something. But how the deuce did the beggar get in? He locked and bolted the door, and even the door? But, I see, why did he make the mistake of having a car?"

Not for a second a man like Lupin, an amount explained only by the uncanny feeling which the whole adventure produced in him. For a second did he suspect the very simple truth which was about to be revealed to him. Continuing his way down, he crouched on one of the bottom steps of the staircase thus placing himself between the door of the bedroom and the hall-door, on the road which Daubrecq's enemy must inevitably take in order to join his accomplices.

He questioned the darkness with an unspeakable anguish. He was on the point of unmasking that enemy of Daubrecq—who was also his own adversary. He would thwart his plans. And the latter crept out from Daubrecq he would take advantage of his room, while Daubrecq slept and while the accomplices lurking behind the hall-door or outside the garden-gate vainly awaited their leader's return.

The Crystal Stopper

And ... [illegible] ... and every nerve on edge, he strove to discern the ... [illegible] ... thing that was coming toward him. He suddenly realized it when only a few yards away. He himself, hidden ... [illegible] ... could not be seen. And what he saw ... [illegible] ... very vague ... [illegible] ... step by step with infinite precautions, holding on to each separate baluster.

"Whom the devil have I to do with?" said Lupin to himself, while his heart thumped inside his chest.

The catastrophe was hastened. A careless movement on Lupin's part was observed by the stranger, who stopped short. Lupin was afraid lest the other should turn back and take to flight. He sprang at the adversary and was stupefied at encountering nothing but space and knocking against the stair-rail without seizing the form which he saw. But he at once rushed forward, crossed the best part of the hall and caught up his antagonist just as he was reaching the door opening on the garden.

There was a cry of fright, answered by other cries on the further side of the door.

"Oh, ... [illegible] ... what's this?" muttered Lupin, whose arms ... [illegible] ... in the dark, round a little tiny, trembling, whimpering thing.

Suddenly understanding, he stood for a moment motionless and dismayed, at a loss what to do with his conquered prey. But the others were shouting and stamping outside the door. Thereupon, dreading lest Daubrecq should wake up, he slipped the little thing under his jacket, against his chest, stopped the crying with his handkerchief rolled into a ball and hurried up the three flight of stairs.

"Here," he said to Victoire, who woke with a start. "I've brought you the indomitable chief of our enemies, the Hercules of the ... [illegible]. Have you a feeding-bottle about you?"

He put down in the ... [illegible] ... child ... [illegible] ... seven years of age, the tiniest ... [illegible] ... fellow in a ... jersey and a knitted woollen cap, whose ... [illegible] ... exquisitely pretty features were streaked with the tears that streamed from the terrified eyes.

"Where did you pick that up?" asked Victoire, aghast.

"At the foot of the stairs, as it was coming out of Daubrecq's bedroom," replied Lupin, ... [illegible] ... in the hope that the child had brought a booty of some kind from that room.

Victoire was stirred to pity.

"Poor little dear! ... [illegible] ... he's trying not to cry! ... Oh, saints above, his hands are ... [illegible] ... Don't be afraid, sonnie, we shan't hurt you ... the gentleman's all right."

"Yes," said Lupin, "the gentleman's quite all right, but there's another very wicked gentleman who'll wake up if they go on making such a rumpus outside the hall-door. Do you hear them, Victoire?"

"Who is it?"

"The satellites of our young Hercules, the ... [illegible] ... leader's gang."

"Well ... [illegible]" stammered Victoire, ... [illegible]

"Well, as I don't want to be caught in ... [illegible] ... I shall start by clearing out. Are you coming, Hercules?"

He rolled the child in a blanket, so that only the head remained outside, gagged its mouth as gently as possible and made Victoire fasten it to his shoulders.

"See, Hercules, we're having a game. You never thought you'd find gentlemen to play pick-a-back with you at three o'clock in the morning! Come, ... [illegible] ... let's fly away! You don't get giddy, I hope?"

He stepped across the window-ledge and set foot on one of the rungs of the ladder. He was in the garden in ... [illegible].

He had never ceased hearing and now heard more plainly still the blows that were being struck upon the front door. ... [illegible] ... that Daubrecq was not ... [illegible] ... by so violent a ... [illegible].

"If I don't put a stop to this, they'll ... [illegible] ... everything," he said to himself.

He ... [illegible] ... in an angle of the ... [illegible] ... visible in the darkness, and measured the distance between himself and the gate. The gate was open. To his right he saw the steps on the top of which the people were flinging themselves about; to his left, the building occupied by the portress.

The woman had come out of her lodge and was standing near the people, entreating them:

"Oh, ... [illegible] ... He'll come ... [illegible]"

"Capital! ... [illegible]"

... [illegible] ... of these is well. By ... [illegible] ... what a plucky ... [illegible]!"

He rushed across to her and, taking her by the scruff of the neck, hissed:

"Go and tell them I've got the child. ... They can come and fetch it at my place, Rue Chateaubriand."

A little further in the avenue stood a taxi which Lupin presumed to be engaged by the gang. Speaking authoritatively, as though he were one of the accomplices, he stepped into the cab and told the man to drive him home.

"Well," he said to the child, "that wasn't much of a shake up, was it? ... What would you say to going bye-bye on the gentleman's bed?"

As his servant, Achille, was asleep, Lupin made the little chap comfortable and stroked his hair nicely for him.

The child seemed numbed. His poor face was as though petrified into a stiff expression made up, at one and the same time, of fear and the wish not to show fear, of the longing to scream and a pitiful effort not to scream.

"Cry, my pet, cry," said Lupin. "It'll do you good to cry."

The child did not cry, but the voice was so kind that he relaxed his tense muscles and, now that his eyes were calmer and his mouth less contorted, Lupin, who was examining him closely, found something that he recognized, an undoubted resemblance.

This again confirmed certain facts which he suspected and which he had for some time been linking in his mind.

Indeed, unless he was mistaken, the position was becoming very different and he would soon assume the direction of events. After that ...

A ring at the bell followed, at once, by two others, sharp ones.

"Hullo!" said Lupin to the child. "Here's mummy come to fetch you. Don't move."

He ran and opened the door.

A woman entered wildly.

"My son!" she screamed. "My son! Where is he?"

"In my room," said Lupin.

Without asking more, thus proving that she knew the way, he rushed to the bedroom.

"Just as I thought," muttered Lupin. "The youngish woman with the gray hair. Daubrecq's friend and enemy."

He walked to the window and looked through the curtains. Two men were striding up and down the opposite pavement, the Growler and the Masher.

"And they're not even hiding themselves," he continued. "That's a good sign. They consider that they can't do without me any longer and that they've got to obey the governor. There remains the pretty lady with the gray hair. That will be more difficult. It's you and me now, mummy!"

He found the mother and the boy clasped in each other's arms, and the mother, in a great state of alarm, her eyes moist with tears, was saying:

"You're not hurt? You're sure? Oh, how frightened you must have been, my poor little ... [illegible]!"

"A fine little fellow," said Lupin.

She did not reply. She was feeling the child's jersey, as Lupin had done, no doubt to see if he had succeeded in his nocturnal mission, and she questioned him in a whisper.

"No, mummy," said the child. "No, really."

She kissed him fondly and petted him, until, in a little while, the child, worn out with fatigue and excitement, fell asleep. She remained leaning over him for a long time. She herself seemed very much worn out and in need of rest.

Lupin did not disturb her contemplation. He looked at her anxiously, with an attention which she did not perceive, and he noticed the wider rings round her eyes and the deeper marks of wrinkles. Yet he considered her handsomer than he had thought, with that touching beauty which habitual suffering gives to certain faces that are more human, more sensitive than others.

She wore so sad an expression that, in a ... [illegible] ... sympathy, he went up to her and said:

"I do not know what your plans are, but, whatever they may be, you stand in need of help. You cannot succeed alone."

"I am not alone."

"Those two men outside? I know them. They're no good. I beseech you, make use of me. You remember the other evening, at the theatre, in the private box? You were on the point of speaking. Do not hesitate ... [illegible]"

Cooperation Among Churches by Elbert Hubbard

At the recent Annual Presbytery, attention was called to the fact that over two thousand Presbyterian Churches in America are without pastors.

This was regarded as a very lamentable condition. There are people, however, who see in these things cause for encouragement.

Also, comes President Waters of the State Agricultural College at Manhattan, Kansas, making a statement to the effect that in Illinois there are seventeen hundred abandoned churches, one thousand in Missouri, about the same number in Iowa and fully as many in the State of Kansas.

Dr. Waters argues that this does not necessarily mean that the country is becoming irreligious, but the fact seems to be that we are demanding a higher standard of preaching than ever before.

Mankind has had a surfeit of theological discussion. Questions of exegesis do not interest us. Dogmatic oratory concerning a world to come no longer holds our attention. We want modern economics, not ancient hagiology. We want to know how to be well and happy, here and now, and the man who can help us live will be well paid. We can die without assistance.

Two thousand Presbyterian churches without pastors

As mankind increases in intelligence, aspiration, ambition and desire, a higher quality of ministry is required.

The pew dictates to the pulpit what the pulpit shall preach.

The pew has advanced, but the pulpit often has stood still.

The one big subject before the world to-day is that of sociology—how we can better the condition of men and women now and here. Happiness is the first thing desired, not goodness.

Happy people are those at work. Also, we might say that people engaged in useful occupations are good people. There is no contentment without congenial and useful occupation.

A religion that interests itself largely in man's condition after death has been outlived and is now outworn.

Following the very able and good-tempered discussion by President Waters, comes ex-Governor Hoch, also of Kansas, who urges the different denominations in rural districts to get together and consolidate. Small places of worship should be turned over to their respective villages or towns as schoolhouses, public libraries or reading rooms.

Ex-Governor Hoch cites the case of one particular church in the State of Maine that, by a vote of it congregation, duly deeded the property over to the State to be used as a kindergarten.

In Maine they turned one into a kindergarten

Instead of three, four, or five struggling churches in a community, with preachers on half-pay, and necessarily repressed and depressed, ex-Governor Hoch urges that these churches combine on a common sense basis and secure one man as a preacher and pastor and pay him enough to put him on an easy financial footing.

Then interest the entire town in the subject of music, and a worldly well-being, and so make the church a civic center as well as a religious institution.

Combine 3 or 4 struggling churches on a solid footing

We must get rid of our prejudices, and our faith must take the form of a belief in our neighbors.

Denominations are founded first on personal aversions. And ex-Governor Hoch and Dr. Waters think the time has arrived for eliminating quibble and combining for the good of ourselves, of humanity and of posterity.

1905; Guinevere's Lover (Continued from page 7)

in the county—but this room does not look a suitable surrounding for so fragile and dainty a lady as you, Mrs. Bohun!"

"It is far away from everyone, that is why I like it," I answered, and I moved back into the turret, carrying a lamp.

Here Letitia began asking Sir Hugh's advice. Ought we to have tapestry or paneling, or leave it quite plain?

He mused for a minute, as though he were balancing things.

"I think you must leave it as it is," he said at last, "unless the tapestry could be very good, and it is so difficult to find."

"I am glad that is your conclusion," I answered him, "because I am as likely to get paneling as tapestry—and the moon as either."

"Guinevere, if you only knew how to manage Humphrey!" my sister interrupted. "I would get anything I wanted out of him."

"I am not clever," I said, "and the price might make the thing distasteful."

Letitia went back to my bedroom for an instant and surveyed the room from the door critically. I had put the lamp on the table and stood back in the shadow, and Sir Hugh said to me in a low voice. "You told me yesterday you hated all old things, and yet you choose this, the most ancient part of the house, for your own suite. Are you not a contradiction?"

"It may be a choice of evils," I returned. "I did not say I cared for these gloomy rooms."

The interest deepened in his eyes, and he was just going to say something, and then he checked himself. I do not know why.

Letitia at this moment had the intelligence to remember that Humphrey might wake and might possibly be annoyed at our absence; so she started for the door, and then called airily:

"Come, we must descend again and brave the depths."

Sir Hugh followed her and I propped open the door, leaving the lamp. The faint rays were not, however, sufficient to light beyond the first turn of the turret steps, and we were in pitch darkness when we all reached the next floor. I had kept beyond the touch of Sir Hugh's hand, though he turned and waited for me. I was disturbed, which was very foolish of me.

Letitia, who was first, fumbled at the catch of the little library door, but failed to open it, and in those few seconds in the black darkness I could feel that Sir Hugh came nearer to me. There was that indescribable sense of propinquity—it seemed as if I felt his being absorb me—this stranger with whom I had only exchanged a few ordinary sentences. A trembling seized me, and now, as I sit here in the gloomy paneled room with the light of the lamp coming from under the shade in a clear-cut path, I analyze everything, as is my wont. One gets into foolish habits, living as I do away from the world, and with every real feeling turned inward and hidden from one's daily companions. What was that unknown emotion which came to me in the dark?

When Letitia did finally open the door, and the light from the little library blazed on to our faces, Sir Hugh looked the same, but my sister exclaimed:

"How pale you are, Guinevere! Did you see a ghost as we came down the stairs?"

And I answered:

"Yes—I did."

Humphrey was still asleep and I sat down to the piano again and crashed a loud chord that he might wake naturally, and so would not be unusually ill-tempered at being caught napping. Sir Hugh raised an eyebrow and there was a whimsical expression in his face as though he had taken in the meaning of the scene. It hurt me. I never let anyone see the barrenness of my life, or pity me. I am considered a stupid and disagreeable woman generally, but not an unhappy one.

"Mrs. Bohun! Oh! A person quite impossible to get on with," as one of the ladies in India was heard to say.

Humphrey woke and glanced round furtively. I watched him, but, seeing Letitia talking to our guest, he got up, gave himself the air of a person who has never slept at all, and joined them.

"As I was saying—" he said, and went on

Get a California Farm Be Independent in the San Joaquin Valley

There is no other similar area under the Stars and Stripes where earnest effort will bring such tremendous returns. You go into a finished country needing only intelligent work to bring fortune—independence to you and yours.

Go now and buy this land. It is settling fast and the prices are steadily advancing. You still can buy small farms of ten, twenty or forty acres, with water, for from $125 to $150 an acre. This same land, planted to alfalfa, will sell for from $200 to $300. Can you make money faster? But, once established, you won't sell. This alfalfa will bring you $40 to $70 an acre if you sell the hay. If you feed it to dairy cattle, hogs and chickens, your returns will be at least $100 an acre.

And fruit—for this is the home of fruit—is making fortunes every year.

Go out and investigate. The Santa Fe sells round-trip homeseekers' tickets to California and elsewhere in the Southwest on the first and third Tuesday of each month—only $65 from Chicago.

1905: Guinevere's Lover

with the subject they had been discussing before he dozed: and Sir Hugh turned and met my eye, and there was such an exquisite twinkle in his I had to look down at once—I could not enjoy with anyone a ridiculous aspect of my husband.

Then Sir Hugh said it was awfully late, and he must be going, and Humphrey protested it could not be more than half past nine o'clock, as we had only just come up from dinner, and then he saw by the clock that it was quarter to eleven, and he frowned. So Sir Hugh made his adieus, with a warm handshake for Letitia—so glad he had been to see her again.

I came last of all.

"Good-night, Mrs. Bohun," he said, and he looked so strangely into my eyes. "Your husband has promised to come over and dine with me next week. I shall be having a few people, but I hope you will let me come and see you before then?"

I said I should be glad, and he went. And then Letitia came up into my room with me and sat down by the wood fire.

"Guinevere," she said, "Humphrey is failing. He is growing into an old man, my dear. What age is he now, I can't remember?"

"He is sixty-one—he will be sixty-two in the autumn."

"He was such a splendid dasher twenty years ago, when I first knew him—but of course it is ridiculous now, when one thinks of you— You look about twenty—and a maiden at that!"

"Well! I don't much know what being married is—or life—or love—or anything which makes a woman. I expect I look like an old maid!" and I tried to smile.

"You look as if you would have a thrillingly interesting story, my little sister. I shall return and see how you are getting on again soon; only don't fall in love with Hugh Dremont. Mrs. Dalison is coming to his party for the races next week."

"Who is Mrs. Dalison?" I asked, unpleasantly interested, I do not know why.

"An—old friend—of his," Letitia said, and then she kissed me lightly and went off to bed.

CHAPTER III

THE races at Redwood are very late this year. They have them usually in Easter week, but a great supporter of the hunt died just then and they were postponed until the twenty-seventh of April. They will be the same, I expect, as what I am accustomed to in regimental races. I suppose they are amusing if you know all the horses. Humphrey used actually to ride in steeplechases when we were first married, but he has not done so for more than ten years. They are a great excitement to Algernon, who is mad about horses. He rides wonderfully well, my tall son, and his great pleasure is to give me hints upon the subject.

"You'll never really make a horsewoman, mother," he often tells me. "You look extremely decent on a gee because you ain't fat, but you have no go about you. I believe you'd much rather jog along on your quiet old Jenny Wren than come with father and me, even if he'd let you hunt."

And I am afraid this is true. Long ago I thought I should adore hunting, but Humphrey would not hear of it. Women were in the way in the field, he said. So I was early discouraged, and then in India and at Bath, I had not the chance—but I do love to jog along on my dear Jenny Wren. She is a bright bay thoroughbred, with a perfect mouth and perfect manners.

Humphrey does not mind what he spends upon horses, and Algernon has always had the best of ponies. Anything to do with hunting and riding they are at one about, but on most other subjects there are jars. Algernon is afraid of his father—and no wonder.

Humphrey intends him to be a soldier and he rather likes the idea of going into the old regiment. Humphrey was such a very great personage in it, the hero for a hundred fights—in love and war.

Algernon is really a splendid specimen for thirteen, and there is not a touch of me in him, except that his eyes are gray—Humphrey's are brown. He is going to be allowed to go to the races, and is longing for the time when he may ride in them himself.

Minton Dremont is a splendid place, but not very old. It was built in George II's time—the really ancient house was pulled down then.

The neighborhood think it is a dreadful pity Sir Hugh is not married, because his cousin, who comes after him, is a wretched,

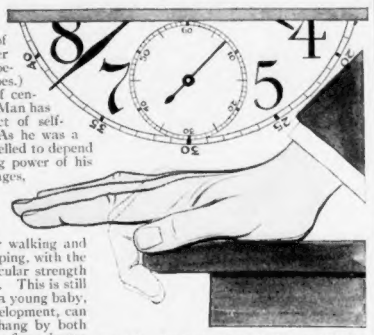
Can You Hold Your Hand Out STRAIGHT?



MANY thousands of years have elapsed since the ancestors of Man lived in trees. (It is never to be forgotten that though ape-like forms, they were not apes.) Yet, in spite of these tens of centuries that have passed by, Man has not yet forgotten the instinct of self-preservation in the forest. As he was a tailless creature, he was compelled to depend for his safety on the grasping power of his hands and feet. For many ages, however, he had gradually been going on the ground more and more and in the trees less and less so that his feet became more adapted for walking and his hands exclusively for grasping, with the result that the grip and muscular strength of his hands became immense. This is still most powerfully evidenced in a young baby, which, without muscular development, can within a few days of birth hang by both hands to a stick for as much as five minutes at a time and by one hand only for two or three, a task beyond the power of any adult except an athlete and gymnast.

Try this. See how many minutes you can keep your hand from grasping the table-edge

But a fact which is still more remarkable is that to the present day there is not one of us that can hold his hand open without discomfort, and absolutely no one whose hand will stay open at all unless the will is exerted to that end. Try it! Hold your hand open for three minutes by the watch and see how tired you will be! Lay your hand on the table, the palm on the wood, the fingers over the edge and see how, in spite of yourself, they will curve round and grasp it! Look at the hand of a sleeping person and think if the fingers are ever shown to be out straight!

The hand at rest takes the shape of a hook, which is its best substitute

When the anatomy of the hand is taken up, it will be found that on the palm and on the under side of the fingers are numbers of nerves sensitive to touch, which respond as readily as the nerves of the eye do to color or the nerves of the ear drum to sound. These were the principal protection of our tree-living ancestors, for an immediate clutch at a branch was necessary in rapid travel in the lower branches of great forest trees. The sensitiveness is being lost, but it is being lost slowly. Yet, even to-day, we can no more prevent responding to the stimulation of the sense of touch in our hands than to the sensation of light in the eye or sound in the ear.

Disregarding the thumb, the human hand is really nothing more than an adjustable hook. It is at rest only when in the position of a hook. When anyone loses a hand the best substitute is a stout metal hook.

The Criminal Who Wouldn't "Psych"

When Juggles had been locked up, Augustus addressed the chief:

"You must admit that psychic science is superior to what you call deduction. Only a psychist would have shown the suspect's guilt by his constant use of the word 'breakfast.'"

"Why," said the chief, "Juggles has been yelling 'breakfast' all day. He hasn't had anything to eat since we arrested him yesterday. He hollers 'breakfast' every two seconds till he makes himself a nuisance in the jail. He'll yell for a cup of cocoa, bread and bacon and eggs for a minute at a time, but he'll whistle for his breakfast till he confesses."

This seemed to me to throw a new light on the table I had made out, and their significance appeared rather physical than psychical, but Augustus appeared content.

"We are dealing with a criminal of greater psychic depth than I had supposed," began Augustus, "but his wily references to 'breakfast' cannot deceive the trained psychist. Juggles is guilty. An innocent man would have thought more of the crime of which he stood accused and less of ham and eggs."

As Augustus was continuing in this vein, a policeman burst into the room and rushed up to the chief.

"Release Juggles," he said.

"Release Juggles!" said the chief; "have they found the real criminal?"

"There was none," answered the policeman. "Worthington Woodberry had a passion for eating raw turnips. His family were ashamed of his low habit, and he dared not be seen buying one. So he visited Juggles' farm, pulled up a turnip, took it home under his coat and began to eat it on the roof of his house. Hearing a footstep, he started, fearing discovery, and fell into his garden, being instantly killed by the fall. The turnip, with one pathetic bite out of it, fell by his side. I have discovered an eye-witness of the fall—old Miss Gooseberry, who lives across the road."

Slowly the chief went to release the howling Juggles, whose cries of "Breakfast!" rang through the jail.

I looked at Augustus.

"Psychology never fails," said Augustus to me. "This man Juggles may be innocent of this particular crime, but I know from studying the tables of his replies, I absolutely know that some time or another he has ended a human life by—as you, in your vulgar way, might remark—by copping some gink on the bean with a turnip."

As we slowly walked homeward we were passed by a man running like a crazy man.

It was Juggles, headed no doubt for the nearest ham-and-eggery.

1905; Guinevere's Lover

sickly creature, with three consumptive sons. I wonder why he does not—Letitia says he could have had any woman in England that he wished, he is so rich and has such a prestige— Who is this Mrs. Dalison, I wonder, and why did Letitia speak about her in that tone of voice? I hate to think ugly, sordid things like Humphrey always insinuates, about people, but I suppose it is natural for much-run-after bachelors to have some safe consolation.

I cannot understand what is the matter with me lately. I do not seem to be able to settle to anything. I am sitting now in my little turret room, looking out of the west window, my writing pad is on my knee, and the sun is getting low. I have to drive at three o'clock every day because the Victoria horses have to be exercised. Humphrey will not hear of a motor—and I came in at tea-time—that duty done—and have been up here ever since—I think I will go for a ride. My maid will be disgusted at having to get me changed again—but Algernon will be enchanted (he shall come with me), and we will have a gallop over the turf.

Hall Caine's New Serial

More Standard Oil Letters

¶ In the November Hearst's Magazine the plain truth is unveiled in the interests of better government. The "hand-in-hand" methods existing between Standard Oil and officials in Congress are clearly disclosed.

¶ Letters written in black and white by the guilty are reproduced without regard to whom the truth hits. There are startling truths about Roosevelt, Archbold, Penrose, Senators and Judges. You will be interested in knowing these things—and surprised, perhaps—to learn the facts. The coupon below will bring them to you with the great serial.

"The Woman Thou Gavest Me"

¶ By Hall Caine, the work of a master. It's the story of Mary sacrificed as a young girl to the social ambitions of a reckless father. But not willing to have her own life wrecked, as her good mother's was, Mary sees the truth at last and rebels against a marriage custom that requires such slavish servitude.

¶ In the very first chapter you will be fascinated by the life story of this beautiful young girl. You will begin to love her—and want to follow her to the end of the journey. Hall Caine has written a great novel in "The Woman Thou Gavest Me." Signing and mailing the coupon below, today, will bring Hearst's for 3 months at a 45% saving.
